Bituminous Miners Quit Pits in Total Shutdown

100,000 Joining 338,000 Already Idle; Miss Perkins Hopes for Settlement

By the Associated Press.

New York (Friday), May 5.—More soft coal miners at midnight began leaving their pits in a cumulative national walkout—the greatest in 17 years—because of the collapse yesterday of two months of negotiations between the United Mine Workers and Appalachian operators.

The eight-State Appalachian area itself has been shut down since April 1, with 338,000 miners idle.

The failure to reach an agreement for that section of the industry automatically effectuated earlier contingent orders for a walkout of an additional 100,000 in the 18 bituminous States outside that area—today in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and western Kentucky, and tonight in the rest of the soft-coal belt.

Miss Perkins Hopeful

[In Washington Secretary Perkins said "there is hope" that the coal strike situation may be solved in conferences in New York Friday afternoon. After conferring with President Roosevelt on what she said were "routine matters," she expressed the opinion that the coal situation had not reached a final impasse.—Editor's note.]

Mayor LaGuardia, who had expressed concern at the already lowering supply of coal for operating New York City's rapid transit system, announced immediately that effective tomorrow the two biggest lines—the Interborough Rapid Transit and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit—would reduce their operating services by 25 per cent and that the third, city-owned line, might have to follow suit soon.

Threatens Use of Oil

"Now, damn it all," he cried, "the life of the people of this city is concerned and we expect some cooperation. And if we don't get it we will have to protect ourselves and we intend to do so.

"I serve notice on all people involved in the coal situation—and this is no idle talk—that we will start to equip our furnaces with oil-burning appliances, as we learned a lesson—we cannot depend on any one kind of fuel."

Alarmed Over Fair

His alarm was caused by the fact that subways here carry millions daily to jobs they could not otherwise reach, and also because of the visitors arriving for the New York World's Fair.

It appeared, meanwhile, that not only the bituminous fields might be thrown out of operation. Concurrent negotiations between the union and anthracite operators had produced no sign of an early agreement. The old contract, which they have sought thus far in vain to renew, expired April 30 and has been operating on a single week's extension. When that extension ends on the week-end, the hour of decision as to anthracite must come.

Congressmen Blush At Photos of 44 Nude WPA Models

By the United Press.

Congressmen who, in closed session, inspected two albums of pictures of 44 nude female models for Works Progress Administration artists, insisted last night that the shock they received had nothing to do with their adjourning the WPA inquiry until Monday.

The committee members blushed when asked about the photographs. Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, observed cryptically that "the evidence seemed verbatim enough."

H. Ralph Burton, investigator for the committee, said that the albums, labeled "A—K" and "L—Z," were kept for the sake of convenience. If an artist needed a model, he explained, he could consult the albums and avoid guesswork about what she was going to look like.

Roosevelts to Greet Nicaraguan President and Wife at Station; Large Military Display Arranged

By Edward T. Folliard

The most dazzling welcome ever accorded a foreign visitor to Washington awaits Gen. Anastasio Somoza, President of Nicaragua, today.

Mindful of the cordial and spectacular receptions for President Roosevelt in Montevideo, Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro in 1936, and in consonance with the "Good Neighbor" policy of the Western Hemisphere, the American Government is prepared to greet the Nicaraguan strong man with all the pomp that is possible in a capital city where other visitors often have noted Jeffersonian simplicity.

President Roosevelt, having arranged himself to greet President Somoza at Union Station, late yesterday authorized heads of Federal departments and agencies on or near Pennsylvania avenue and Constitution avenue to excuse employes from work between 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. today so that they may witness the parade.

President Somoza and Senora de Somoza, with their entourage, are scheduled to arrive at Union Station at 11:20 a. m. From that moment until they enter the White House grounds at noon, they will move through a lane of soldiers, sailors and marines.

A 21-gun salute will boom outside the terminal, three service bands will serenade them, a troop of Cavalry and 30 armored tanks will escort them on the ground, and 10 "flying fortresses" and 42 pursuit planes will roar a welcome from the skies.

Five thousand officers and enlisted men, 750 policemen and 400 fire-

Harrison Tells C. of C. Deficit Should End

Predicts Removal Of Taxes That Are Business Deterrents

Declaring that the credit of the United States must be preserved, Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, last night told business leaders of 46 States that "it is time to flash the red light" on continuing Treasury deficits.

He predicted, at the same time, that the present session of Congress would enact new corporation taxes which would remove deterrents to business, thus encouraging private industry to increase employment and adding to consumer purchasing power. An effort will be made, he revealed, to work out corporation levies which will make revenues from this source more stable.

Harrison spoke at the annual dinner of the United States Chamber of Commerce. The dinner concluded the chamber's twenty-seventh annual meeting here.

Pay Act Repeal Urged

Other highlights were:

The chamber, at its concluding session, adopted resolutions demanding repeal of the wage-hour law, the silver purchase act, and the power to issue $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks, opposing the export cotton subsidy plan and the Borah-O'Mahoney Federal licensing bill, and urging the overhauling of Federal tax laws in the interest of business recovery, replacement of the Works Progress Administration with a differ-

Mrs. Ickes Says She Is Expecting Baby in September

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, 26-year-old wife of the Secretary of the Interior, last night set speculation at rest with the admission she expected "another New Dealer" in the family in September.

Ickes himself, pestered by newsmen at his conference yesterday, replied to questions about the rumored event, "I have hopes." The subject was broached after Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, dropped a hint at a Chamber of Commerce dinner Wednesday night.

"I'm glad he's so intimately interested in me," said Ickes, informed that the Missourian's remark precipitated the questioning.

"What we need," he added, without losing his good humor, "is a little more freedom from the press."

Secretary Ickes, 65, took the former Miss Jane Dahlman, 25, of Milwaukee, as his second wife in a Dublin ceremony on May 24, 1938. He is the father of three children by his first wife, who was killed in an automobile accident in 1935.

Public Health Milk Code for D. C. Attacked

Frank's Proposal Hit By Seal; Monopoly Charge Is Hurled

By James D. Secrest.

A recommendation that the District adopt the uniform milk code promulgated by the United States Public Health Service led to a spirited clash yesterday toward the end of the third day of the House sub-committee milk investigation.

Leslie C. Frank, senior sanitary engineer of the Public Health Service, aroused Corporation Counsel Seal and John S. Barbour, counsel for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association, when he criticized some of the local health department regulations as unnecessary in the interest of public health.

At the same time Frank testified that the 14-cent-a-quart price for first grade milk in Washington is close to the average for the Nation of cities of 500,000 population or over and under the mid-Atlantic average.

Monopoly Charged

Other developments were:

Dr. Reid R. Ashworth, chief food inspector of the Health Department, testified that neutralizers were found in 1936 in the cream of Thompson's Dairy and the Fairfax Dairy and in that of Richfield Dairy last March.

B. B. Derrick, secretary treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers, charged Sefton Darr, attorney for Embassy-Fairfax Dairy with trying to throw "a smoke screen" around the "bootlegging" issue.

A fight among producers in this area was forecast as C. V. Dye, of Frederick, Md., charged that a monopoly exists on the Washington milk market.

Chairman Bates, of the House subcommittee on public health, disclosed that the $2,500 appropriation is rapidly vanishing and soon will be used up.

Frank was still under cross-examination when the inquiry recessed until today. J. Edward Burroughs, special counsel of the sub-

Philippine Liner Aground With 186 Aboard; Aid Sped

Manila, P. I., May 5 (Friday) (INS).—Salvage ships rushed to the aid of the Philippine government interisland luxury liner Mayon, which ran aground early today off Apo light, south of Cebu Island, with 186 passengers.

Late advices indicated the Mayon's plight was more serious than had first been reported. She was buffeted early today by the backlash of a typhoon which crossed the southern islands Thursday. Rescue ships were speeding from Manila.

Nazis Swayed Us to British, Gallup Finds

Majority Favor For Supplying Munitions Followed Hitler's Advances

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, May 4.—As Europe prepares for one of the most anxious summers since 1914, there is one question that is being pondered in every diplomatic chancellory from London to Tokyo—where would the United States stand in the event of a new European war?

GEORGE GALLUP

Do the American people support the determination of President Roosevelt to supply war materials to Britain and France?

Which of the many proposals being discussed in the Congress of the United States have the most public support?

Over the past four years the Nation-wide surveys of the American Institute of Public Opinion show a drift and change in American sentiment—slow at first but moving faster today.

What the People Want

Today these surveys give a good indication of just what the American people want this country to do in case of a European war. They indicate that nearly all American thinking sums up to two main desires:

First, there is overwhelming sentiment that the United States should stay out of any war that develops in Europe.

Second, a majority of the public want to give all possible assistance to the British and French, short of going to war, in the event that war does come.

The first principle is not new; it has been the guiding idea of American foreign policy and public opinion almost since the Armistice. The strength of the idea is still very great. A majority of American voters believe that they should have the right, in a national vote, to decide whether American men can ever be drafted to fight abroad.

Majority Expects War

But with this belief is a growing tendency to identify our own safety and interests with those of Great Britain and France. The feeling is gaining support that we must be ready to help those two nations with food and war materials, in spite of the prohibitions of our neutrality legislation.

The whole attitude of the American people is heightened, moreover, by the fact that a majority of them expects a European war to come before the end of 1939, and by the

Daladier Assures Poles Paris Will Stand by Pledges of Aid; Ulster Irish Called to Arms

Outlawed Republican Troops Ordered to Prepare Selves for 'Any Emergency'

By the United Press.

Belfast, May 4.—All armed units of the outlawed Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland tonight were instructed by proclamation to hold themselves in readiness with arms and equipment for "immediate response" to orders from headquarters.

Ulster authorities minimized possibility of any mass uprising against British rule, pointing out that the approximate 7,000 British troops and 16,000 police and auxiliaries in Ulster far outnumbered members of the I. R. A., and that the proclamation probably would result only in a continuation of anti-British bombings and other terrorism.

Strength of the Republican Army is uncertain, because of the organization's secret nature, but is roughly estimated at 5,000, the majority of whom are in Eire. Chances of Ulster Republicans receiving any immediate reinforcements from Eire are regarded as slight because most of the members would be reluctant to jeopardize their regular jobs.

Struggle Held Near

The proclamation asserted that a "decisive struggle is approaching" and spoke of "enemy preparations of a military nature."

The reference was believed to be to Britain's decision, announced today, to establish a supplementary reserve force of tanks in Northern Ireland.

Prime Minister Chamberlain announced the force would be established but that British military conscription would not be applied to the six northern counties because of republican opposition.

The technically outlawed I. R. A., supported by Prime Minister Eamon De Valera's Eire government in the south, has warned that conscription of Irishmen would be regarded as "an act of aggression."

The "mobilization" order coincided with a fresh outbreak of bomb outrages and terrorism in England attributed to the army's extremists who demand an immediate end of the partition separating Northern Ireland's six counties from De Valera's Eire in the south.

"Enemy preparations of a military nature, whether in the way of propaganda or pretended precautions against attack, must be ignored and a policy of complete noncooperation enforced," the order said.

There are British military garri-

Estonia, Latvia Sign Nazi Pact; Litvinoff Aides Reported Out

Berlin, May 4 (U.P.).—Germany tonight signed nonaggression pacts with Latvia and Estonia in the first victories of Hitler's bold diplomatic offensive to isolate Poland from her allies and strike deep into Soviet Russia's sphere of Baltic influence.

An official announcement revealing the signing of the pacts did not disclose their details.

Simultaneously, Hitler moved to extend his nonaggression front with offers of similar pacts to Greece and other small European powers in addition to the Baltic countries and the four Scandinavian states.

By entering into friendship pacts with Latvia and Estonia, Hitler moved a step nearer the "neutralization" of his northern flank for the eventuality of war.

All Litvinoff Aides Reported Fired

London (Friday), May 5 (INS).—All high officials of the Russian Foreign Office and other close colleagues of Maxim Litvinoff, who was relieved from the office of Commissar of Foreign Affairs, were summarily dismissed by order of Josef Stalin, the Daily Express said today in an undated dispatch.

The dismissals were decided upon after a four-hour conference at the Kremlin between Stalin, Defense Commissar Klementi Voroshiloff and V. K. Molotoff, who replaced Litvinoff, according to Moscow dispatches to the Express.

The triumvirate, all-powerful in the Soviet government, reviewed every aspect of the tense European situation and reconsidered Soviet foreign policy during their conference.

Although other decisions were made, no direct statement was issued, the newspaper said.

Moscow Lifts Press Censorship

Moscow, May 4 (U.P.).—Soviet Russia tonight abolished censorship of the press in what appeared to be one of the first formal acts of Premier Viacheslav M. Molotoff in his new post as foreign commissar replacing Maxim M. Litvinoff.

The lifting of the censorship, applied to foreign newspaper and press association correspondents since the rise of the Soviet regime, now places full responsibility for the accuracy and non-bias of dispatches upon the correspondents themselves rather than upon the foreign office.

Nazis Central American Envoys Called In to Report

Mexico City, May 4 (INS).—Chancellor Hitler has ordered all his ministers in Mexico and Central America to return to Berlin immediately bearing reports on the Nazi trade and political situation, it was learned tonight.

The ministers will remain in Berlin for one week and then return to their posts to initiate activities in favor of Germany along fresh lines, according to diplomatic circles here.

The Reichsfuehrer's sudden orders affect Germany's accredited representatives governing the Reich's interests in Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Panama.. In several of these Central American countries Germany has no fully accredited ambassador, but each has at least a charge d'Affaires.

Reich Re-establishes Medieval Ghettos

Berlin, May 4 (U.P.).—The government today issued a decree establishing miniature "ghettos" in German cities, probably to be designated by the five-point yellow star used in medieval times, by compelling all Jews "who will not or cannot emigrate" to live in houses owned and occupied only by their people.

(Not since 1870 when Rome's segregation of Jews ended has there been a ghetto in Europe, surrounded by high walls and its gates closed at sundown. Jewish residents of these medieval ghettos, easily identified by yellow circles on their coats or peaked caps, were whipped or fined if found outside the ghetto after sundown. Germany's last ghetto—called "Judengasse"—disappeared about 1815).

The decree was another step toward complete segregation of Jews from Aryans. The Jewish community already has been provided with its own doctors, lawyers, theaters, restaurants and park benches. The Jews have been excluded from motion picture houses, theaters, several important streets and museums and may not even visit the Berlin Zoo.

Promise of Support Repeated, Premier Calls Rumors of Change 'Distortions'

By John Elliott
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Paris, May 4.—Premier Edouard Daladier, in a statement tonight, gave notice that France would stand by the side of Poland if that country was attacked by Germany because of Danzig.

"It is a question of domination or collaboration in Europe," declared the French premier. "It is the security of France which is at stake as well as the future of civilization."

Daladier's assurance came on the eve of the scheduled address by Col. Josef Bech, Polish foreign minister, defining Poland's position in the controversy with Nazi Germany over Danzig.

The statement by the head of the French government was issued in reply to the press campaign by the pro-Munich school of defeatists which culminated today in an article by Marcel Deat, a prominent dissident Socialist deputy in "L'Oeuvre," entitled "Fight for Danzig?"

Removes Doubts

Deat, of course, answered the question in the negative, writing: "To start a war in Europe for the sake of Danzig is going a little far, and the French peasants have no desire to die for the Pollacks."

This article created a stir in political circles here today, where it was compared in significance to former Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin's campaign against the mobilization of the French army last September on the ground that the French didn't want to "fight for Czecho-Slovakia," which led to the humiliating capitulation of the French and the British to Chancellor Hitler at Munich.

In view of Beck's speech Premier Daladier wanted tot remove any doubts that might have been created by the defeatist French press articles concerning the loyalty of this country to her alliance with Poland.

Foreign Minister George Bonnet gave similar assurances in a talk he had with Julius Lukasiewicz, the Polish Ambassador here this morning. Bonnet said that France would be at the side of Poland at any time that the Warsaw government considered its vital interests were at stake, and that this pledge applied to Danzig or to any other question that Poland considered essential.

Favors Resistance

Premier Daladier never was pro-Munich at heart, and who now stands solidly behind the policy of resistance to aggression by the Fascist dictators, sought to remove any misunderstandings that might exist concerning the position of France by the statement he issued tonight.

Recalling that the French press had announced that the government was going to make a declaration of policy when the Parliament meets next week, Daladier said that in the present circumstances he had decided not to wait, but to make his statement now.

Defining his policy as one of "vigilance and firmness," he continued: "This policy has the complete approbation of the country, as the deliberations and the resolutions of the departmental congresses have shown.

Denounces Distinctions.

"Nevertheless, in France and abroad it seems that because of incorrect reports and tendencious commentaries, an attempt is being made to travesty the facts and to try to weaken the resolution of the government and the nation, or to create doubts concerning the clarity and the straightforwardness of French policy.

"I cannot denounce too strongly

Fair Aide Destroys Lincoln Statue That Cost U. S. $4,000

Art Work 'Too Big,' Official Explains; His Action Protested

A prize-winning statue of Abraham Lincoln, the rail splitter, has not only been removed from the Federal Building at the New York World's Fair but destroyed, it was learned yesterday.

Representing a total cost to the Government of $4,000, the 15-foot figure, called "The Rail Joiner," was unceremoniously carted away from the Federal Building and broken up on the order of Theodore T. Hayes, executive assistant of the U. S. World's Fair Commission.

Hayes explained the removal order was given because the plaster-cast statue "was too big, far too high and hid all the lighting." The sculpture, which was located in the center of the Federal Building's garden pool, was taken away last Saturday, one day before the formal opening of the fair.

It was at the preview that, according to Hayes, "visitors all scoffed at it."

Sculptor of the mysteriously vanished art work is Louis Slobodkin, who took his wife to the fair on opening day to show her his masterpiece only to discover that it was gone.

Slobodkin, a New Yorker, was among the entrants in a national competition conducted last year to select two heroic-sized sculptures for the Court of Peace, gateway to the Federal Building and international exhibits. Eventually another sculptor received the award, but Slobodkin's designs were so good that he received a runner-up commission to execute the Lincoln figure.

It was learned here yesterday that he received $2,000 for his work and a like amount was spent by the Government for enlarging, casting and construction of a pedestal.

Japanese Bomb Chungking; 3,000 Killed, Wounded

Chungking, May 4 (U.P.).—Japanese planes bombed this Chinese nationalist capital tonight in one of the most devastating raids of the war. Casualties approached 3,000.

The French and British consulates were hit but there were no reports Occidentals had been hurt.

The Canadian French Mission and its school were hit and fired.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Vought, of Chicago, were in the school building, but escaped.

A hotel, housing the offices of North American Aviation Corporation and United Aircraft Corporation, was hit and also was afire. Occidental pilots employed in China, who lived in the building, escaped.

A correspondent touring the area at midnight saw scores of dead and wounded. Hundreds were trapped in the wreckage and could be heard groaning and screaming for help.

One fire surrounded the Methodist Episcopal Hospital and the home of an American family, Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy. Theodore White, of Boston, a Harvard graduate, had a narrow escape from the bomb which hit the Canadian school.

The body of a Chinese woman was blown an estimated 200 yards and came through a window into White's room.

In some areas spreading fires forced rescue workers to flee, leaving the screaming injured men and women to be burned alive.

Chinese Bomb Division

Shanghai, Friday, May 5 (U.P.).—Unconfirmed Chinese dispatches reported today that Chinese planes yesterday attacked a Japanese army division at Lientang, 10 miles south of Nanchang, in the Hankow-Changsha sector, and "virtually wiped it out."

Kennedy Dines George and Queen On Virginia Ham

London, May 4 (AP).—King George and Queen Elizabeth dined tonight at the United States Embassy, and Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy served them Baltimore shad roe, Virginia ham, Georgia pickled peaches and strawberry shortcake.

It was the American envoy's farewell to the sovereigns before they sail Saturday for Canada and the United States. Guests included the American Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt, who flew from Paris.

The menu, printed in English, included mushroom soup, green peas and new potatoes.

Even at Buckingham Palace and 10 Downing Street they still print menus in French, but "not in my house," announced Kennedy, and another diplomatic precedent was broken.

All nine Kennedy children—together for the first time since the Ambassador came to London—met the King and Queen.

Upstairs in the embassy after dinner, the guests saw a movie and later had a light supper.

Among the guests were the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort, the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, the Earl of Eldon, the Countess of Airlie, Viscountess Halifax, wife of the foreign secretary; Viscountess Cranborne, Viscount, and Viscountess Allendale, Viscount and Viscountess Astor, the Honorable and Mrs. David Bowes-Lyon, Sir Alexander and Lady Harding, the Honorable and Mrs. Reginald Winn, Commander Harold Campbell, the King's equerry, Mrs. Walton Butterworth, Mrs. Martin Scanlon and Herschel Johnson, U. S. Embassy counselor

At the same time, Ickes announced the appointment of Barry Dibble as assistant administrator of the Bonneville project.

Senators Raise Agriculture Bill $378,000,000

Appropriations Added For Parity Payment, Crop Surplus Removal

By Robert C. Albright.

Rejecting a 5 per cent cut in the huge agriculture appropriation bill, a Senate sub-committee yesterday instead raised the House farm measure by $378,000,000, adding new appropriations for farm parity payments and crop-surplus removals.

To continue the unbudgeted parity price benefits to farmers, previously refused by the House, the sub-committee voted $225,000,000. Another $113,000,000 was added to pay for disposal of surplus products, including funds for projected export subsidy programs.

Although the President's cotton export subsidy plan received no direct vote, Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, was authorized to present his alternative cotton subsidy measure to the Senate, under a proposed rules suspension. A bitter fight against it was promised by a bloc of Southern Senators led by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Chairman Smith of the Agriculture Committee.

Cut Fails 5 to 3.

The ecoanomy motion for a 5 per cent cut in all farm bill items except parity and surplus disposal funds was offered by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming. It failed by a 5-to-3 vote.

"I felt some economy gesture should be made, in view of the large amounts we are appropriating," O'Mahoney said. "I realize that percentage reductions are not scientific, and the farm bill is a bad measure to start on.

"But I believe the Senate should give more detailed study to all of these items. I feel we should develop some procedure to get a more thorough understanding of what we are doing. As it is now, the Senate considers only increases in these bills."

Townsend Wants Cut

Senator Townsend, of Delaware, a minority member of the committee, voiced the hope O'Mahoney will renew his motion in the full committee today. If O'Mahoney fails to, Townsend said he will move to cut items in the bill by 10 per cent.

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, in charge of the bill, said the proposed export subsidy program for cotton must be "fought out on the floor."

The President has proposed that a Government subsidy up to 2 cents a pound be paid to exporters who move cotton from the Government's 11,250,000-bale loan surplus abroad. Another $1.25 a bale would be paid to farmers in return for title to the Government loan cotton.

Subsidy on New Cotton Only

The counterproposal by Senator Bankhead would subsidize export of only newly produced cotton, requiring that the Government's vast loan stocks remain locked up, off the market, until January, 1940.

Under the committee authorization given him, Bankhead will move to suspend the Senate rules in order to offer his plan as an amendment to the bill. His motion, introduced yesterday, would require a two-thirds vote of the Senate for approval. If the motion fails, George served notice he would offer a point of order against the amendment, "because it is legislation on an appropriation bill."

The $113,000,000 voted for surplus removal compares with $150,000,000 demanded by the Senate's Western farm bloc. It would be added to the $90,000,000 already available from customs receipts, to finance not only Federal purchase of surplus dairy and other products, but to pay for projected export subsidies as well. Part of the fund would be used to continue the Administration's wheat export subsidy program, and from the same item would come money for proposed cotton and lard export subsidy plans.

Increase for Parity Payments

The $225,000,000 voted for parity price payments compares with $212,000,000 approved last year. Last month, the House rejected a committee recommendation for $250,000,000. Russell renewed this proposal in the Senate, but the subcommittee hacked $25,000,000 from it. The money, which was not recommended in the President's budget, would be paid to farmers to lift their prices upward toward "parity"—or the 1909-1914 purchasing power of farm products.

The President has warned Congress must provide taxes to finance such a program. Townsend said he reminded the subcommittee of this, but predicted the needed levies would not be considered in forthcoming tax discussions.

Senate increases in the farm measure brought the total of the bill to $1,213,000,000—the largest farm bill appropriation on record. The House bill stood at $835,000,000, after parity price funds were torn from it.

Besides $225,000,000 for parity payments, and $113,000,000 for surplus crop disposals, the Senate sub-committee added $25,000,000 to the House bill for financing the farm tenant act, and $15,000,000 more for other Agriculture Department activities. Like the $500,000,000 already in the bill for continued soil conservation benefits, the parity payments would go to wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco and rice farmers. Western farm bloc Senators will support the "parity" amendment in return for dairy section aids in the new surplus removal appropriation.

The Gallup Poll

3d Term Sentiment Drops; Dewey Has Slight Lead Over Roosevelt

By Dr. George Gallup,

New York, May 4.—Surveys just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion show that there are three main public attitudes today toward a third term for President Roosevelt.

With the third term issue playing an important part in Democratic Party maneuvers today, the Institute's canvass of opinions throughout the Nation shows that:

First, the number of voters who definitely advocate a third term for Roosevelt and think he should try to run for one is a relatively small group. It constitutes 23 per cent of the voters today. This represents a decline from two months ago when 31 per cent definitely favored a third term. In both studies the same question was asked: "Do you favor a third term for President Roosevelt?"

Second, in case President Roosevelt did actually secure the nomination and ran for office again, a slightly larger group—33 per cent—say they would be inclined to vote for him. This group includes the 23 per cent who definitely want to see him run, plus another small group who take the position that while they do not advocate a third term, they would be inclined to vote for Roosevelt if he ran. In this study no specific candidate was named as his possible opponent on the Republican ticket. The question read: "If President Roosevelt runs for a third term, do you think you will vote for him?"

But, third, the actual vote he might receive would depend largely on how strong a candidate ran against him on the Republican ticket. In order to test his strength against a flesh and blood candidate, the Institute ran a "trial heat" between Roosevelt for a third term and Thomas E. Dewey, the young Republican racket-buster of New York who has risen to national prominence.

The results give Dewey a slight lead at this time.

The question asked was as follows:

"If President Roosevelt runs for a third term in 1940 on the Democratic ticket against Thomas E. Dewey on the Republican ticket, which one do you think you would prefer?"

The vote is:

Dewey	55%
Roosevelt	45

Approximately one person in ten (12 per cent) expressed no opinion.

With the Presidential campaign more than a year off, the survey results are not necessarily an indication of what would happen if Roosevelt and Dewey were actually the candidates. The vote is merely a straw in the wind as of this date, and opinion may change with the march of events.

Dewey's lead at the moment in this hypothetical race is caused largely by the fact that many persons who voted for Roosevelt in 1936 switch party lines to express a preference for the young Republican. These "shifters" constitute about one-third of all the persons who were for Roosevelt in 1936.

	Favor Dewey	Favor Roosevelt
1936 Landon Voters	96	4
1936 Roosevelt Voters	33%	67%

The survey made a careful analysis of the "shift" vote. It found that persons in this group of 33 per cent give four main reasons why they would prefer Dewey to Roosevelt, even though they were Democratic in the last election.

The reasons are that they oppose a third term, that they have lost confidence in Roosevelt, that the country needs a change, and, finally, that "business would be better under a Republican President."

Former Representative Wins Disbarment Case

Cleveland, May 4 (AP).—A three-judge court dismissed today "ambulance chasing" charges against Stephen M. Young, Ohio Congressman-at-large from 1933 to 1937. A Cleveland bar association committee sought to disbar Young from practice of law.

First Quarter Retail Sales Increase 5%

Building, Automobile And Allied Trades Show Best Gains

Total retail sales for the first quarter of 1939 were 5 per cent greater than in the corresponding period of 1938, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins announced yesterday.

Estimates of retail sales, prepared by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and based on sales data, disclosed that the greatest activity was centered in the automobile, building and allied trades. Total sales for consumers' durable goods were estimated at about 17 per cent above the first quarter of 1938.

The report revealed that general merchandise sales during the first three months of the year showed only moderate improvement over the 1938 period with an average gain of 3 per cent for the group; the relative increase of mail order and chain store sales being considerably more pronounced than that recorded for sales made through department stores and apparel shops.

The dollar volume of food sales during the first quarter of 1939 remained at about the level of the first three months in 1938, but the total quantity was up, since food prices averaged lower than a year ago.

Drug store sales for the quarter were less than 2 per cent above the 1938 level, with chains and independent stores having about the same relative gain. Sales made through jewelry stores showed little change from a year ago, while filling stations were down more than 2 per cent and eating places about 4 per cent.

A comparison for individual months with 1938 activity reveals that, aided by the earlier date of Easter which affected some lines of business, total retail sales during March widened the rate of gain over last year to 8 per cent, or about double the relative amount shown for January or February.

At the same time, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics announced that, reflecting lower prices of agricultural products, the value of American farmland declined 1.18 per cent during the year ending March 1. The decline halted a six-year upward trend.

Sweeney Suggests King Pay Some on Debt While Here

By International News Service.

House members heard a laughter evoking attack on Great Britain yesterday by ruddy-faced Martin Sweeney, Ohio Democrat of Irish descent, who suggested that the British King and Queen make a down payment on England's $5,000,000,000 war debt to the United States while being entertained at the White House in June.

With biting sarcasm, Sweeney suggested that Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, premier celebration stager for Congress, take on a new job.

"We might have Mr. Bloom have a Paul Revere start from the International Bridge at Buffalo and ride to Washington a week in advance of the royal couple, shouting, 'the British are coming,'" said Sweeney.

"Great Britain has been guilty," Sweeney charged, "with the most ruthless conquest and cruel domination of people of any nation in the world."

On Capitol Hill

Women can help keep America out of war by analyzing propaganda "put out by the propaganda machines," Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway (Democrat), of Arkansas, the only woman ever elected to the Senate and mother of two sons in the Army, declared yesterday.

Sen. Caraway

Mrs. Caraway told reporters in her customary calm way:

"Another thing that would help keep us out of war would be for the American people to stop talking about war."

The United States should be adequately prepared for any eventuality if war breaks out in Europe, she said.

Chairman Sumners (Democrat), Texas, of the House Judiciary Committee, was reported resting well yesterday after an operation for hernia.

The Senate confirmed without dissent the nomination of Leon Henderson, 44-year-old economist, to be a member of the Securities Commission.

Henderson will succeed William O. Douglas, now an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

Henderson, executive secretary of the monopoly investigating committee, is expected to continue his work with the committee after he takes his Securities Commission post.

Vice President Garner, returning to his office after a slight attack of lumbago, was given his 175th gavel. It is made of wood taken from the home of President McKinley at Canton, Ohio.

Adoption of the Sumners' "good-behavior" bill, designed to provide a practical way of removing Federal judges from the bench without resorting to impeachment, was urged by the House Judiciary Committee in a formal report.

Under the measure, the House could certify to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court that it believes a Federal district judge has been guilty of bad behavior. The Chief Justice then assembles a three-judge court to try the judge. If the court so decided, the judge would be removed from office.

Harry Green, Of Arlington, Seeks 6th Term

Commissioner of Revenue to Campaign 'Upon My Record'

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0809.

Harry K. Green yesterday announced his candidacy for commissioner of revenue, subject to the Democratic primary to be held August 1.

He was elected to the office of commissioner of revenue in 1919 and has been re-elected for four consecutive terms.

A life-long Democrat, he was born in Loudoun County and has been a resident of Arlington County for the last 31 years.

During Senator Byrd's term as Governor of Virginia, Commissioner Green was selected as chairman of a committee to make recommendations to revise, simplify and codify the tax laws of the State. Many of the recommendations made by this committee were incorporated in the new tax code of Virginia adopted in 1936.

For many years the present commissioner of revenue has served as chairman of the legislative committee of the commissioners of revenue of Virginia. This committee meets annually with the commissioner of taxation of the State for the purpose of discussing tax problems and recommending needed legislation.

Commissioner Green is also president of the Commissioner of Revenue Association of the State which is an organization for the purpose of co-operating with the tax department of the State and keeping abreast of assessing problems with which the commissioners of revenue are confronted.

During Commissioner Green's 20 years in office, he has been commissioned several times by Virginia Governors to represent the State at important national tax conferences. During the term of Gov. Peery, Green was commissioned to represent the Governor at the National Association of Assessing Officers held in New York. On this occasion he made an address on Virginia taxation which was published in some of the leading tax magazines of the country. He is also a member of the National Association of Assessing Officers and has recently been requested to accept the position of director of the National County Officers Association.

In making his announcement, Green said, "I will depend absolutely upon my record as a public official for re-election. My campaign slogan will be the same as used in all other campaigns, one word, service."

Cadet Officers Named

Ballston.—In the presence of a large gathering of parents of the cadet corps of Washington-Lee High School, "founders' day" was celebrated yesterday in honor of County Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, who in 1926 founded the cadet corps in the school.

The program included exhibition drills by a company of the First Battalion and Company I of the girls' auxiliary in command of Capt. Doris Carter.

The program concluded with a regimental drill and review and the swearing of the commissions by Supt. Kemp.

Those receiving their commissions were:

William E. Payne, lieutenant colonel; Harry B. Bates, jr., major; William Walter Follin, captain and regimental adjutant; Charles L. Pyle, captain and regimental supply officer; Jennings Bynum, captain, regimental staff; Alexander Anderson, captain, regimental staff; J. Eastman Lowell, captain, regimental staff; Don Cutter, first lieutenant and battalion adjutant; Bugert Lee Burner, first lieutenant and battalion supply officer; William H. Vrooman, first lieutenant, plans and training officer; Odie Howell, jr., captain, company A; Don A. Gaddis, first lieutenant, company A; Robert T. Sims, second lieutenant, company A; Louis Allwine Miller, captain, company B; Eugene Richard Harrell, first lieutenant, company B; Henry Terrell, second lieutenant, company B; Tom Williams, captain, company C; Donald E. Kenyon, first lieutenant, company C; Paul C. Johnson, second lieutenant, company C; Robert L. Benson, captain, third battalion; Willard R. Flaherty, jr., second lieutenant; Arthur Halsted, jr., second lieutenant; Thomas H. Gary, second lieutenant; Ervey F. Cole, jr., second lieutenant; Fredinand L. Aspeslagh, captain, regimental band; Ernest Emil Hoffman, first lieutenant, regimental band, and Charles I. A. Johnson, jr., second lieutenant, regimental band.

Barbara Riggs England, major, second battalion; Edith Johansen, Hoffman, captain, second battalion staff; Dora Kristine Oddsson, first lieutenant, second battalion staff; Doris Wark, second lieutenant, second battalion staff; Doris Elizabeth Craver, captain, Company I; Margaret Lois Wise, captain, Company L; Edna Joyce Davis, captain, Company K; Gladys Christina Rauh, first lieutenant, Company W; Catherine Emma Warner, first lieutenant, Company I; Lacey Elizabeth Atwood, first lieutenant, Company K; Ruth Dean Brown, second lieutenant, Company I; Virginia Lee Middlethon, second lieutenant, Company L, and Elizabeth Carolyn Ray, second lieutenant, Company K.

Arlington.—Mrs. Lillian Morgan, has been elected president of the Catholic Woman's Club of Arlington County.

Christian Endeavor

Cherrydale.—The Christian Endeavor of the Cherrydale Methodist Church will give an evening's entertainment tonight at 8 in the school auditorium.

The program will include a comic presentation of a courtroom scene with cases of all types. There will be two specialties, a series of readings, and a ventriloquist act. A men's chorus will be featured and will lead in community singing.

The funeral will be held today at 3 p. m. from the home, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Burial will be in Ivy Hill cemetery.

64 Montgomery County Taxpayers Crowd Rockville Hearing to Protest Assessments

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

The hearing room of the Montgomery County Commissioners' office at Rockville was jammed yesterday with 64 taxpayers protesting assessments.

The number was almost unprecedented in the history of the county. The last to be heard was at 8 p. m. The hearings began at 2 p. m. The protestants were asking reduction on existing assessments.

F. Barnard Welsh, attorney for Mr. and Mrs. Philander Johnson and Dr. and Mrs. Edward Morrison, Rockville pike residents, urged the commissioners to reduce the assessment on their property because of the proximity of Congressional Airport. The property holders claimed that their property had been depreciated by the alleged low-flying of airplanes overhead.

Ask Reduction

S. Peter Wagner and Robert Wagner, owners of the Congressional Airport property, also appeared to ask for a tax reduction. They told the commissioners they had a petition signed by 58 adjacent property owners who say the airport is operated in a proper manner in accordance with the law and that they do not consider it a menace to their property.

The commissioners reduced very few of the assessments.

Chief of Police Charles Orme said some provision should be made for having a justice of the peace available to issue warrants and accept collateral at Rockville at night after the clerk of the Police Court office is closed. The county justices of the peace will receive only $20 a year after June 1, and a number of those appointed have not accepted their commissions.

Citizens Elect LeVaute

Silver Spring—Ralph E. Torrey was elected president of the East Sligo Valley Citizens Association last night, succeeding R. L. Torreyson. Others elected were Armand J. LeVaute, first vice president; Frank F. Smith, second vice president; Mrs. Mildred B. Smith, secretary, and Walter C. DeGroot, treasurer. Delegates to the Montgomery County Civic Federation are DeGroot, Granville C. Stagg and R. L. Torreyson. Alternates are Mrs. Torrey, Philip J. Austensen and LeVaute. The executive committee is composed of William Ferguson, representing Country Club View; S. R. Lynn, Highland View; Paul Thompson, Seven Oaks; Roy Hunt, Country Club Park; Arthur Anderson, Argyle Park and Blair Lee 3d, Fairway.

A move to establish a hospital in the Silver Spring area was inaugurated with appointment of a committee of five to make an immediate survey of facilities available in Silver Spring and to determine the needs of the community. Col. John F. Williams, chairman, is assisted by Stanley R. Lynn, Mrs. Kenneth Bruner, Mrs. James Sweet and John Deane. Enforcement of the county zoning laws in Branwill Park, where a one-family house is being converted into a two-family dwelling without a permit, is urged in a resolution. Resurfacing of Forest Glen road is sought in another resolution adopted. DeGroot was indorsed for a vacancy on the Montgomery County school board in the eastern suburban area.

Talk on Child Welfare

Rockville—A round-table discussion on "Child Welfare Work in Maryland" will be held at an all-day meeting of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters today at the Rockville Courthouse. The discussion is scheduled for 2 p. m.

Principal speakers will be Miss Estella Everett, chairman of child welfare, Maryland League of Women Voters, and Paul T. Beisser, executive secretary Henry Watson's Children's Aid Society. Leaders will be Mrs. F. C. Fishback, of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters; Miss Ruth Bolton, Social Service League of Montgomery County; Mrs. Dorothy Kurtz, Montgomery County Welfare Board, and Mrs. Sadie Wisner, Montgomery County Juvenile Court. A business session will be held in the morning.

Party for Trees

Montgomery Hills.—A bingo and bridge party will be staged tonight at 8 o'clock at Montgomery Hills Junior High School for benefit of the fund for purchasing 400 trees for the community, sponsored by the North Woodside-Montgomery Hills Citizens Association.

Klinck to Receive Medal

Takoma Park.—The award of merit for the member of the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce who has accomplished the most outstanding work for the year has been given Charles H. Klinck, new secretary.

Klinck was chairman of publication of the Takoma Park Booster, which won praise from the United States Chamber of Commerce. The award, an electric clock, was presented by Donald D. Lamond at the May meeting.

Robert Lyon, chairman of the spring banquet, announced last night that the affair will be held May 24 instead of May 22 at the Indian Spring Country Club.

Chairmen of standing committees for the year have been appointed by O. W. Youngblood, president. They are J. Douglas Bradshaw, laws and legislation; Robert E. Lohr, streets and lights; Dwight Smith, program; James Marshall, public utilities; Leo Hubbard, schools and playgrounds; R. L. Houston Jones, finance Donald D. Lamond, zoning; Robert M. Lyon, community development, and Warren D. Haley, membership.

Students to Vie In State Contests

Charlottesville, May 4 (AP).—Hundreds of students from throughout the State will gather here next Thursday, May 11, to participate in the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League meet which will continue through Saturday, Charles H. Kauffmann of the University of Virginia is executive secretary of the league.

The meet will open Thursday with the one-act play contests and tennis matches. Friday literary events for Class B, C and D schools will be completed. On Saturday field event for Class A and running events for Classes A, B, C and D will be held.

House Asked To Vote Navy 770 Millions

Bill Provides Two 45,000-Ton Warships And 500 Planes

The largest peace-time naval appropriation bill in history was brought before the House yesterday with a blunt warning that war was inevitable and that the United States must increase its arms "while there is time."

Bringing up a $770,473,241 bill, carrying funds for starting two 45,000-ton battleships, 21 other war vessels and 500 new planes, Chairman Scrugham of the House Naval Appropriations sub-committee, told the House that the law of the "survival of the fittest" continued to rule the world. He declared that other nations coveted our wealth and that we must guard against a future war to take it from us.

"Warfare in the not distant future seems the inevitable answer," Scrugham said. "As a matter of elementary prudence and caution, it seems plain that our country must now accelerate our defense preparations while there is time to meet the eventualities."

His statements were challenged by Representative Fish (Republican), New York, who contended the present strength of the Navy was capable of defending the United States and that President Roosevelt wanted the expanded fleet for offense. The ranking Republican on the Naval Appropriations subcommittee, Ditter, of Pennsylvania, joined him demanding that Congress determine whether the additional ships were for defense or for playing "power politics" in Europe, but said he would support the bill.

Testimony given secretly by the Navy's top ranking officer, Admiral William D. Leahy, declaring that the "prospect of international disturbance in the near future" required speeding up of the shipbuilding program, was made public by Scrugham. Leahy was disclosed to have told the committee that failure to carry out the expansion program would be "jeopardizing national security."

"The United States may be brought suddenly face to face with a situation that it had no part in creating and over which it may have no control," he stated. "In view of the rapidly changing alignment of European understandings and alliances, and the agreements as to community of interests between nations of Europe and Asia, it is essential that America should take steps toward an assurance of security even against possible alliances, and without depending upon assistance from any foreign source."

Aircraft Fund Deferred

Leahy presented the subcommittee with a picture of the armament plans and foreign policies of other world powers and declared that the United States should pay particular attention to future economic and cultural penetration of Latin America by Germany and Italy. He reported "definite indications" that Japan was about to launch a major air expansion program "more or less in emulation of Germany."

The bill as reported exceeds the current year's appropriations by $142,876,047, but is $19,956,212 under the budget estimates. An additional $50,708,050, however, was allowed in contract authorizations for planes, public works and machine tools.

Repair Funds Asked

The committee disclosed the Navy had requested funds for putting laid-up vessels in shape for instant action. A total of $3,545,000 was asked to lay in reserve stocks of supplies for the decommissioned fleet. The committee allowed $750,374 of the proposal, to permit a start to be made on the project.

For aviation, the committee allowed $83,298,000, more than $25,000,000 more than the current year. This will provide 500 additional planes and will give the Navy a total of 2,132. The objective of 3,000 planes will be reached before July, 1944, it was said.

In approving a budget estimate of $500,000 fo ra new rigid airship, group urged construction of a dirigible of the approximate size of the Los Angeles—3,000,000 cubic feet.

Poll

fear that America will be drawn into it eventually if war does come.

Growing out of all this is the decision—in which persons of all ages and parties agree—that the United States should make itself as impregnable as possible on land, on sea and in the air. If the American attitude could be summarized in a few words it would be: "Help England and France, but stay out of war ourselves. Build up America's national defense."

There are elements of paradox in this picture, of course.

Isolationism Qualified

This much is clear: The American people have shifted from the unqualified isolationism of the 1920's and from the characteristic stand of the neutrality legislation of 1935 and 1937.

American sympathies have been with Chiang Kai-shek, with Haile Selassie and with the Spanish Loyalists, but the American people have clung to their neutrality sentiments in various ways while the wars in China, Ethiopia and Spain went on.

At the time of Mussolini's conquest of Ethiopia, for instance, seven persons in ten said they were against the idea of joining with the League powers in sanctions against Italy—even in economic sanctions.

Only Sympathy for China

In the case of the war in China, nearly two-thirds of the people have been opposed to sending war supplies to the Chinese or boycotting Japanese goods, even though the great majority of Americans indicated their sympathy with China.

In the Spanish civil war, while the average American sympathized with the Republican side, the prevailing impression has been that "it is not our concern" and that neither side was fighting for democracy as we know it.

Underlying the American attitude of the past few years has been the widespread conviction that America should never have entered the World War.

Just two years ago, on the twentieth anniversary of President Wilson's declaration of war, the poll found 70 per cent of the voters saying that it was a mistake for the United States to have entered the World War.

Hitler Arouses Fears

But the events of the last year have increased American fear of a new European war. Hitler's triumphant march across Central Europe has been the major factor.

In August, 1937, while wars were going on in China and Spain, but before Hitler's seizure of Austria, only 16 Americans in 100, on the average, thought a major war would come within a year. The Austrian anschluss was the first great shock, because it showed that Hitler was out to readjust the territorial boundaries of postwar Europe. The seizure of the Sudetenland and the September crisis gave America a second shock.

By January of this year, in the fading twilight of the Munich agreement, 44 persons in 100 had come to expect war in 1939, and a majority thought the United States would eventually be drawn in if war should come.

The final extinction of Czecho-Slovakia and the occupation of Memel have intensified this foreboding. Today more than half the voters expect a major war before January and an increasing number think the United States would be drawn in.

U. S. Never Trusted Munich

The American people never shared Prime Minister Chamberlain's confidence in the "security" which was purchased at Munich.

Surveys taken just after the momentous conference of the "Big Four" showed that the overwhelming majority of Americans respected neither Hitler's claims to the Sudetenland nor his promise that he had no more territorial ambitions in Europe.

They said that Munich was more likely to lead to an increasingly dangerous crisis in the future than it was to establish "peace in our time," and they opposed the idea of returning the imperial German colonies.

But even at the time of the September crisis most Americans sympathized with Mr. Chamberlain in his dilemma and agreed that the British Prime Minister had made a choice more humane than that of going to war.

Hitler's moves, meanwhile, have had the effect of ending America's reluctance to ship food and war materials to our former allies. Before the September crisis in Czecho-Slovakia a majority of Americans favored sending food supplies to the British and French in case of war but balked at the idea of sending war materials.

Seizure Swings Vote

Finally, with Hitler's extinction of Czecho-Slovakia in March the vote in favor of aiding the French and English became as follows:

Favor Selling Food Supplies ..82%
Favor Selling War Materials..57%

The latter figure is the number who said they would be willing to repeal the neutrality act, as advocated by Senator Pittman, to make this possible.

The dissenting group—those who are against sending aid to Britain and France—are still largely in the position represented by the neutrality act. They argue (1) that the United States should remain neutral in deed as well as in theory, (2) that helping England and France would increase the likelihood of our being drawn into war, and (3) that any substantial aid to these countries might require a repetition of our war loans, which have been generally repudiated by those same countries.

Only one person in a hundred, on the average, says that he objects to aiding England and France because of sympathies for Germany and Italy.

No Party or Sectional Lines

Possibly the most significant fact about this country's willingness to aid the French and British is that there is no important difference of opinion between the Democrats and the Republicans, or even between the Atlantic Seaboard and the Middle West.

Hitler's moves against Austria and Czecho-Slovakia provoked a uniform reaction in all parts of the United States. So did his repressive measures against the Jews in Germany following the shooting of Counselor vom Rath last November.

Last December, when the Institute asked voters what events of 1938 had chiefly held their attention, the people—North, East, South and West—named the Czech crisis first and Hitler's anti-Jewish decrees second.

These events have caused Americans to see danger for "the other democracies" and even to fear that the United States might be attacked by the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis if England and France were defeated. A sizable majority (62 per cent) feel that the totalitarian powers would represent an immediate menace to America in case they won.

In the aftermath of Munich and Prague two of the typical prevailing comments were:

By a Virginia School Teacher: "I'm in favor of sending food and war supplies to England and France. I don't see how democracies could win without some help from us in that line—and if they lost it would only be a matter of time until we'd be hemmed in by the dictators ourselves."

By a Wisconsin Salesman and War Veteran: "I'd want to see the United States stay out, but I'd sure hate to see England and France go down. After all, they do stand for our way of life."

All Ages Agree

Just as opinion crosses party and sectional lines so also does it transcend age groups.

The men and women who remember the last war are sometimes more vehement than the younger generation in saying what America's course should be today. "War would not help the United States—I know," say many members of the war generation, now in their forties and fifties.

If anything, the men and women who remember the last war are slightly more in favor of sending aid to Britain and France, if it should be necessary, than younger people. But the majority in both groups favor sending food supplies and war materials, and disapprove sending an army and navy again.

3 to 1 for Better Defenses

When the recent Army and Navy appropriation bills were being discussed in Washington a few weeks ago the Institute found sentiment 3 to 1 for increasing all branches of the national defense. But as the American people consider what they will do in the event of a European war there is one reservation which they are laying down:

They do not want to have the United States herself engage in war.

This is a subject on which the comments of rank-and-file Americans show the greatest heat and emphasis. "We ought to help the democracies up to a certain point," says a New York State banker. "But let's stay out of war. If Europe's foolish enough to start another one, it'll only leave America stronger in the end."

"Why should our boys die in somebody else's quarrel?" asks another.

"Wait until they attack the United States." "Let's stay out of this one." "Damn the fighting and dying for someone else." These are some of the typical comments of American voters.

Against Fighting Abroad

The people are more than six to one against sending American troops abroad. Moreover, they are not unanimously convinced of the perfect justness of the British and French case against Hitler.

Even today—after all the Nazi government's exceedingly unpopular moves—nearly four Americans in ten think that Great Britain and France were unfair to Germany in the years immediately following the World War.

A majority of Americans, even at this date, would favor a new international peace conference if it would settle the claims of Germany and Italy in a manner that gave any assurance of an honorable peace.

A majority of Americans approved President Roosevelt's action in proposing a ten-year peace pledge and a new international peace conference recently, even though most Americans have opposed U. S. initiative in those matters.

Position Still "Depends"

Those are some of the things that make it impossible to predict what the American public's attitude might become upon an actual outbreak of fighting in Europe. Much would depend on the situation here and abroad, the American people's notion of who is responsible for the war and the type of war that might be waged.

In view of America's sympathies it is likely that Herbert Hoover was not overstating the case when he said recently that an aerial bombardment of London or Paris by Field Marshal Goering's airforce would extinguish all inclinations to neutrality in this country.

WHERE do those verdicts leave us — the people of the United States—today?

We are prepared to expect war as we were not prepared in 1914.

To an extent impossible to predict a year ago the American people are willing to lend material assistance to Britain and France in case war does come.

We are ready to change the neutrality legislation in which we have put our trust.

But we strongly desire to stay out of war itself.

We are not ready to undertake another military crusade to make the world safe for democracy.

The future of American action, in case war comes, will depend on relative strength of the purposes implied in these wishes.

The Nation-wide surveys of the American Institute of Public Opinion, of which Dr. Gallup is the director, are underwritten by a group of 87 leading American newspapers of all shades of political belief. In Washington the Institute's surveys are published exclusively in The Washington Post.

Rep. Hartley Attacks Labor Act At House Hearing

By the Associated Press.

Representative Hartley (Republican, New Jersey), directed a seven-point attack on the National Labor Relations Board yesterday as the House Labor Committee opened hearings on proposed changes in the Wagner act.

Saying he was one of the sponsors of amendments requested by the American Federation of Labor, Hartley said the board was guilty of these charges:

Has aggravated strikes which have caused "great losses;" board hearings have been biased, partisan, and unfair; decisions have been based on incompetent, irrelevant and hearsay evidence; some decisions have been deliberately delayed; there has been definite bias in favor of the CIO against all other labor unions; in some instances, the board has acted as an organizing agent for the CIO, and the board has descriminated against craft union.s

such distortions of the truth. In reality, the international situation is at the point where amidst the diversity and complexity of the principal problems, one solid question now stands out—that of domination or collaboration in Europe.

"It is the security of France which is at stake, and also the future of civilization, which, with the immense majority of mankind, we are resolved to defend. The French people know it, their resolution is unshakable. 'In the present circumstances, I lay stress on recalling it."

It was understood that Lukasiewicy assured Bonnet that Beck's speech tomorrow would not aggravate the international situation. The Polish Foreign Minister will not make any demand for a Polish protectorate over Danzig, nor for the installation of Polish troops in the free city, but will reaffirm the recognized Polish rights in her outlet to the Baltic Sea.

Officials Skeptical

A more hopeful view of the consequences of the resignation of Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, was held in political quarters here tonight as a result of a conversation that Bonnet had with Jacob Souritz, the Soviet Ambassador in Paris, at a diplomatic luncheon which the French foreign minister tendered at the Quai D'orsay today.

Souritz informed his host that Litvinoff's leaving did not mean a new orientation of Soviet foreign policy. Souritz intimated that Litvinoff was dropped because Josef Stalin, secretary general of the Communist Party, considered him too much attached to the policy of collective security and the League of Nations, and that the Soviet general staff preferred an out-and-out military alliance with England and France.

Official circles here remained skeptical, however, concerning the correctness of this interpretation, and wondered just how much Souritz himself knew about what was going on in Moscow.

Conciliatory Note Forecast

Warsaw, May 5 (Friday) (INS).—Foreign Minister Josef Beck of Poland early today put the finishing touches to the speech he will give at approximately noon before Parliament.

(Beck's address was to be broadcast by American networks shortly after 5 o'clock (E. S. T.) this morning.)

In foreign diplomatic circles it was strongly indicated the foreign minister's words will paint a picture of a Polish foreign policy based upon firm adherence to the principles of peaceful negotiation. It will be a strong reply to Germany's demands for Danzig and a wide Nazi pathway across the Polish corridor, but it will also contain a conciliatory note indicating Poland's willingness to sit down at a conference table with German diplomats and talk over the Danzig matter.

When Beck speaks he will do so with the knowledge that Poland is fully prepared from a military point of view to go to war in order to safeguard its independence and integrity. In the last few months Warsaw has called up more than 1,000,000 men and mobilized its industry and economic life for any emergency.

In addition, Poland believes herself doubly fortified since the conclusion of mutual defense pacts with Britain and France.

After Beck's speech, which will be studied carefully by the chieftains of every European chancellory, the Polish Parliament will be called upon to vote on a bill vesting virtual dictatorship powers in the hands of President Mosciicky until November 1.

The bill was approved by the Polish cabinet last Tuesday and would give the president power over the nation's defense, economic and industrial life. Only control over the value of the Polish zloty would not be Mosciicky's.

General outlines of Beck's speech were sent to Poland's major ambassadors in the last 24 hours, but the talk in all its carefully worded detail was not finished until early this morning.

It was not known whether Beck made any last-minute changes in the talk because of the two most recent diplomatic developments which startled Europe, Germany's agreement in principle to a non-aggression pact with Latvia, and the resignation of Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov.

By the United Press.

Budapest, May 4 (AP).—Foreign Minister Count Csaky today discounted in a speech to members of Parliament the possibility that Hungary might be induced by Nazi Germany to give up her friendship with Poland.

Csaky's address came shortly after Regent Admiral Horthy dissolved the lower house of Parliament and ordered new elections which are expected to consolidate Hungary's close collaboration with the Rome-Berlin axis.

Observers were quick to stress that the regent's action was taken after Premier Count Teleky and Csaky returned from conferences with Adolf Hitler in Berlin.

Duce Seen as Peacemaker

Rome, May 4 (AP).—The impression grew in diplomatic quarters tonight that Premier Mussolini was endeavoring to solve peacefully the Polish-German dispute over Danzig and the Polish Corridor.

The Fascist press unanimously admonished Poland not to hold out against Reichsfuehrer Hitler, and this was a factor in strengthening the diplomats' belief.

Commons Told Of Barter Deal For U. S. Goods

Chamberlain Says Rubber, Tin Would Buy Cotton, Wheat

By the Associated Press.

London, May 4.—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today negotiations between the United States and Great Britain had been started for the exchange of raw materials each would need in case of war.

Under the proposal, which Chamberlain said was made by Washington, the United States would send cotton and wheat in exchange for British rubber and tin.

Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador, was reported to have discussed the project today with Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, by transatlantic telephone.

Making his announcement in reply to a question by Clement R. Attlee, leader of the Labor opposition, the Prime Minister added: "While fully sharing the United States Government's objections to attempts to substitute barter for ordinary international trade, the government agreed that in the special circumstances of the present time the exchange of materials which would not enter into normal commerce was not open to the same objections provided world prices were not increased."

(In Washington, Secretary of State Hull said increases in world prices would be guarded against in any agreement reached.—Editor's note.)

Members of Commons broke into laughter when Geoffrey L. Mander, opposition Liberal, injected the question:

"May I ask whether the United States would be prepared to exchange some of their ministers for ours?"

Chamberlain declined to answer.

Gen. Groener Dies; Opponent of Nazis

Potsdam, Germany, May 4 (AP).—Gen. Wilhelm Groener, 71, for four years minister of defense under the post-war Republic, died today in the city hospital. Groener was regarded as one of the best strategists in the German army during the war.

In 1931, Groener, who had taken over the ministry of interior in addition to the defense portfolio, outlawed the brown-shirted Nazi storm troops. But when President von Hindenburg dismissed the Bruening regime, Groener lost his position.

Paper Says President 1st Included Danzig

London, May 4 (U.P.).—The left-wing newspaper The Week reported today that in the original text of President Roosevelt's April 15 peace message to the dictators he included Danzig among the 31 nations for whom he asked Nazi-Fascist guarantees of nonaggression.

The text was submitted to Britain and France a week before it was made public, the newspaper said, and the reference to Danzig was eliminated at the suggestion of Anglo-French officials.

Refugee Committee Gives President Encouraging Report

Encouraging reports on progress being made to find new homes for German refugees were presented to President Roosevelt yesterday by a delegation headed by Myron Taylor, vice chairman of the Intergovernmental Committee on Political Refugees.

The President was said to have expressed great satisfaction with work accomplished to date. This included preliminary explorations for large scale settlement of refugees in British Guiana, the Dominican Republic, the Island of Mindanao in the Philippines and other areas.

Among the members of the delegation was Justice Samuel I. Rosenman, of the New York Supreme Court, a close advisor of the President's.

Reviewing the work of the Intergovernmental committee since its organization at the Evian (France) conference last year, Taylor gave credit to the 32 governments represented on the committee for accomplishing insofar as has been possible the objectives outlined at Evian.

Bill Pushed in House

Results will soon be known, said James G. MacDonald, chairman of the President's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees, of the "splendid work" done by the several commissions which are negotiating with prospective host countries.

Other members of the delegation were Judge Joseph Proskauer, Lewis L. Strauss, Henry Ittleson, Sol Stroock, Paul Baerwald, Nathan Straus and George Warren. Illness prevented Rabbi Stephen S. Wise from joining the group at the White House.

Meanwhile, a move to curtail drastically the Wagner-Rogers resolution admitting 20,000 German refugee children is under way in the House, it was learned yesterday, as the joint Congressional committee considering the bill prepared to draw up a favorable report on the measure today.

The committee, composed of three Senators and five Representatives, is expected to indorse the bill in substance, but to propose clarifying amendments that would plug loopholes and make the measure "fool-proof."

However, Representative O'Day (Democrat), of New York, a member of the committee and supporter of the bill, asserted that she had been informed by House members that "the only way the bill can pass is to lower the total to 10,000 and provide that the children be brought in under the quota."

Some Opposition Expressed

As it stands, the resolution would permit 10,000 refugee children to enter the United States in 1939 and 1940, outside present quota restrictions. It specifically provides that the children cannot be admitted unless "satisfactory assurances" are given that they will not become public charges.

Bainbridge Colby Declares Will to Peace Best Defense

Bainbridge Colby, last Secretary of State under President Wilson, yesterday told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that a "will" to peace and reliance on international law should be America's chief bulwarks against foreign conflict.

Opposing alike mandatory neutrality legislation, the Pittman "cash and carry" plan and increased "discretion" for the President, Colby said international law "is not perfect, but it is the best chart we have."

"Keeping out of war is not a matter of sharpshooting legislation aimed at this or that specific danger point," he said. "It depends upon our will to keep out of war."

Calls Last War "Error"

Wilson's white-haired, post-war Secretary of State called America's entrance into the World War an "error" that should not be repeated. Asked if he thought this country should wait for actual invasion, he said emphatically, "No."

"But it is my idea that we ought not to be sucked in as a belligerent in the guise of being a neutral," he said.

As Colby concluded, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, introduced in the Senate a bill to re-enact the "cash and carry" provisions of the present neutrality act. The cash and carry section expired Monday, and Chairman Pittman, of the Foreign Relations Committee, has opposed any but a temporary extension. Pittman's own pending bill would extend cash and carry features to munitions as well as other commodities. The present act would embargo actual arms sales to belligerents.

Referendum Hearings Set

Meanwhile, a Senate Judiciary sub-committee scheduled hearings opening May 10 on a proposed constitutional amendment (similar to the House Ludlow amendment), for a national referendum before entering any war other than one to repel invasion. The proposal was rejected last year by the House, and is sharply opposed by the Administration.

Colby was followed before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by Dorothy Detzer, executive secretary for the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, who urged enactment of the Nye-Bone-Clark mandatory neutrality bill, recommending amendments that would place secondary war materials, along with actual munitions, on the belligerent embargo list.

Today Dr. Lewis H. Stillwell, of Dartmouth College, will testify, and tomorrow the committee will conclude open hearings with George Wharton Pepper on the stand.

Secretary of State Hull will be asked next week if he wishes to appear personally or send a memorandum. By the middle of next week the committee in executive session may get down to actual votes on the half-dozen measures before it.

Closely questioned by committee members, Colby said that in seeking a legislative neutrality formula, one was "striving for an answer that doesn't exist." He said there "is no prescription for keeping out of war."

America's defense position now, he said, is "practically unassailable" and its interests lie in the Western Hemisphere.

"I think we could serve better, he said, "if we remained strong and self sufficient, rather than Quixotic participation in a war unnecessarily."

May Be "Too Touchy"

Again he said: "The danger is not that we would be white-livered, but that we will mitread the danger —that we will be too touchy."

Tomorrow Set As Poll Tax Deadline

Levies Must Be Paid To Vote in Fairfax Primary, Election

Fairfax Bureau of the Post,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2068-M.

Tomorrow will be the last day on which residents of Fairfax County can pay their poll taxes or State capitation taxes for 1936, 1937 and 1938 in order to be qualified to vote in the August primary and November general election.

Political leaders have stated that a person can pay their capitation tax without paying the balance of their tax bill. The taxes are payable at the office of the county treasurer in Fairfax.

Elections will be held this year for State Senator, House of Delegates, some county officials and members of the board of supervisors. The county clerk is elected for an eight-year term which will not expire for another four years.

According to State law, the capitation tax must be paid at least six months prior to the general election.

New residents who have been in the State for one year must pay one year's tax; those residing in Virginia two years must pay two years' taxes and those who have lived in the State for three years will be assessed for 1936, 1937 and 1938. Young people just becoming of age are permitted to be assessed for the year they become of age and are entitled to register and vote.

Fete Scheduled Today

Cameron Valley-Lee Jackson High School will hold its May day celebration today, beginning at 10:30 a. m. Games and contests, including baseball, will be features of the events.

A pageant will be staged in the afternoon when State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, will crown Miss Mary Durrer May queen. Other members of the court are Carl Bridges, king; Ann Scutt, maid of honor; Clara Aten, senior princess; Louise Mundy, junior princess; Josephine Harrison, sophomore princess; Peggy Lyles and Lyndol Oliver, flower girls; Charles Burke and Joseph Kleckner, train bearers; Gus Summers, herald, and Maurice Wooster and Robert Johnson, pennant bearers.

Will Stage Play

Herndon.—The Herndon High School Dramatic Club will present its spring play, "Spring Fever," tonight in the school auditorium, under direction of Mrs. Granville S. White and E. J. Hegler.

May Day will be celebrated today, beginning at 9 a. m., and will include an assembly program, "Spring's Awakening," followed by a preschool party and clinic. A luncheon will be served at noon, under direction of Mrs. Frank Wickers and Mrs. H. A. Seaton. Athletic events will be held in the afternoon.

Singfest Tonight

Falls Church.—Laurel Rebekah Lodge will sponsor a community sing in I. O. O. F. Hall tonight. All civic, church and fraternal orders in the town and vicinity have been invited. Mrs. M. S. Good will act as master of ceremonies. Henshaw's orchestra from McLean will open the concert, which will include numbers by Ballston and Kenmore Councils, Daughters of America, selections by the A Capella Choir and Northern Virginia Choral Society, Charles A. Stewart P.-T. A. and by groups from the Odd Fellows and Rebekah lodges of Northern Virginia.

Saturday night Falls Church Odd Fellows and Rebekas will jointly sponsor a bingo party in I. O. O. F. Hall at 8 p. m., in charge of Earl Martin and M. S. Good.

Sale Scheduled Today

Vienna.—The Ayr Hill Garden Club will hold a plant, flower and food sale tomorrow on the Vienna Library grounds, from 2 until 5 p. m. The committee in charge includes Mrs. John Warncok Echols, Mrs. Joseph T. J. Davis and Mrs. Austin Faulkner.

The club has taken as its major project the landscaping of the section of land between the two railroads in the business section of the town. Miss Richardetta Gibson is chairman of the committee in charge of the work.

Discussion Set Tonight

A group of Fairfax County residents will attend a meeting of the Louisa County Federation tonight to conduct a panel discussion, "Better Schools."

The panel will include Mrs. Elsie Davis Bosley, county supervisor of elementary education; Mrs. Mildred L. Finks, member of the county school board; Mrs. William J. Cleveland, county welfare worker; Mrs. Fannie Lou Seamans, county supervising nurse; Mrs. Florence Jodzies, secretary of the county chamber of commerce; Mrs. Lennig Sweet, of Fairfax, and Principal Melvin B. Landes of the Groveton School.

Cemetery Group Elects

Herndon-Chestnut Grove Cemetery Association at its business meeting elected Arthur Robb, president; William S. Blanchard, vice president, and Miss Sadie Detwiler, secretary-treasurer. Other members of the board of trustees are B. Harry Bready, T. Edgar Reed, Mrs. Richard McMillen and Frederick W. Robinson.

Civic League Elects

Oakton.—The Oakton School and Civic League has elected Don Q. Crowther, president; Mrs. A. B. Trumbo, vice president; Mrs. Warren Beard, secretary, and Mrs. Rufus Pobst, treasurer.

Time to Halt Deficits, Harrison Tells C. of C.

Chamber

ent relief set-up, revision of the securities acts to encourage a "broad and free-flowing" stock market, drastic changes in the Wagner labor relations act, and sharp curtailment of Government expenditures.

W. Gibson Carey, jr., president of the Yale and Towne Manufacturing Co., New York, was elected president of the chamber at a meeting of the board of directors. He succeeds George H. Davis, of Kansas City.

James G. Stahlman, Nashville, Tenn., former president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, said the press could render no greater services than to use its powers to bring the Government and business together into a "unity of understanding, interest and trust." This is "the crying need of today," he declared. He warned that publishers must fight attempts to fetter the press.

H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the Armstrong Cork Co., Lancaster, Pa., in the final address warned that Administration legislation and policies would lead to collectivism and destruction of free institutions. He urged businessmen to fight this tendency by taking a more active interest in public affairs, and undertaking to get their viewpoints across to the public.

A bill creating in the Commerce Department the position of Undersecretary was passed by the Senate and sent to the House. The purpose is to provide an official capacity for Edward J. Noble, who resigned recently as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority to become a dollar-a-year executive assistant to Secretary Hopkins. The position will carry a salary of $10,000 a year. Noble, who is giving special attention to developing foreign trade, has become Hopkins' chief lieutenant.

Sees No Change in Revenues

Senator Harrison, who has become a firm opponent of some Administration policies, told businessmen not to expect any changes in the tax laws which would result "in lowering the total of Government revenues."

Legislation of some kind will be passed, he believed, to end tax exemption for future issues of Government, State and municipal securities, although he was not sure whether this would be in the form of a bill or a constitutional amendment. Nuisance taxes expiring June 30 will be renewed, he said. The existing old age insurance tax of 2 per cent—one on employer and one on employe—will be "frozen" for the next three years, but Harrison did not look for "general or sweeping revision of our tax structure at this sesion."

The Federal Government, Harrison said, would do well to lift a page from the constitution of the ill-fated Confederate States of America. This was that no appropriation could be made except by two-thirds vote of both houses of the Confederate Congress.

"That Fellow Had Something"

"I received a postal card the other day," he drawled, "and penciled on it was this wholesome expression: 'You can no more spend yourself into prosperity than you can drink yourself sober.'

"That fellow had something.

"Debts and interest charges never sleep, and when pay day comes, which it assuredly will, governments, like individuals, must pay or seek refuge in bankruptcy courts and experience an impairment of credit. With world conditions unsettled, threats and rumors of war on every hand, we must place our own house in order.

"Why, in the light of past experience, after six years of trial and continued application of the spending theory, should we not follow prudence and caution, detour from the road we are now traveling, and continue our journey for a while at least over a safer and less dangerous highway."

Emphasizing the need for teamwork on the job of cutting Government expenditures, Harrison told businessmen that the chambers of commerce, in his own State as well as in others, "have played a greater part in forcing large Congressional expenditures than any organization with which I am familiar."

"There isn't a project desired at Squeedunk or Yellow Rabbit or Vinegar Bend," he aid, ". . . that your local chamber of commerce doesn't write its Senator or Representative about, using its influence to obtain appropriations."

Harrison declared the Federal Government had "tapped practically every source of available revenue," but that taxes cannot be reduced "until there is a radical retrenchment in Government expenditures."

Calls for Sane Analysis

Surtaxe, which, with the normal tax now run as high as 79 per cent, "call for a sane analysis," he declared, "to ascertain if the rate has not reached, in the highest brackets, the point of diminishing returns." It is easy to understand, he said, how such high taxes act as a deterrent on investment of capital.

Honor guests at the dinner included Asociate Justices McReynolds and Butler, of the United States Supreme Court; Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of War Woodring, Postmaster General Farley, Secretary of Labor Perkins and Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Hull received a standing ovation when introduced by Davis, retiring president.

In a resolution on trade with China, the chamber declared restriction imposed by the Japanese government were "so drastic and unfair to American interests" that the Government should take steps which would result in a reopening of this market. The chamber favored reciprocal trade agreements to foster trade with Latin America.

Grants to States for public health services, the chamber declared, "should not be considered until the country can afford them."

Opposes Deficit Increase

The chamber opposed an increase in the public debt beyond the present $45,000,000,000 "ceiling." The Commerce Department, it declared, should undertake to fulfill its statutory duty of fostering business. In a resolution outlining a transportation program, the chamber advocated "removal of obstacles to voluntary railroad consolidations and abandonment."

Other speakers were Fred I. Kent, a director of the Bankers Trust Co., New York; I. N. Tate, St. Paul, Minn., and W. A. Klinger, Sioux City, Iowa.

Robert V. Fleming, president, and chairman of the board of the Riggs National Bank, was re-elected treasurer by the board of directors. John W. O'Leary, Chicago, was re-elected chairman of the executive committee. The following were elected vice presidents: Thomas H. McInnerney, president of the National Dairy Products Corporation; Clem D. Johnston, Roanoke, Va.; James S. Kemper, Chicago; O. J. Arnold, Minneapolis; Joseph W. Evans, Houston, Tex., and W. C. Mullendore, Los Angeles.

Carey Says Capitalistic System Should Be Kept Highly Fluid

W. Gibson Carey, jr., New York, elected by the United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday as its new president, declared at a press conference that it was highly important to keep the capitalistic system "fluid to the maximum degree."

The greatest fault with the wage-hour law, and many other New Deal laws, in his opinion, is that they violate this principle.

"Legislation is not well-advised," he declared, "when it proceeds so far in advance of the thinking of the business community as to bewilder businessmen, destroying their confidence and thus preventing them from undertaking plans essential to industrial progress."

Carey said the chamber would attempt in every way, by pressure from back home and by direct appeal to Congress, to secure the enactment of the changes which it feels should be made in New Deal laws.

The most optimistic factor in the present situation, and the one holding out the largest measure of hope for business recovery, he believes, is that the public apparently is developing greater awareness of the nature of free institutions and what is necessary to maintain them.

Australian Official Calls on President To Discuss Trade

Establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and Australia and discussions to increase trade between the two countries are receiving consideration in preliminary conversations between President Roosevelt and key State Department officials and Stanley M. Bruce, Australian high commissioner in London, it was learned yesterday.

After a call at the White House, Bruce was reluctant to give details of his conferences. It is understood he is presenting counter proposals in response to suggestions made here during a visit last December.

State Department officials said there was no intention at this time to enter into a barter arrangement with Australia to provide the United States with strategic raw materials in line with the Administration's rearmament program. They also said they had been informed Bruce lacked authority to begin trade agreement negotiations.

Vandenberg Calls 'Hysteria' Prop Of Florida Canal

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday said "war hysteria and numbness of Congress to big extravagances" were the main props supporting the Florida ship canal project.

"If it were not for these factors, the Florida canal project would be just as sure of defeat today as it has been heretofore."

But Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, rallying his forces for a battle in the Senate, probably next week, on his bill to revive the project, predicted victory.

8 Foods Designated Under 'Stamp' Program

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday named eight foods as surplus which may be purchased with stamps under the Department's new "Stamps for Food" program, intended to divert the Nation's excess foodstuffs to the needy.

The foods designated were butter, shell eggs, dry edible beans, dried prunes, oranges, grapefruit, wheat and whole-wheat flour and corn meal. The program will be tried out in six cities.

Sigma Nu Phi Convenes Here

High Court of Chancery of Sigma Nu Phi, legal fraternity, opened here yesterday with an open house at the Washington headquarters, 1755 Q street northwest.

Business sessions will begin at 10 a. m. today with a meeting of the credentials committee in the Raleigh Hotel, followed by reception of the delegates and a convention ball in the evening.

The first session of the High Court of Chancery will begin at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Raleigh. Election of officers will follow. A banquet in honor of the newly elected officers in the grand ballroom of the Raleigh will conclude the convention.

Chest Policies For Suburbs Discussed

Standards Required By Rural Units Outlined by Willett

Standards required of suburban agencies for membership in the Community Chest next year were discussed by Chest officials and representatives of 50 outlying welfare organizations in an all-day meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

In the morning session, Herbert L. Willett, director, told how agency applications will be passed upon, and enumerated benefits and privileges accruing to prospective members besides defining standards to be met by agencies that would qualify for membership.

The afternoon session was devoted to a question and answer period participated in by suburban executives and metropolitan officials.

Washington executives attending were:

Earl A. Nash, chairman of public relations committee; Charles H. Dodd, Salvation Army executive; Ross Garrett, of Health Security Administration; Mrs. Louisa S. Roberts, executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies.

Representatives of suburban agencies were: from Alexandria—Mrs. Philip Buck, Camp Fire Girls of Alexandria, Va.; Flora Krause Carey, Alexandria Community Clinic; Harry P. Methodists Add 5 Bishoprics In Unification

2 Men Chosen; Others To Be Selected at First Conference

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 4.—Five additional bishops will result from unification of the three Methodist churches.

There are now 28 active bishops of the North and South branches. Distribution of membership in the six newly created jurisdictions calls for 33 bishops.

Two of the five already have been selected. They are Dr. James H. Straughn, of Baltimore, and Dr. John Calvin Broomfield, of Fairmount, Va., both chosen by the Methodist Protestant Church which previously had no bishops.

Five Retiring

The others will be chosen by the first general conference of the new church next April. That conference also will select five successors to bishops who will reach the retirement age.

Those retiring are Edwin Holt Hughes, Washington; Edgar Blake, Detroit; Charles L. Mead, Kansas City; Wallace E. Brown, Chattanooga, and John L. Nuelsen, Geneva, Switzerland.

The bishops will be appointed as follows:

Southeastern jurisdiction, including Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, the Carolinas and Florida, seven bishops in place of eight now active in the area.

Northeastern jurisdiction, including the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware, six bishops instead of four.

In North Central Area

North central jurisdiction, including Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and the Dakotas, six bishops in place of four.

South central, including Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana and New Mexico, six bishops where six now serve.

Western jurisdiction, including all Rocky Mountain States except New Mexico and extending West to the Pacific Coast, four bishops where four now serve.

Central jurisdiction, made up of all colored churches, four bishops instead of two.

Meanwhile, the conference today adopted as a rule of its new church a Southern church provision that no church building may be formally dedicated until it is free of debt.

Outlawed Ulster Republican Army Ordered To Stand By for Any Emergency Call sons at Glendary, Omagh, Inniskilling, Armagh, Belfast, Holywood and Ballykinlar in Ulster. Each garrison has about 1,000 troops.

Thus far British troops have not been used against the I. R. A. forces, which have been handled entirely by the armed Ulster police, numbering 3,000 regular and 13,000 auxiliaries called up recently after a wave of republican terrorism.

Standing by Pledges

London, May 4 (INS).—A mile-long parade of anti-conscription demonstrators marched through London's west end tonight in the first large-scale indication of British feeling against Prime Minister Chamberlain's bill calling for compulsory military service.

The demonstration came only a few hours after Chamberlain moved the second reading of the conscription bill in the House of Commons and estimated it would provide 800,000 more men for Britain's fighting forces within three years.

With the tense international horizon still clouded by the abrupt resignation of Soviet Foreign Affairs Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, the prime minister took the opportunity to emphasize again that Britain will stand by her pledges of military aid to Poland and other eastern European countries in the event of Nazi or Fascist aggression. He said:

"There can be no doubt that the determination of the British people as evidenced in this bill has created the most profound respect throughout Europe."

The huge parade against conscription, estimated to have contained more than 5,000 men and women, tied up West End traffic for hours. The demonstrators wore red and white sashes imprinted with the words:

"No conscription."

In announcing the second reading of the bill, the prime minister revealed that his government is revising it so that it does not include the calling up of men from Ulster (northern Ireland).

Judge Lauer Now Linked in Smuggling

Gov. Lehman Submits U. S. Attorney's Data To Legislature

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 4.—An investigation into smuggling begun six months ago by the Government on information supplied by a pro-Hitler maid who was discharged by State Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Lauer turned up a postscript today: Accusations against the judge himself were presented to legislative committees.

Mrs. Lauer on April 11 was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $2,500 on a plea of guilty that she conspired with Albert N. Chaperau, an international adventurer, to slip into this country on her behalf some $1,833 worth of Parisian clothing and thus save $660 in duty.

In Albany, Gov. Lehman today forwarded to the Senate and Assembly judiciary committees a letter in which United States Attorney John T. Cahill, of New York, asserted that the long inquiry had uncovered "certain evidence . . . relating to the participation" by Judge Lauer himself in smuggling activities.

"I cannot understand it," Justice Lauer commented.

Cahill reported that in 1937, returning from Europe with Mrs. Lauer, the judge had "omitted" to declare $5,000 worth of jewelry and other articles and subsequently had made penalty and forfeiture payments of $10,400.

Again, the prosecutor asserted, Justice Lauer had "admitted" he was present when Chaperau delivered the smuggled clothing which later landed both himself and Mrs. Lauer in the dock.

The legislative committees arranged to study next Monday the case of the justice—who is paid an annual salary of $25,000.

Simpson Confirmed As Md. Postmaster

The Senate confirmed yesterday the appointment of Thomas M. Simpson as postmaster of Hagerstown, Md.

A native of Libertytown, Md., Simpson attended Notre Dame Academy there and came to Hagerstown in 1909, where he has been engaged in the wholesale and retail tobacco business since 1920.

He was chairman of the board of license commissioners at the time of his appointment as acting postmaster September 23, 1938, to fill the vacancy created by the death of Postmaster Jacob T. Hartle. His appointment was recommended by the then Representative David J. Lewis, whose campaign for the United States Senate nomination, Mr. Simpson managed in Washington County last year.

He is married and the father of two children.

Brilliant Welcome Awaits Nicaraguan President Today

Parade

Flags—the Red, White and Blue of the United States and the white and blue of Nicaragua—mark the route of today's parade. They float from lamp posts and trees from Union Station to the Capitol, along Constitution avenue to Fourth street and from that point along Pennsylvania avenue to Treasury place and the southeast gate of the White House grounds. Besides flags, the route is adorned with seals of the two republics.

As President Somoza and Senora de Somoza step from the train the Marine Band Drum and Bugle Corps will sound ruffles and flourishes. Then the visitors will be escorted through an aisle of marines and Bluejackets to the Presidential reception room of the terminal.

Here President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt will greet the Nicaraguan President and First Lady, and Gen. Somoza then will present the members of his suite. These are Dr. Manuel Cordero Reyes, minister of foreign affairs; First Lieut. Octavio Sacasa, aide, and Second Lieut. Pedro Nolasco Romero, aide.

Those invited to attend as members of the official reception committee are Vice President and Mrs. Garner, the Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes, the Speaker and Mrs. Bankhead, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, the Secretary of Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring, Attorney General Murphy, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Farley, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Swanson, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Ickes, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, Secretary of Labor Perkins, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Welles, Senator and Mrs. Pittman, Representative and Mrs. McReynolds, the Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. Craig, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Leahy, the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Holcomb, and Dr. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union.

President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt will escort the Somozas to the guard of honor drawn up outside the station. As they appear, an artillery battery will fire a salute of 21 guns, and the United States Marine Band will play the Nicaraguan national anthem and then "The Star Spangled Banner."

Ford Official Faces Probe of His Citizenship

By the Associated Press.

The House Immigration Committee yesterday decided to ask the Labor Department for a report on the citizenship status of W. J. Cameron, of Dearborn, Mich., official of the Ford Motor Co.

The committee acted after Representative Lesinski (Democrat), Michigan, had contended that Cameron was issued citizenship papers by Federal Judge Arthur Tuttle, of Detroit, "without even the formality of Cameron filing a declaration of intention" to become an American citizen. (Cameron was born in Hamilton, Ont., Canada).

Chairman Dickstein (Democrat), New York, told the committee, "I have a file on Cameron that will knock you cuckoo."

Discussion of Cameron's citizenship arose during consideration of a bill by Lesinski to exempt aliens from the illiteracy test for citizenship if they entered the United States prior to 1917. No action was taken on the bill.

He is survived by his daughter, Mrs. Helen K. Jurden, Treasury Department employe; a sister, Mrs. Nannie K. Wright, Aiken, S. C.; three brothers, Dr. J. B. Keister, D. E. Keister and Emory Keister.

Planetarium Topic Of Essay Contest

The need for a planetarium in Washington is the subject of a children's essay contest announced yesterday by the National Capital Planetarium Committee.

Boys and girls in public, parochial or private schools in the District of Columbia and nearby Virginia and Maryland, including Baltimore, are eligible. They must be between the ages of 10 and 17. Manuscripts are to be not over 1,000 words. A first prize of $25, five second prizes of $10 each, and ten third prizes of $5 each are offered.

Judges will be Asssitant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison; the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, rector of Georgetown University; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Dr. James Stokely, director of the Buhl Planetarium, Pittsburgh; and Miss Dorothy Bennett, associate editor of Sky, American Museum of Natural History, New York. Essays should be sent to Capt. J. F. Hellweg, superintendent, Naval Observatory.

James Forrester Funeral Today

Funeral services for James Forrester, former president of the Brotherhod of Railway Clerks, will be held at 9:30 a. m. today at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, Grant Circle northwest, with the Rev. Louis Albert officiating. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetary.

Mr. Forrester died Monday. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rose Yates Forrester.

6 Clubs Plead No Defense in Liquor Cases

Alexandria Groups Face Possible Loss of Licenses

Six nearby Virginia social and fraternal clubs face suspension of their "club-type" liquor licenses after allegedly admitting violations of Old Dominion liquor laws in a hearing before the Virginia Alcohol Beverage Control Board in Alexandria yesterday.

Included in the clubs that pleaded nolo contendere (no defense) in the hearing conducted by Wade M. Miles, director of the A. B. C. division of licenses, and Stanley Clark, assistant attorney general, attached to the board, was the Washington Golf and Country Club, in Arlington County.

Others were the V. F. W. Social Club, the Alva Aerie Lodge, Fraternal Order of Eagles, and the following colored clubs: Departmental Progressive Club, Esquire Social Club, and the I. E. P. O. E. W. Lodge, No. 48, all of Alexandria.

The hearing was precipitated by a recent State-conducted investigation. Following the investigation, the clubs were charged with violations of the "club-type" license which permits dispensing of wines and beers but bars sale of liquor to members, though permitting the drinking of liquor purchased elsewhere.

Officials said the clubs had violated the regulations by sale of liquor to members purchased by club personnel, and by several systems whereby perpetual stocks of whisky for members' use, though for non-profit reasons, were kept on hand.

Clubs that pleaded no defense yesterday face suspension of their liquor licenses for at least 30 days and payment of "the reasonable costs of investigation."

Clubs coming before the board in today's hearing are the Belle Haven Country Club, in Fairfax County, the B. P. O. E. Lodge, No. 758, of Alexandria, and the Pride of Arlington, colored club in Arlington County.

Pay-Hour Charges Filed Against ACL

Richmond, Va., May 4 (AP).—John J. Babe, representing Elmer F. Andrews, wage-hour administrator, filed a petition in equity in Federal District Court here today asking an injunction to restrain the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad from alleged violation of certain sections of the wage-hour law.

The petition charged the railroad arbitrarily assigned houses, some of which were not in existence, to maintenance employes and charged amounts bearing no relation to, and in excess of, the amounts which were declared reasonable for such living quarters.

The railroad further was charged with selling foodstuffs to its employes at a profit in violation of the law.

New Washington Statue Proposed

A statue of George Washington for the Capitol grounds was proposed yesterday by Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia.

The statue would be a replica in bronze of one standing on steps of the Subtreasury Building in New York, under provisions of the Robertson resolution. He asked that the statue of John Marshall, now on the west terrace of the Capitol grounds, be relocated on John Marshall Place.

Carson Says Veto Curtails Prince Georges Road Plans

Gov. O'Conor's Rejection of Measure To License Pinball Machines Cuts Off Source of Revenue for Program

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Telephone GReenwood 3539.

William A. Carson, chairman of the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners, declared yesterday the governor's veto of the slot-machine bill will result in sharp curtailment of the county's road improvement and maintenance program.

Carson said the commissioners had planned to use all proceeds from slot-machine licenses on county roads. The measure, which provided a $5,000 license fee for distributors and $175 for each machine, was expected to raise approximately $100,000 a year.

This year, he pointed out, the county has no road funds of its own. In October, an $84,000 rebate of gasoline tax funds will be received from the State Roads Commission, but $22,000 of this must be turned over to the incorporated towns.

The $62,000 balance, Carson said, would be sufficient to care for only a small percentage of the requested road improvements.

The commissioners had urged the Governor to sign the slot-machine bill, along with two other bills exempting bingo and bridge played for money and prizes from provisions of the antigambling laws.

"The board's indorsement of the bingo and bridge bills, however," Carson said, "was contingent on the Governor's approving the slot-machine bill. Since he did not see fit to legalize slot machines, we feel that he should also veto the bingo and bridge bills. Such games as these are as much gambling as anything else."

Beltsville Grange to Meet

Beltsville.—The Beltsville Grange, oldest in Prince Georges County, will hold its golden jubilee celebration Tuesday at 8 p. m. The meeting will be open to the public.

Mrs. Olive B. Beall and Miss Mary S. Hall, charter members, will be presented with golden sheaf certificates in recognition of 50 years continuous membership in the organization. A history of the grange will be given by Mrs. Beall. The celebration will be held in the grange hall at Beltsville.

The grange also will honor Edward Ulle and Miss Sarah Magruder, charter members who have moved from the community.

Silver star certificates for 25 years of continuous membership will be awarded to Prof. and Mrs. Jacob E. Metzger and Mrs. T. B. Symons.

Thomas Roy Brookes, master of the Maryland State Grange, will be toastmaster and principal speaker. The program will include music, dramatic entertainment, presentation of distinguished guests and roll call of granges.

L. L. Hurley is master of the Beltsville Grange, which includes some of the most prominent agricultural leaders in the county. In 1889, when it was founded, there were 33 members. The membership now is 108.

Wagner Calls His Health Bill Economy Move

Sickness Responsible For Third of Relief, Huge Loss, He Says

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, author of the national health bill, told a Senate sub-committee yesterday that the measure, which would cost at $80,000,000 next year, "would result in the practice of economy in the highest sense of the term."

Asserting that the capitalized cost of illness and premature death in the United States was $10,000,000,000 a year, Wagner added that "sickness is responsible for fully one-third of all dependency on public relief or private charity."

By increasing expenditure for preventive as well as curative medicine "we could save the lives of 70,000 mothers and infants who die each year, as well as a large proportion of those doomed by venereal disease, malaria, cancer, pneumonia, diphtheria and tuberculosis," said Senator Wagner.

Health Bill of 3 Billions

He told the sub-committee that the American people, "already meeting a staggering bill for health services exceeding $3,000,000,000 a year, ask only that 'our Government take health from the list of luxuries to be bought only by money and add it to the list containing the inalienable rights of every citizen.'"

Senator Wagner stressed that his bill involved "no intention to put the Federal Government into the business of furnishing medical care, or to interfere with the States in the licensing of medical and other practitioners."

He said that "nothing in the bill requires the States to establish compulsory health insurance," and that "no new hospital construction or expansion would be financed or aided by the Federal Government except upon a clearing showing that existing facilities, private as well as public, are inadequate to satisfy the community's needs."

Grants-in-Aid Planned

The bill, introduced more than two months ago, would authorize a minimum new expenditure of $80,000,000 next year, increasing to $250,000,000 by 1942.

Under a system of grants-in-aid, the Federal Government would expand the present program of assisting States to provide health services during maternity, infancy and childhood, and for crippled children. It would help States to further preventive public health work and medical care programs, build needed hospitals, and establish systems of sickness insurance.

Josephine Roche, chairman of the interdepartmental committee to coordinate health and welfare activities, spoke in favor of the bill, which, she said, "would translate into reality the recommendations of the interdepartmental committee." Others who supported the measure were Abel Wolman, president of the American Public Health Association, and Fred K. Hoehler, director of the American Public Welfare Association.

Governor Sends Trout to Roosevelt

Center Ossipee, N. H., May 4 (AP).—For the seventh successive year a mess of New Hampshire trout packed in ice and moss in a colonial casket, and bearing the greetings of Governor Murphy of New Hampshire, was shipped today to President Roosevelt.

The trout, measuring 10 to 14 inches and weighing 1-2 to 1 1-2 pounds each, were taken from Mystery pond by Erborn Wood, gentleman farmer and owner of the private pool, and James Hennerbury of Amesbury, Mass.

Jobs for 400 Seen As Work Is Pushed On 2 Md. Spans

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—The consulting engineers for the State Roads Commission reported today the work on the Susquehanna and Potomac River bridges would be in full swing in about two months, with 200 men at work on each.

The John E. Greiner Co. said that at the Potomac River span the abutment and piers on the Maryland side were about 50 per cent completed, with work not so far advanced on the Virginia side.

Preliminary work on the Susquehanna bridge, including diversion of a stream on the Cecil County side, is nearly complete. The abutments on the Cecil side are 50 per cent completed and work has begun on the piers which will uphold the spans.

Serious Fire Hazards Shown in Va. Hospital

Richmond, Va., May 4 (AP).—If a fire "should really get started" in the center group of buildings of the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, 43 per cent of the whole institution easily might be destroyed, a report prepared for the State hospital board said today.

Under authority granted by the board, Dr. Henry Already has employed architects to make a survey of the cost of fireproofing buildings at Marion.

King Bars Bill Lifting Age Rule In Civil Service

His Effort to Raise Cadet Quota for D. C. Then Is Blocked

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committe, succeeded in blocking passage yesterday of the bill that would remove age requirement qualifications of persons taking Civil Service examinations.

"Don't you realize that as things are now practically nobody in the Senate could take a Civil Service examination for any job?" Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, asked in his attempt to get the measure passed.

Senator Mead called attention to the fact that this is national employment week and that the President has asked everyone to join in finding jobs for men over 40, but Senator King said he wished more time to study the bill.

Later, Senator King was blocked in his attempt to get the District's quota of cadets at West Point raised frmo four o nine when he told Senator McNary this would give the District preferential treatment over the States.

300 Educators To Convene Here Today

Youth Problems to Be Considered at Afternoon Sessions

Representatives of more than 300 educational associations and institutions today will open the twenty-second annual conference of the American Council on Education at 10 a. m. in the Mayflower Hotel. The conference will last two days.

The annual report of the president, George F. ook, will be read at this morning's meeting. It will be followed by a discussion of general trends in education by Vivian T. Thayer, educational director of the Ethical Culture Schools in New York, and an address by Ben M. Cherrington, chief of the division of cultural relations of the State Department. Herbert E. Hawkes, dean of Columbia College, Columbia University, will preside.

Five conference sections will meet this afternoon to discuss American youth. Topics will include the CCC, colored youth and vocational adjustment experiments in co-operation with the United States Employment Service; financial problems of educational institutions, educational motion pictures, teacher education and the co-operative study of secondary school standards.

Dean Hawkes and Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the (London) Times, will speak at the formal banquet tonight, at which Grayson N. Kefauver, dean of the school of education of Stanford University, will be toastmaster.

A panel discussion on general education in the United States will open tomorrow's session, followed by a business meeting and a buffet luncheon at the Cosmos Club. Daniel A. Prescott, of Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., and Mortimer J. Adler, of the University of Chicago, will address the afternoon session.

'Story of Castles' and 'Stagecoach' Win Acclaim in Widely Separated Categories; Short Subjects Add Interest to Bills

"THE STORY OF VERNON AND IRENE CASTLE." RKO-Radio picturization of "My Husband" and "My Memories" of Vernon Castle" by Irene Castle, screen play by Richard Sherman, adaptation by Oscar Hammerstein 2d and Dorothy Yost, co-starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, with Edna May Oliver, Walter Brennan, Lew Fields, Etienne Girardot, Janet Beecher, Rolfe Sedan, Leonid Kinskey, Robert Strange, Douglas Walton, Clarence Derwent, Sonny Lamont, Frances Mercer, Victor Varconi and Donald MacBride. Song, "Only When You're in My Arms" by Con Conrad, Herman Ruby and Bert Kalmar. Directed by H. C. Potter, with Irene Castle as technical adviser. Previewed Wednesday, April 19. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

"STAGECOACH." Walter Wanger picturization of a story, "Stage to Lordsburg," by Ernest Haycox, screen play and dialogue by Dudley Nichols, with Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Andy Devine, John Carradine, Thomas Mitchell, George Bancroft, Louise Platt, Donald Meek, Berton Churchill, Tim Holt, Chris Martin, Elvira Rios, Francis Ford, Florence Lake, Walter McGrail, Brenda Fowler, Tom Tyler, Bryant Washburn, Duke Lee, Yakima Canutt and Cornelius Keefe. Directed by John Ford. Previewed Tuesday, April 25. At the Palace Theater.

Biographical drama that strikes too close to the contemporary era—as was the case with "The Great Ziegfeld"—always is a little dangerous. Too many people knew and remember all of the people and most of the incidents concerned in the story. The pitfalls in this ominous situation seem to have been nicely avoided in RKO-Keith's production of "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," which opened its Washington engagement on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater yesterday.

REID

"The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" was adapted from two of Irene Castle's books relating to her and her late husband and their amazing career as two dancers who soared from comparative obscurity to world fame. You will find these data in the small-type paragraph preceding these observations.

The film narrative of the lives of these two fabulous dancers, who introduced an entirely new ballroom vogue on both sides of the Atlantic, is initiated back in the days when Vernon Castle was "second comic" with Lew Fields in the latter's musical comedy production of "The Hen Pecks," proceeds to the accidental meeting of the comedian who never yet had thought of dancing and the ambitious young amateur parlor performer in New Rochelle, N. Y., and then carries on their romance, struggle and final emergence as two world figures. The picture's final episode, of course, is tragic. It adheres with rigid fidelity to the facts surrounding the death of Vernon Castle on an Army flying field at Fort Worth, Tex., after he had survived all of the hazards of sky-fighting on the Western Front in France.

Is Nostalgic Romance

But it is not in the faithful depiction of the lives of the Castles that this subject will prove preeminent in the estimation of many an old-timer of the theater and the night spots. There is projected here, just as there was in "Alexander's Ragtime Band," a revival of the past that is irresistible to those who are old enough to have known it. All of the old tunes that were the hits of the day between 1911 and 1918 are tossed into the sound track, at one time or another, and the Castles' dances, executed to their measures, bring back eager recollections of the origin of the one-step, the Castle-Walk, the Maxixe, the Tango, and all of the other ballroom innovations that stamped Vernon and Irene Castle as two of the creative geniuses of their day.

It was quite a task that was assigned to Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers when they were asked to impersonate the Castles in this film, but they do it beautifully and with an astonishingly faithful reproduction of all the steps that the Castles invented. Not only do they dance the parts flawlessly—and as has been intimated here before, there is not so much dancing in the picture as you might expect—but they act them with intelligence and conviction. Ginger Rogers has proved before on the screen that she can act a bit as well as dance, but never has she betrayed the emotional intensity and power that she brings to play in her present role.

Strong Supporting Cast

There are many others in the cast who lend added interest and strength to the movement of the story. Foremost among them are Walter Brennan, Irene's mentor and, in a manner of speaking, guardian angel, and Edna May Oliver, the austere dowager who takes the Castles over, in Paris, introduces them to the most fashionable night club, when they are broke and desperately in need of an engagement, and then becomes the manager of their American tours. Lew Fields, in the early sequences, portrays himself in the resurrected scenes from "The Hen Pecks," in which Vernon Castle came to his first prominence on Broadway. Mr. Fields, rejuvenated by an auburn toupee, is almost as funny now as he was back in 1911. After all, as I have said, he is only playing himself. The others in the cast are less important, but uniformly capable.

The chief auxiliary on the new bill at Keith's is Walt Disney's "Goofy and Wilbur," the Technicolor study of the overpowering romance between a hound dog and a grasshopper. Of course it fails to make sense but it does succeed in creating a great amount of laughter.

The Pathe News is the additional complement of a feature that should appeal to all amusement-seekers, but especially to those who entertain vivid recollections of the personalities and events to which it is dedicated.

It is remarkable the amount of drama that can be derived from a comparatively short ride in a Western stagecoach. With nine sharply contrasted characters aboard, the dramatic possibilities apparently are limitless. In his direction of Walter Wanger's production of "Stagecoach," which took possession of the screen yesterday at Loew's Palace Theater, John Ford has taken advantage of them all.

Some analogy was drawn, I believe, between "Grand Hotel" and "Stagecoach" after the current picture had been previewed. They are of the same stripe. That is to say that in "Stagecoach" a group of unacquainted people are thrown together and out of their individual and common problems is evolved a drama that not only is exciting in incident but moving in its phychological studies.

It was an odd "passenger list" that this particular stage carried. Among its riders were a shady lady who had been made a social outcast by the Purity League, or whatever it was, of the town in which she had been practicing the oldest profession; an escaped jailbird, bent on an errand of retribution; a smug and voluble banker, spouting platitudinous speeches with a satchel of $50,000 of stolen money on his lap; an Army officer's wife trying to reach her husband before she had her baby; a self-effacing little whisky drummer, whom everybody mistook for a minister; a suave gambler, with a high regard for lovely women in distress; a fallen doctor, become a prodigious bibbler; the hard-boiled marshal, riding "shotgun" with the driver, and the driver, himself, much disturbed by domestic difficulties that seemed to him more important than the imminent raid by the Apaches, out on the war path for no good to anyone, not even themselves.

Strange Things Happen

The Army lady had her baby, en route; the renegade physician snapped out of a terrific binge to deliver the child; the shady lady and the escaped convict revealed themselves as the most understanding and compassionate members of the harassed little band; the marshall proved himself a good scout and the driver was appropriately comical. There are overtones of comedy, pathos and tragedy in almost every foot of "Stagecoach." One never knows what is going to happen next—and it usually does! What finally comes off to lend the film its final and overwhelming fillip is the Apache attack and the running fight that continues longer than any other such episode I ever have seen reflected on the silver sheet. The United States Cavalry puts in its appearance just in time to save the day.

That may all sound like a large dish of what is technically known as "hokum," and perhaps it is. At the same time, it is engrossing, intelligent and thoroughly adult entertainment, even if it does fall in the stigmatic classification of the "Western." "Stagecoach" frankly is a "Western." It could not be anything else. But it is one of the best.

The romantic leads in the story are played by Claire Trevor and John Wayne, as the "soiled dove" —who proves to be the least soiled of any of them—and the escaped prisoner, willing to go back to jail as soon as he has paid off a personal debt to the Plummer boys. He pays off that debt just before the final fadeout of the last reel—and he does not go back to jail, thanks to that far-sighted marshal.

The marshal is played in his best manner by George Bancroft. But the fellow who really "steals the picture" is Thomas Mitchell, in the role of the doctor. Wait until you see him! Andy Devine, John Carradine, Louise Platt, Donald Meek, Berton Churchill, Tim Holt, Francis Ford, Florence Lake, Walter McGrail, Bryant Washburn and a host of others contribute to the excitement as well as the integrity of one of the most engaging melodramas that has come along in months.

The Western setting of the picture has given opportunity for some unusually effective photography, with occasional long-shots that are almost like paintings. That Indian attack is filmed with an eye single to its melodramatic and thrilling effect. How some of the riders, shot off their ponies, ever escaped death always will remain a mystery to this dumb intelligence.

"Little Gold Fish," a color cartoon; "The Story of Alfred Nobel," a "Passing Parade" subject, and the "News of the Day" round out a surpassing bill at the Palace this week.

Ex-G-Man Reveals Secret War Code

The famous wartime Wofrgen secret code is being taught "Enemy Agent" Margaret Lindsay by spy-chasing, former FBI agent, Leon Turrou.

Miss Lindsay, learning the wartime code for her forthcoming picture, "Enemy Agent," discovered it can be tapped with a telegraph key, a typewriter—even played like scale exercises on a piano.

She is learning to "send" in the code while actually transcribing a letter from shorthand notes.

Revivify Creators of Modern Dance

FRED ASTAIRE AND GINGER ROGERS reading in the wrong direction, to make the title come out even, as they appear in the costellar roles in "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," which opened yesterday on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. The nostalgic story presented in the film dates back to 1911 and revives many old and fragrant memories.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 4.—Heil Warner Brothers! And everyone who had anything to do with the Nazi spy picture! Intestinal fortitude was the watchword for every member of the cast, Paul Lukas, because he forgot to be a matinee idol and will be hissed by every loyal American — his performance was that startling.

HOPPER

Eddie Robinson's belief in the story was so great he was willing and did submerge himself in anything but a fat part.

Francis Lederer, who has spent most of the money he earned in this country, for peace, plays a traitor to both countries. He not only wanted to do it, but begged for it.

There isn't a performance in the picture that isn't stark realism stripped to the bone of every pretense. And when you hear, "You are under arrest," you look quickly to see if they mean you! It's something new in moving pictures, and I only hope won't bring a locust swarm of followers tearing down what this picture tries to teach. Which is: America, loo' out and be prepared!

A European extra was overheard on the set the other day saying, "No, I never go to movies. I'm tired of looking at those flat American faces." Our dollars are flat, too, but she doesn't seem to mind those.

Grover Whalen, concentrated on art, forgot entertainment at the New York Fair, so called on Billy Rose to help him out. Now he's appointed Mrs. Vincent Astor to promote those smart, musical functions. They're having quite a tussle at the San Francisco Fair. Ladies of the city worked for years to put it over, now along comes a political appointee to supersede them!

A big producer's son begged his father to give him a break on a story. He did. Son worked out a very good one but was in a frenzy about the title, when along came Bob Hope to suggest he call it "Bank Night."

Broadway is putting on a lot of revivals at $1 top. Which later will be sent on the road.

In spite of Mischa Auer's single week in New York to see the sights, he says he got around—even to the art gallery. Had a date with Egyptian mummies!

Happy to know Bette Davis gets a vacation after "The Old Maid." I should title this "All Passion Spent"—"Dark Victory," "Jaurez," "Old Maid" with an emotional peak for each scene. And Bette gives—even at rehearsals. No human can stand shattering nerve forces like that without a let-up. Incidentally, her cloths for "Juarez" were among the most beautiful ever seen on the screen. But you could circle her waist with one hand.

What a row Guilaroff has cooked with Antoine. Because the former claims to have invented the baby bob. I do know that Antoine gave Claudette Colbert hers for "Midnight," which was long before Guilaroff started talking about them. And what would you call Annabella's—which she had for "Suez?"

That preview for women only, with Irene Dunne as the hostess for "Invitation to Happiness," is quite a stunt. We can go in lounging pajamas without makeup, even skip our mascara, without fear that any male will see us as we really are.

Trouble has already started on "The Lady of the Tropics." Director Jack Conway fell 15 feet and all but broke his arm.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 4 (INS).—My private hunch that Loretta Young would forget any grievance she had against Twentieth Century-Fox is wrong. I had seen her talking so often to both Darryl Zanuck and Joseph Schenck at various parties and her notices were so good in "Alexander Graham Bell," that I had an idea when an announcement came it would be a reunion with the studio where she was a star for so many years. But apparently Loretta is determined to free lance, so she will make her very first outside movie, "Whose Wife," for Walter Wanger at United Artists.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The official announcement of "Whose Wife" will be made at the U. A. convention with considerable fanfare, for the story is authored by that well-known writing team, Gene Towne and Graham Baker, with Tay Garnett directing. More serious than the title indicates, "Whose Wife" has a South American locale, which should be very good now with that mart looming so importantly.

Wistful, blonde Lillian Gish, who, at the age of 42 retains her youthful appeal of 20 years ago, has been invited to return to Hollywood. David Selznick feels she would be perfect for the role of the wife in "Intermezzo." Leslie Howard plays the husband and the glamorous new Swedish find, Ingrid Bergman, the other woman. During the years Lillian has been out of the movies (she made only a brief return after she left D. W. Griffith) her success on the stage has been notable. "Hamlet," "Star Wagon" and "Dear Octopus" are among her stage plays. I wouldn't be surprized to hear that she has accepted the Selznick offer, for she previously discussed "The Underpup" with Joe Pasternak, but he felt the part was too unimportant.

During John Galsworthy's lifetime he was extremely bitter against motion pictures. I interviewed him in Palm Springs, Calif., some 13 years ago and he told me he never wanted to see one of his novels on the screen because he thought Hollywood would ruin any story. Since his death his estate has sold some of his books. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, for instance, bought "The Forsyte Saga," the best known of Galsworthy's novels, and will make it in England. Possibly if Galsworthy had lived and seen the improvements in motion pictures, he would have changed his mind. I have always had a feeling that I talked with him at a bad time, for he was sick and trying to regain his health in the desert, just as I was then.

Chatter in Hollywood: Charlie Martin, who was head man in Joan Crawford's life, has been weeping on several handy shoulders since she said adieu to him. Whether it's just one of those temporary partings, even Joan's most intimate friends cannot say.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Lew Brice, Fannie's brother, and Louise Brooks in a ringside seat at Slapsie Maxie's; Rudy Vallee and Marjorie Weaver seldom miss an evening together, even though her heart is elsewhere; William Brockway, M-G-M technician, had a big day when his wife presented him with a daughter and he sold a story to Warners in one fell swoop; Kay Francis moves back into her own home this week and friends won't be surprised to hear of her marriage to Baron Barnekow; Henry Ginsberg, Selznick's general manager, and Mrs. G. will welcome the stork in another four weeks; A. C. Blumenthal flew East today and this time it isn't on matrimonial trouble, for he and Peggy Fears have been together every minute since they kissed and made up; Rosa Ponselle, back among us, was a guest of Vic Orsatti following the "Rose of Washington Square" preview; Wendy Barrie, Sonja Henie, McKinley Bryant were other guests.

Mary Pickford is teaing the United Artists conventioners at her home, Sunday; Diana Manners, now in Indianapolis, has the measles, of all things; Dennis O'Keefe, who generally shares his girl friends with his pals, Addison Randall and John Carroll, is claiming an exclusive on Carol Parker; John Beal's telephone bill amounts to the national debt since he's been telephoning Helen Craig every day; Steffi Duna and Ben Cummack a Versailles twosome; Mary Astor, who expects the stork very soon, celebrating her birthday at the LaMaze with her husband, Manual Del Campo, and Hertbert Marshall and Lee Russell as her guests. Mme. Ouspenskaya dining with the John Garfields; he was the star pupil at her dramatic school.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Scott Hart Writes a Book, Realizes Dream

'The Moon Is Waning' Captures Hounds' Song A 'Possum Hunting

Scott Hart, 6 feet and 135 pounds of native "south side" Virginia, has experienced the realization of a dream cherished by every reporter.

SCOTT HART

There are no figures on the subject, the field in all probability has been overlooked by the Census Bureau, but it's a demonstrable truth that;

Every cub reporter comes to the newspaper business afire with the aspiration one day to run his hand over the letters of his name embossed on the cover of a book.

This too seldom happens. Reporters don't seem to get around to writing that book.

But it happened to Hart. His book, "The Moon is Waning," came yesterday from the publishers. It's about 'possum hunting, a sport indigenous to the country and the character of the people in that section of Virginia south of the James River and known as the "south side."

Three Years in Sixth Grade

Scott Hart was born 36 year ago in Farmville, Prince Edward County, where his father, James Littleton Hart, edited the weekly paper, and where he obtained all the formal education of his life in the first six grades of the "training school." He spent three years in the sixth grade before his teachers turned him loose upon the world because they found him brilliant in all studies except arithmetic.

For a time he ran the Farmville opera house before taking his first reportorial job with the Richmond News-Leader. Later he came to The Post.

What makes one member of a profession do something that other members rarely accomplish? Hart, who should know, isn't quite sure of the answer.

"I guess it's because in the last few years I've seen so many people trying to make rubber stamps out of all of us that I had to do something to try to save a few of those who are still individuals," said Scott. He observed that he has been in Washington for two years and that during most of this time he authored The Post's column for Government workers, "The Federal Diary."

"Below the James River in Virginia individualism still survives," he went on. "I hate to see the inhabitants of this country and their individual lives driven from the face of the earth.

"Why, every kind of a social uplifter is running up and down the length and breadth of that land with his coat tail streaming."

One manifestation of individuality fact portrays in his book: "They' . . . taste the night for the nourishment they must have or starve' . . . and take the song of the hounds like a wine from the cup of the woods."

The embodiment of these people is the author's principal character, Lon Braxton, in whose wide acres the tobacco rots and who "don't drink, but he stuffs like a pig, and when he dies it's going to be under a tree with a 'possum lookin' down on him."

Presents "Conflict"

The intention of the book, Hart explained, is to present "the conflict of the indolence that runs through those people and their terrible love for the land" so that even the Yankee reformers, whom Lon so wonderfully hates, will understand.

"They would like to see the land bloom but they're too lazy," Hart said. "The struggle is between their love of the land and trifleness."

Most members of The Post staff knew that, sooner or later, Scott Hart would publish a book. They've seen him sit down at a typewriter and, pausing only to mutter curses at intruding blares of the city room's police radio, knock out a piece with fire in his fingers and the sweep and flow of the color of his story in his brain.

What they didn't know, but ought to have expected, was that Hart would write a book having to do, in a sense, with 'possum hunting. Each fall he has been on the paper he organized for members of the staff—a 'possum hunt.

The Derrydale Press, his publishers, specializes in books for sportsmen. Hart reviewed many of these for The Post and one day it occurred to him there had been none about "night hunting."

In about four weeks of incessant tea-drinking and virtual starvation—"It slowed me down to eat"—he remedied the deficiency.

"The Moon Is Waning" is limited to 950 copies. The list price is $7.50.

Kappa Delta Sorority Visitor

Adele Stephenson (left), of Ivor, Va., inspector of one of the five largest national sororities, Kappa Delta, arrived at the George Washington University chapter house, 1758 K street northwest for an official visit with Virginia Birkby (right) local president. She came here from Syracuse University and will visit Maryland University later in the week. Plans are now being made for the convention at Yellow Stone National Park this summer

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 4.

SAM BYRD, who is producing Roark Bradford's "John Henry," went to Bradford's home in New Orleans to discuss the play . . . Byrd intended to stay there four days, but remained five weeks . . . At the end of three weeks Sam felt somewhat embarrassed at this protracted hospitality and indicated that perhaps he was overstaying his visit. Bradford, however, insisted that he remain . . . "But I've been here three weeks," Sam declared, "I'd better go" . . . Roark turned to Mrs. Bradford and lamented: "The boy eats and runs!"

PARAGUAY'S president-elect, who is at the Park Central in New York now, is seeking an American secretary to take home to Paraguay. She must know Spanish, French and English—for $500 a month and expenses . . . John Gould Fletcher, whose "Selected Poems" won the Pulitzer Prize this week, sold only 241 copies, of that book. Yesterday, in one day, 350 copies were sold . . . The fire in Peter Arno's apartment, which burned the cartoonist's arms, also brought his estranged wife, Timmie Lansing, back to his fold . . . Ill-fortune still pursues Tilly Losch, the dancer, whose last appearance was in "The Good Earth." Her brother was killed in Spain—and now she's in a sanitarium in Switzerland. When she's well enough to travel, Miss Losch will go to Arizona.

THE MUNICIPAL commissioners have become very serious about their inter-department baseball tournament . . . The Department of Sanitation, in particular, is anxious to break the baseball monopoly long held by the police and fire departments . . . And so they now have a championship team, recruited from among former big-league and semipro stars, employing them in the non-Civil Service jobs of ablebodied seamen on municipal garbage scows . . . Al Cucinello and Bots Nekola, the former Yankee player, are two of the Department of Sanitation seamen ball players.

JEAN ACKER, former wife of the late Rudolf Valentino, will make her screen comeback in the new Sonja Henie picture . . . Friends of Bob Sweeney, whose name was linked with Barbara Hutton's in England, insist that he is back in America now and that he entered this country via Canada . . . Finis Farr, the script writer, and Frank Norris, managing editor of Time Magazine, whose new play is called "Hail to the Chief," long want to retitle it "The Hot Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

GENE FOWLER returned from an Oriental tour recently. He went to Japan, where the customs officials became suspicious of the word "Writer" which appeared on his passport . . . "What do you write?" they asked him . . . "Stories," said Fowler . . . "Are you writing now?" they continued . . . "Yes," Fowler assured . . . "About what?" they persisted . . . "I've just been to Java and I'm writing a story about it," Fowler replied—believing that would be the safest answer . . . "What's the story?" the officials demanded—and so Gene hurriedly manufactured a plot, faking detail after detail—until he himself liked the story . . . When he returned to Hollywood, Fowler outlined the plot he had created for the Japanese officials, thought "How would a great movie producer do this?" reversed the process—and "Illusion in Java" will be published in the fall.

RUBE GOLDBERG, who has been drawing anti-New Deal cartoons, received two requests for the originals of some of his cartoons. One request was from John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee. The second request came from Harry Hopkins . . . Myron McCormick will leave for Hollywood to work in the film version of Dr. Paul de Kruif's "Fight for Life" . . . The New Masses will make reply to Gen. Krivitsky's Saturday Evening Post articles. They'll charge that Krivitsky never was a general, isn't a Russian and that Isaac Don Levine helped write the series . . . RCA's television department will announce that Bing Crosby is the most telegenic of the Hollywood stars.

HERSCHEL CROPPER, who attracted good reviews from the drama critics when he appeared on Broadway in "The Barker," now is working at the Strange As It Seems exhibit at the fair. He's the barker . . . Carl Sandburg, who came to New York and saw the Ringling Brothers circus, liked it so much that he's sorry he went. "You see," he explained, "it made me feel I could write a circus poem and want to do it. That's upsetting—because it would disturb my concentration on the Lincoln book, to which I've devoted 10 years."

Bridge Meet To Open Today At Alexandria

North Virginia Players Out to Regain Titles Lost Last Year

By Marian H. Barre.

Contract bridge players from the District of Columbia cleaned up the Northern Virginia Bridge Tournament last year by capturing all titles. When the second event is played this week-end at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria it will be a fight to the finish as the Virginians are out for revenge.

The tourney opens this afternoon with a game for women's pairs. It will continue for three days ending Sunday evening. Four major and one amateur championship will be played, sessions to be held twice daily. Events include women's pairs, mixed, and open pairs, a match for teams of four, and the novice pair champion restricted to players from northern Virginia. The American Contract Bridge League is the sponsoring organization. National master points will be awarded in all but the amateur game.

Mrs. Dixie T. Wright and Mrs. B. Robins will play in defense of the women's title this afternoon. This is Mrs. Robin's busy day as she has another trophy to defend in the evening mixed pair contest. Dr. Frederick Blanck was paired with Mrs. Robins in the winning game last year, her partner tonight will be A. J. Westrich.

Other defending players from Washington are Comdr. W. A. Corley (ret.) and Dr. C. C. McDonnell, winner of the 1938 open pair game, and Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Stockvis who were members of the victorious team. Lewis and Lloyd Tubbs, the star brother-partnership, of Arlington, playing as the other half of the team, were the only Virginians among the champions. Lewis Tubbs inaugurated the Northern Virginia Tournament that has grown to be one of the notable successes on the bridge calendar.

Officer Convicted Of Drunk-Driving In a Police Car

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Policeman Wade Adams was convicted today of driving a police radio car while drunk, reckless driving and failing to stop after an accident.

He was fined $75 and given a suspended sentence of a year in jail. Both Adams and Policeman William E. Pillsbury were suspended after the accident, but no charge was brought against Pillsbury.

In a Tough World, Library Of Congress Seeks Rollo Books

The Library of Congress yesterday sounded a call for help, a call which reminded a troubled world that once upon a time there was a lad named Rollo—not Butch or Stinky or Fats, understand, but Rollo.

While physicists were seeking a fourth dimension and doctors were shadowing the cause of cancer, Curator V. Valta Parma of the library's rare book division let it be known that he was after something about as important in its field—first editions of "Rollo in Holland" and "Rollo at Work."

Today's debutante and college student won't know about Rollo but let them ask dad or granddad. If they are going to ask, they'd better do it soon because Parma's appeal for aid is expected to create a mass hibernation into attics and cellars in quest of the two desired volumes.

"It's like this," explained the rare book curator. "We have just received 'The Canary Bird' and 'Carlo,' which leaves us only two more titles to get to complete the collection of Jacob Abbott's 'Rollo' books.

"The first editions are wanted, but don't let that frighten anyone out of looking. In all probability there are many first editions of 'Rollo at Work' and 'Rollo in Holland' extant. You simply have to look for them."

"The Canary Bird" and "Carlo" were sent in by Mrs. Eleanor Hallowell Abbott Courn, granddaughter of the noted nineteenth century author., who now lives on "Rollo Farm" at Wilton, N. H. The only other first editions of these two titles on record are in the Pennsylvania Historical Society Museum.

Abott was the first American author to write a series of books with one character being the hero of each. The success of his Rollo books paved the way for the Rover boys, Frank Merriwell, the Elsie books and scores of other serials.

Although Abbott wrote some 200 volumes altogether, his reputation rest principally on the Rollo books.

Many a person living today, between the ages of 80 and 90, learned to read from the Rollo books and got his first impressions of foreign lands from Rollo's adventures in Holland, Scotland and other countries.

"This is what to look for," said Parma. "'Rollo at Work' will have the date 1838 on the title page, and 'Rollo in Holland' will bear the date 1857. But if anyone finds either of these two titles and has any doubts as to its being a first edition, bring it to us and we will inspect it."

Architects Make Awards At Exhibition

War Department Wins Medal for Highest Quality Work

The Association of Federal Architects last night announced award of prizes in its eighth exhibition which opened Wednesday at the National Museum, Constitution avenue, between Tenth and Twelfth streets.

The jury of award is composed of Nathan C. Wyeth, municipal architect of the District; Thomas H. Locraft, assistant professor of Architecture, Catholic University, and Eugen Weisz, vice principal, Corcoran School of Art.

The association medal for the highest quality of architectural work in a Government Department was won by the War Department, Construction Division, office of the quartermaster general. Morgan County Attendance Down, 12 Teachers Fired

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 4.—A dozen teachers, some of them in this county's schools for many years, were dropped from the list for the coming year by the Morgan County Board of Education when it made up its schedule yesterday.

The paring was done to conform to the teacher allocation to the county which is determined by average daily attendance by students over a given period.

Among those not renamed was Principal Jesse Tyson, principal of the high school here.

Nine teachers were not reappointed by the Berkeley County Board of Education yesterday, due either to resignation or failure to apply in proper manner, Supt. G. William Ropp said. No names were made public and will not be disclosed until the list is complete, he said.

Mother Admits Poisoning Mate And Stepson

Milwaukee, May 4 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Louise Sullivan, 50, pleaded guilty to first degree murder this afternoon in the poisoning of her stepson, James Sullivan, 18, and was bound over for sentence.

Previously, District Attorney Herbert J. Steffes said Mrs. Sullivan had confessed the poison deaths of Sullivan; her second husband, Fred Ricklefs, 36, and attempts on the lives of her third mate, Michael Sullivan, 60, and his 11-year-old daughter, Theresa.

Mrs. Sullivan told Steffes she had poisoned James because she disliked him and because he refused to work around the house. She disposed of Ricklefs, she told Steffes, because he was ill and of no use to her. Ricklefs died January 30, 1931.

Lowest Price in History!"
"AND GENTLEMEN, HERE'S THE REASON:
I want to win thousands of friends for my smooth, mild Rocking Chair Whiskey. For I firmly believe that once you've taken your first sip of Rocking Chair's mellow, homespun flavor . . . from that moment forward you'll want to make it your favorite whiskey!"
Even though you're accustomed to paying far more for whiskey, you'll relish Rocking Chair's matchless flavor and bouquet. For—by even and controlled agitation in my special blending process—Rocking Chair recalls the mellowness of whiskeys that old-time New England sea captains rocked to ripe perfection. Taste Rocking Chair—and be convinced! And now is the time to do it—for never in history has the price been so low! Pints, formerly $1.15, are now 95¢. Quarts, formerly $2.20, are now $1.85.

Plan to Open W St. Divides Colony Hill

Residents Choose Up Sides and Write To Commissioners

Residents of swank Colony Hill have chosen sides to fight over a proposal by the Commissioners to open W street northwest, between Foxhall road and Forty-fourth street, it was revealed yesterday.

Urging the opening of the street are Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Edward T. Lindner, attorney; Paul J. Frizzell, co-ordinator and secretary of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; George W. Romney, cousin of the sergeants at arms of the House; William E. Davis, D. L. Moorman, E. K. Jones, Raymond L. Keith and Bruce Baird.

Opposed are Duncan Phillips, owner of Phillips Memorial Gallery; Morris Cafritz, Jessie F. Magee, Avice M. Greene, Olga Roosevelt Graves, Alice B. Acker, Mary Elizabeth Partridge and Daniel Partridge 3d.

A petition to defer the opening was sent to the Commissioners yesterday by residents whose properties abut the street. The residents around the corner on Forty-fourth street, whose street terminates in a dead end, have written the Commissioners that they want the street opened.

The section of W street which the Commissioners propose to open is wooded. It would provide the residents on Forty-fourth street a shorter route to Foxhall road.

The opposition has asked the Commissioners to hold a public hearing. The Commissioners haven't decided yet.

Regional C. E. To Open Sessions

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, May 4.—A hilltop sunrise service Sunday will be one of the features of the three-day educational meeting of Region No. 2 of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, which convenes at Christ's Reformed Church here Friday. The region embraces societies in West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia. The Rev. Clyde Meadows, Chambersburg, will be the speaker at the sunrise service.

Frank McGeary, president of the Disrtict of Columbia, C. E. Union, is among other speakers. A banquet will be held Saturday night, with Reuel Wolford presiding. The fifteith anniversary of the organization of Christian Endeavor in the United Brethren Church here will be celebrated Sunday.

5-Year-Old Angler Drowned in Dam

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gettysburg, Pa., May 4.—Caught in his own fishing line, 5-year-old George Eugene Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Miller, Bonneauville, drowned in the Bonneauville fire dam. Efforts of a neighbor, the victim's father, and three physicians for over two hours failed to revive the lad.

Dr. Edgar A. Miller, Gettysburg, Adams County coroner, said death was due to accidental drowning. He said the body was discovered when Vincent Staub, a neighbor, pulled the fishing line from the water. The line had caught the victim's leg and a foot was drawn above the surface.

The parents and six brothers and sisters survive. The funeral was held this morning in St. Joseph's Catholic Church at Bonneauville.

D. C. Milk Scoring Called 'Fictitious'

committee, said that today he will introduce witnesses to testify as to widespread milk "bootlegging" activities.

The Public Health Service milk code, Frank said, has been adopted in 2,100 communities in 33 States. Most of the communities are small, but a half dozen or more large cities, including Chicago and St. Louis, have put the uniform regulations into effect.

Cases Outlined

The principal difference between the Public Health Service's code and the District regulations, he said, is that the former set forth minimum requirements that must be met by producers, whereas the District regulations demand these and then recommend supplemental improvements which figure in the scoring of the producer's farm.

The District regulations, he added, are more literal than those of the Federal code in that they specify, for instance, that there shall be 600 cubic feet of air space for each milch cow, while the Public Health Service code merely states that the stalls shall be well ventilated.

The Federal system includes no scoring, such as practiced by the District Health Department, but does provide for lower grading when a producer or dairy fails to comply with one of the requirements.

Frank said that the Public Health Service considers the scoring system unwise because it is complicated, offers a "fictious accuracy," and usually confuses the consumers. Distributors, he said, often capitalize on their ratings in advertising to the detriment of competitors.

Held Trade Barrier

Frank said that he considers District milk "quite good" and the regulations among the best, despite what he characterized as unnecessary provisions. The latter, he said, "have the capacity" of establishing trade barriers or setting up "a Chinese wall" to keep out competition.

The uniform Public Health Service code, he asserted, offers the advantages of eliminating friction and misunderstandings between jurisdictions and producers, of giving the dairy industry greater stability, and of reducing litigation to a minimum.

Criticism has been directed against it, he admitted, as being un-American in blocking progress and in opening local milksheds to unfair competition. He denied both charges.

Questioned by Burroughs as to the price of milk, Frank said that a study conducted by the Public Health Service in 1936 showed that the average price of first-grade pasteurized milk delivered at homes was 13.3 cents in cities of 500,000 or more population.

The average price in these cities in the mid-Atlantic area, he said, was 14.4 cents.

"Washington is consequently not far from average," he explained.

He explained that only first grade milk is sold in the Washington market, whereas most other cities have inferior and cheaper grades of milk as well.

Cross-examined by Seal, Frank said it is a "debatable" question whether some of the optional District regulations are related to public health.

Dangers Stressed

Seal pointed out that milk is perishable and that it gains contamination from frequent handling and transportation. Frank retorted that milk and cream may be transported safely long distances providing it is kept at low temperature.

Frank S. Walker, president of the Maryland-Virginia association, pointed out in a cross-examination of Frank that the District scoring system is the result of 25 years' study and experience. He developed that the Public Health Service code permits a bacteria count up to 200,000 per cubic centimeter for Grade A milk, a million for Grade B milk, and unlimited bacteria count for Grade C milk.

"And the average bacteria count for raw milk last year in the Washington milkshed was 18,500," he commented.

Frank retorted that the District regulations, however, place no limit on the bacteria count and that the small number might be retained under the Public Health Service code.

Criticism Voiced

Barbour insisted that the Federal code placed too much reliance on the discretion of the inspectors. A similar criticism was voiced by John F. Hillyard, of the Wakefield Dairy.

The morning session opened with a statement by Dr. Ashworth as to the three dairies he had referred to on Tuesday as having been found to use neutralizers in cream samples taken by inspectors.

"During the month of March, 1936," he said in a formal report, "neutralizers were found in the samples of cream collected by inspectors of the Health Department from the Thompson's Dairy and Fairfax Dairy.

"During the month of March, 1938, neutralizers were found in the samples of cream collected from the Richfield Dairy on two occasions."

The neutralizer, he explained, is designed to overcome acidity found in stale cream and prevent it from flaking in coffee. Its use, he said, is a violation of the District health regulations, but the District has never prosecuted an offender.

Subsequently, under cross-examination by Darr, Dr. Ashworth said that the neutralizer was sodium carbonate.

"Isn't that a harmless adulterant?" Darr asked. "Isn't it similar to the sodium bicarbonate some people take for indigestion and that it does not effect the health of the person drinking it?"

Dr. Ashworth admitted that the observations were true.

Darr later made a statement that the present owners of Embassy-Fairfax Dairy did not own the Fairfax Dairy in 1936. A similar statement was made to the press by Otto Phillips, acting president of Richfield Dairy. Lee Thompson, president of Thompson's Dairy, told newspapermen he had "no comment."

None Found Lately

Bates asked Dr. Ashworth why the name of the fourth dairy referred to previously had not been reported. Dr. Ashworth said that the chemists stated the cream looked suspicious but that he could not be sure a neutralizer had been used.

The sub-committee chairman said that he understood Dr. Ashworth to say on Tuesday that the neutralizers had been used "recently." Dr. Ashworth replied that none had been found within the last 12 months.

Asked by Burroughs as to the cream seized during the "bootleg" raid, Dr. Ashworth said:

"The Western cream compared very favorably with what we have on the Washington market."

Health Officer Ruhland occupied the stand briefly during the afternoon to explain what he termed "misleading" statistics submitted on Tuesday by Darr relative to the comparative infant mortality rate of Washington and Midwestern cities.

Dr. Ruhland said that the cities are not comparable because they are of different size and chiefly because Washington has a larger colored population.

Barbour brought out during an examination of Dr. Ashworth that the cream declared by the corporation counsel to have been brought into the District and delivered to Southern Dairies, Inc., without a permit was handled by the Maryland Co-operative Milk Producers Association.

Mistake Claimed

A "mistake" had been made at the Baltimore dairy, he said, and that the only hand the Maryland-Virginia association had in the transaction was to place the order with the Maryland organization when it was unable to fill it. The cream then was shipped from a Baltimore dairy which had let its District permit expire.

Barbour asked Dr. Ashworth whether he thought the local Health Department milk regulations should be "less restrictive," and the chief food inspector replied that he did not.

The clash between Derrick and Darr came at this time. After Derrick had charged the attorney with attempting to "do a lot of smoke screening" to conceal the issues, Darr commented: "Thanks for interpreting my motives Mr. Derrick."

Chairman Bates admonished Derrick to await his turn to testify.

$750,000 Asked For Quantico In House Bill

Navy Asks Fund to Replace Buildings At Barracks

By the Associated Press.

The Navy Department appropriations bill for 1940, introduced in the House yesterday, carried $750,000 for replacement of buildings at the Quantico, Va., Marine barracks.

Also carried was a $500,000 fund for purchase of additional land for the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station.

The Appropriations Committee also approved Navy requests for $100,000 to improve the heating plant at the Norfolk Naval Operating Base; $225,000 for machinery for a new trade school building and barracks equipment at the Hampton Roads Naval Training Station for which the budget had recommended $300,000; $50,000 for turret assembly facilities at the Norfolk Navy Yard; $10,000 for an addition to the foundry at the yard, and $75,000 to complete building ways at the yard.

The bill also carried contract authorizations for $225,000 for storehouse and accessories for battlefield materials and equipment; $600,000 for a sub-assembly building and accessories for new ship construction; $1,025,000 for additional power generation and distribution for new ship construction and $80,000 for railroad cars for handling shipbuilding materials at the Norfolk Navy Yard.

The bill carried $465,000 for maintenance and operation of the Norfolk Naval Training Station, a reduction of $75,000 from budget estimates.

Italy And The Axis

The visit to Italy of Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's foreign minister, comes at a moment when Germany needs the fullest support and co-operation of her totalitarian partner if she is to continue to have her way in eastern Europe. But there is no certainty that Herr von Ribbentrop will get what he is after.

The Berlin-Rome axis has proved an extremely effective blackmailing device. It has enabled Germany and Italy to intimidate the democracies without risking a general war. And every British and French attempt to split the axis has met with failure. In fact, such efforts have only persuaded Fuehrer and Duce of the mutual value of their alliance.

Its chief weakness lies in the Italian realization that in the event of a general war their country would prove exceedingly vulnerable to attack both from sea and air. And it is doubtful if any prospective gains of territory, in north Africa or elsewhere, could adequately compensate Italy for the terrible punishment she would certainly receive if dragged into war as a tail of the German kite.

In other words, while the axis has great usefulness to the Fascist government so long as war can be averted, its value to Italy begins to approach the vanishing point the moment war becomes a probability. The Italian government and its leaders certainly cannot ignore the chance that war may result from Germany's present policies and the fact that these policies are now meeting a very real measure of resistance. That helps explain why the Italian press is giving Germany little more than perfunctory support with respect to the Polish issue, and why there is growing alarm in Italy over the present situation.

That also helps to explain the steady flow of German notables across the Brenner. After Gen. Goering came Gen. von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army. Now Ribbentrop is treading the well-beaten path. For if Germany is to counter the efforts being made by Great Britain and France to establish an antiaggression bloc, she must be assured of the unswerving loyalty of Italy.

Perhaps Ribbentrop will succeed in his mission. Italy may now actually be, as many suspect, a prisoner of the axis with no real freedom of action. But as much a factor as the German pressure will be the general position of London, Paris and Warsaw. A strong stand by those governments, an unmistakable indication that no further concessions will be made at the point of the bayonet, may very decidedly weaken Italian affection for the axis.

Japan And The Axis

The axis powers and Japan have hitherto managed with considerable success to dovetail their expansionist policies and actions. Taking advantage of their collective nuisance value, they have managed to strike individual blows at the status quo in Europe and Asia.

Hitherto, however, nothing like a formal alliance has existed between the three nations, all signatories of the anti-Comintern pact. But with the situation approaching a showdown in Europe, Germany is said to be pressing Japan to conclude an offensive and defensive military alliance the effect of which would be the extension of the Berlin-Rome axis to Asia.

The immediate advantages to the Third Reich of such a development would be very great indeed. A strategical situation and powerful unit would be added to the combination which Germany and Italy are seeking to create as an answer to the antiaggression bloc sponsored by Great Britain. The present uncertainty of Russia's position makes such a step all the more desirable, in Germany's eyes.

The advantages to Japan of throwing in her lot with Germany and Italy are not so apparent, however. Japan has her hands full in China at this moment. She is also anxious to await the clarification of Russia's attitude, now thrown into doubt by Litvinoff's resignation. Thus while certain elements, principally within the army, favor such an alliance with the Third Reich there are other elements bitterly opposed to it.

The game, the latter believe, is not worth the candle. Close co-operation with the axis powers has its advantages for Japan. Without the support of Germany and Italy she would find herself in an isolated position. But co-operation to the extent of having to go to war at a moment chosen by Hitler and Mussolini as suitable to their own plans has great possibilities for evil so far as Japan is concerned. The direct assistance that the axis powers are in a position to render her is negligible. On the other hand, the risk of entering a general war is very great.

That is why the Tokyo government has held off giving an affirmative reply to the German suggestion of an offensive and defensive pact. Like other nations, she prefers, at the moment, to sit on the fence pending the moment when there are clearer indications than have thus far been vouchsafed as to which way the pendulum of power will swing.

New Funds For USHA

While the United States Housing Authority is awaiting an additional grant of power from Congress, it appears to be taking advantage of every opportunity to trim the costs of slum-clearance projects for which it is supplying funds. Last week the USHA declined to approve any of the bids on Pittsburgh's proposed Bedford dwellings on the ground that they were "unreasonably high." Previously Administrator Straus had announced approval of construction bids for a project at Vincennes, Ind., in which the comparatively low over-all cost of $3,500 per dwelling unit will be attained.

In his testimony before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor Mr. Straus pointed out that the projects recently approved show notable savings as compared with some of the first developments sponsored by the USHA. Apparently that agency is responding courageously to criticism of excessive outlays for the rehousing of families in slum areas. Estimated over-all costs for some of the earlier projects amounted to more than $6,000 per family unit. Such extravagance in replacing the slums makes an easy target for Congressional critics. By reducing costs to the minimum for good housing the USHA will greatly strengthen its position.

The efforts being made in this direction seem fully to justify the USHA appeal for authority to lend an additional $800,000,000 for low-rent housing. With the $800,000,000 authorized to date the USHA will be able to make only a slight impression upon the country's vast areas of unfit housing. To keep this significant social movement progressing a new authorization of lending powers will be needed annually for a good many years.

The real burden of slum clearance is not reflected, however, in the amount of money lent to municipal housing authorities to finance their projects. These sums must be repaid to the Federal Government with interest. If this money is well spent it will doubtless be a profitable investment from the community viewpoint. It is the subsidies granted to make these dwellings available to very low-income groups which measure the cost of slum reclamation.

In the matter of trimming subsidies the USHA seems to have made little or no progress. Most municipalities have agreed to grant complete tax immunity to the projects they are sponsoring with the aid of the USHA. That in itself is a very substantial subsidy which should make it possible to minimize the burden of slum clearance upon the Federal Treasury. But the USHA has made a policy of adding the maximum Federal subsidies permitted by the housing act to these substantial benefits allowed by the municipalities.

The result is to magnify housing benefits to a relatively small number of families out of all proportion to other forms of public aid and relief. USHA recently estimated that the "economic rent" for an average dwelling in a project it is aiding at Louisville would amount to $42 per month. Federal and local subsidies will reduce this average rental to $16. In effect, tenants of this project will obtain a $26-per-month rent subsidy from the public purse.

At this rate it would cost taxpayers $312 per year to maintain an average family in a USHA dwelling. That is obviously exorbitant. Such grants will have to be reduced if the slum-clearance program is to continue indefinitely. While approving additional lending powers, the Senate Committee on Education and Labor could reasonably cut in half the requested annual subsidies, amounting to $45,000,000, with instructions to the USHA to spread the smaller amount over the entire program in thinner layers.

The Milk Inquiry

So many interesting facts are coming to light in the Washington milk inquiry that special efforts will be needed to concentrate attention upon the central issues. Those issues are whether the requirements imposed upon dairies supplying milk to the District are unnecessarily drastic and whether they amount to a trade barrier against milk and cream from States not adjacent to Washington.

Leslie C. Frank, chief sanitary engineer for the United States Public Health Service, believes that the standards prescribed by the local health department are higher than necessary to insure a supply of wholesome, healthful milk. He urges adoption of the Public Health Service's milk code now used by 2,100 communities in 33 States. That code permits the sale of three grades of milk in contrast to the District regulations which permit the distribution of only milk of the highest quality.

District officials have made a persuasive argument before the House Investigating Committee against any lowering of the present standard which gives Washington an excellent milk supply. Yet it must be admitted that there is something curious about an arrangement which leads to the arrest of "bootleggers" for supplying to the Capital City milk which meets the standards prescribed by the Public Health Service.

Obviously there should be a national standard for milk that would adequately protect the public health. If it can be shown that the requirements of the Public Health Service in any way fall short of that objective, they should be modified. If not, then it seems reasonable to bring the Nation's Capital into line with the national standard. Schemes to divide the country into regional economic compartments have already gone too far. Certainly Congress should not, without good reason, perpetuate in Washington conditions that may be conducive to the development of monopolies within its surrounding area.

The Coal Deadlock

The soft-coal operators of the Appalachian fields and the United Mine Workers have been unable to compose the differences which have kept 320,000 men idle for nearly five weeks. The failure to reach an agreement, despite the aid given by the Labor Department's conciliation service, is the more disturbing because of the seemingly narrow gulf which separates the two viewpoints.

Negotiating for the union, John L. Lewis is said to have reduced his demands to a closed shop or, as an alternative, elimination of the penalty clause under which the miners can be fined for failure to live up to their agreement. While unwilling fully to accept either of these demands, the mine operators brought in on Wednesday a counter-proposal which would be almost equivalent to the closed shop. The check-off was in effect for members of the United Mine Workers under the expired contract. Under the plan suggested by the employer group, operators would deduct the equivalent of union dues from the pay of all workers in the mines. As the union would receive the sums deducted the check-off would in effect be applied to union and nonmember alike.

In both principle and practice that arrangement would be very closely akin to the closed shop. It would mean that all employes in the mines would have to finance the union, whether or not they actually became members. There are indications that Mr. Lewis would have accepted this proposal, if the operators had not attempted at the last minute to modify it by calling union dues "fees for administration of the contract." That shift in position came about after some operators had reasonably questioned the legality of assesments imposed upon nonunion men by employers for the benefit of the United Mine Workers.

This episode in the negotiations may be significant chiefly as an indication that the differences between the operators and miners are by no means as unsolvable as appears today. With a new impasse on the closed shop, moreover, the negotiators might have turned once more to the penalty clause. This device for keeping the men at work in accord with their contract traces back to the World War period. It originated not with the operators, but with the Government's fuel administration. Its purpose was to prevent any stoppage of operations under the emergency conditions then prevailing.

Presumably the operators believe that this clause is now essential to prevent interruption of work resulting from jurisdictional controversies between C. I. O. and A. F. of L. unions. In practice, however, the usefulness of the penalty clause has been questioned. Previous contracts have set up the principle that no operator will even discuss grievances with workers on strike in violation of their contract. This would seem an adequate restraining factor.

With the issues as narrow as they have become the threatened extension of the stoppage seems intolerable. And continued disregard of the enormous public interest in a settlement will not assist the cause of either party to the controversy.

Fink's Fall

From Weltwoche, Zurich; translated in Living Age.

Werner Fink, who recently was deposed and ousted from the Reich Chamber of Culture, was one of the best known and wittiest of the German cabaret entertainers. One of the stories which has probably helped to bring about his downfall is this:

Fink said to his audience: "Today I have a nice puzzle for you. Do you know the name of a famous man who looks like a pure Aryan, is a pure Aryan, and is very intelligent besides? It starts with 'Goe.'"

Immediately someone shouted "Goebbels!" Whereupon Fink remarked calmly: "I spoke of a man who looks like a pure Aryan."

Then, another man shouted "Goring!" Fink answered: "The man is supposed to be very intelligent."

Since no one else made a suggestion, Fink said reproachfully: "I really believe that the German people have been neglecting their education, or they would have easily guessed whom I mean. I was thinking of Goethe."

It is reported that Fink has since been sent to exercise his humor as simple laborer on the western fortifications.

If Germany Had Won

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
It is very popular for those who are "wise after the event" to deplore the fact that we made "the tragic blunder" of entering the World War in 1917 and sending our men to fight on foreign soil.

But one cannot help wondering what would have happened if we had in fact refused all aid—either in money, munitions or men—in that great struggle.

It is safe to assume that Germany would have won the war, and we can conjecture what terms she would have imposed on her enemies, what reparations she would have asked—and collected. Britannia would no longer rule the waves, Germany would control the Mediterranean, the Suez Canal and the Straits of Gibraltar and after she had strengthened her position in Europe, with her well-known ambition for world conquest she would soon have cast envious eyes on the United States, finding a much friendlier attitude in South America for her air ports and naval bases than exists today.

The world would probably have fared better at the hands of the Kaiser than under Hitler's tender mercies. But perhaps—who knows—Hitler might have struggled to the power he wields today.

We do not want our men to fight on any soil; but if they must fight, would it be better that America should be the battle ground, where, even though we were victorious, our men would be gassed, shell shocked and killed, as they were in France, and where, in addition, our cities would be bombed and our women, children and old men would suffer all the horrors of modern warfare?

There is hope today that we may not be drawn into another war and if we do escape that fate it will be thanks to "the tragic blunder" that we made in 1917 and to our men who fought on foreign soil and who did not die in vain.

"Westbrook The Wise"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
When Westbrook Pegler starts throwing bean-balls at William O. Douglas and "that class of New Deal chimney suckers," he makes himself even more ridiculous than usual.

Pegler is, always has been and probably always will be a bush-leaguer from a literary standpoint. Douglas has repeatedly proven himself a big-leaguer in the legal profession and the field of public administration. Pegler doesn't belong in his league and the sooner he finds it out the better.

Pegler is taking a lot on himself when he assumes that former educators now in the New Deal took up either teaching or Government service out of "sheer love of easy and non-competitive living." And when he starts praising those "who had the gumption to become champions in the world of business," I wonder if Westbrook the Wise would like to have fine, upright businessmen like the Daughertys and Sinclairs running things in Washington again.

The tip-off on Pegler's conception of ethics in the world of business was once given by the master himself in one of his daily deliriums when he told of the time he was hired to distribute pamphlets or papers of some sort and then, instead of doing what he was hired to do, destroyed the papers.

If Pegler should sit down and write everything he knows about economics and the other social sciences it wouldn't cover a comma. William O. Douglas, on the other hand, has struggled to keep himself in step with social problems and the needs of public service, even though it meant educating himself the hard way through a lot of tough years. And that is something Pegler never had the guts, gumption or gray matter to do.

Danzig And The Corridor

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Danzig was taken from Germany and made a free city by the Versailles Treaty. The Poles obtained a strip of territory giving them access to Danzig and the sea and dividing Germany from East Prussia. That is the Polish Corridor.

Danzig is German. Make no mistake about it. It is full of Germans demanding return to the Fatherland. They demand this although the change would mean a fall in the fortunes of Danzig. The city owes its wealth to the Polish export trade which passes through it.

After the war, the Poles built their own port—Gdynia—spending $100,000,000 of French money doing it, because Danzig refused to handle munitions which were being sent to Poland.

The Poles might not object to the return of Danzig to Germany. But they look upon Gdynia as one of their proudest possessions. And Gdynia is in the Polish Corridor. Poland will keep it if she can.

Children's Welfare

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The conference at the White House in regard to children and their welfare is too important to be passed up without much attention and lasting comment.

In speaking of ill-housed children, we have the destructive situation before us that alone is undermining our civilization. Those brave enough to have children are confronted with enormous rentals, which mean deficient nutrition, which in turn saps vitality. Those with low incomes ($1,200 to $1,500) compose the greatest percentage of the keepers. These high-priced and mostly inadequate dwellings should be officially inspected and assessed according to the scale of rental. So many of them are insanitary and have inadequate heating facilities, escaping gas, and what not.

Such as this absorbs one-half of your check for the average family of three to five. Try to provide the necessities of life with your balance. Here is an opportunity for a real lawmaker to abate a nuisance and save our posterity and the democracy we so proudly boast of.

Any Effect?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
May I take this opportunity to express my appreciation for your series of articles, "Suicide Corners," in which you so vividly show the potential dangers of the present traffic situation?

But what, may I respectfully ask, has the effect been? Have the proper authorities endeavored to correct the evils of our traffic system?

"Suicide Corner No. 6" is a personal worry to me, for I live on the corner of Maryland avenue and H street northeast. My mother, who is well advanced in years, must cross these dangerous intersections many times daily to get to the drug store, grocery store, etc., and plaguing thoughts confront me with the fear that some day (God forbid!) someone near and dear to me may be the victim of a negligent motorist. To add to this appalling situation, there are certain times, when Maryland volunteer ambulances and our own fire engines command right of way, in which there is no traffic control at all. To cross any of the five intersections is to take one's life in his own hands!

Police Precinct No. 9 is burdened with the unending task of keeping "Fifteenth and H NE." clear of traffic and safe for pedestrians; vigilance on the part of No. 9 has not been lax, but still that is not enough!

May I beg you to continue your campaign against traffic dangers?

Cotton Problem Is Solved!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Congressman White of Idaho has solved our cotton problem—not merely solved it but shows how the Government can make $3,500,000,000 just on our present surplus cotton.

Let the Treasury pay the American cotton producers 64.64 cents per pound! This will instantly put $3,500,000,000 in circulation and please the Southern voters; but, as the Treasury rather than the Department of Agriculture will be handling it—ah, the magic of the fact—it will cost nothing. The Treasury will by law carry the cotton on its books at $1.29 a pound, thus making 100 per cent profit! Step up, folks, and gasp at Congressman White's brilliance—11,000,000 bales of surplus cotton converted into a profit of $3,500,000,000 for Uncle Sam!

The Treasury will pay for the cotton by printing paper money, and this currency will always be redeemable—there will be a pound of cotton behind each dollar bill. The cotton may be worth only 8 cents a pound on the world market, but Mr. White shows us not to worry, for the Treasury will always value it at $1.29.

Further, besides the 100 per cent profit in paper money, the scheme will be a large source of tax income to the Government. Every producer who gets 64.64 cents a pound can be made to pay a tax of 10.35 cents a pound—$550,000,000 tax revenue just from the cotton now in storage!

It worries me a little that we have $15,000,000,000 of gold in this country, which we have to bury in the ground because there is too much of it to be usable for currency; but Congressman White reassures me that three times as much gold reserve as in 1929 isn't enough backing for our currency; we must have something else, too.

Some may object that 64.64 cents is too much to pay for 8-cent cotton. This is simple. The Treasury can buy the surplus cotton of the whole world at 44 cents a pound. This will raise the world price level so that the extra subsidy to the American producer will be only 20 cents a pound. Don't be alarmed—it looks rash, but Congressman White shows us to how to handle it. The Treasury values this foreign cotton, too, at $1.29 a pound, and, issuing currency against it, makes 200 per cent profit on it. The more cotton we buy, the more profit.

I fear I don't quite put the idea across; but Congressman White explained the system in The Post of April 30 in regard to silver. I had supposed the silver-purchasing plan was a racket, a piece of political highway robbery put over by the silver Senators; but Congressman White's simple faith in it shows me its universal magic. We can apply it to all surplus products—just pay eight times the current prices, print twice that much money and pay all the Government's expenses with the profits! TABBY.

The Post Impressionist

Between Heaven and Earth

THE OUTSIDE WORLD is peopled by grownups—Jim and Jane and Harry and Mary. They may have children, but it is Jim and Harry and Mary and Jane who are important.

Here that world and all its customs drop away. There is a mother in every room and several in the ward. Fathers appear at intervals; but fathers are endured and mothers tended only because they are necessary to the well-being of a roomful of small humans, not one of which is over 3 weeks old.

The child is no sooner born than it is seized by a nurse who immediately loves it and finds it beautiful. When the mother is in her room again, this same young vestal presents the offspring for inspection; and woe betide the cool parent who offers a criticism. Nor can the fondest mother be adequate to the enthusiasm demanded. She is hypnotized into hyperbole.

Supposing she passes this test of mother love, there awaits a still more stringent proof of her worthiness. At some point during the first 24 hours of the little one's life, the mother is again confronted by the nurse. With solemn eyes and level voice, she asks, "Are you going to nurse your baby?" The question sounds simple. Nobody will force her, nobody will bring pressure to bear on her. But whether the question is put by a student of 19 or a mature graduate, it would take a bold woman to answer no. Not the beauty of Helen, of Deirdre or of Yseult, not the wit of Heloise or of Hypatia, not the holiness of Saint Anne would avail to raise her from an abyss of silent condemnation.

But, when she has answered yes—smiles fill the room, approbation emanates from the very walls, friendliness and comfortable words will be hers, for she is a good mother.

She must be content with just that moment of importance, however. For, thereafter, she is chiefly a source of provender for her infant. With scornful indulgence for her ineptitude, the nurses teach her how to hold and feed her child. Six times a day she becomes a useful member of society. Like a chorus of young frogs, the babies announce the approaching hour from the nursery. Then the parade of white baskets—suspended in groups of five from long bars affixed to rollers—starts down the hall. With the movement, many of the little creatures become quiet. Swathed around to prevent their movement, their little mouths shaped already to receive food, one little bird is deposited in each room and the baskets stand empty, awaiting the return journey. Down the hall come murmurs of shame and annoyance. "But I can't do it, nurse, he simply won't take it."

"He'll take it, once you learn how," is the invariable reply.

The baby is always right.

Into this temple of mothers and babies, adult representatives of the male sex penetrate twice a day. The doctors usually make their visits in the morning. At first, they seem to be curiously out of place, dressed in the costume of that far-off outside world. Tall and short, thick and thin, they march beside the soft-shod, long-skirted nurse, their business suits strikingly dissimilar beside their uniformed companions, against the variations in white and gray that are the only colors of the halls and rooms. As each approaches his patient, it is evident that she has eyes to distinguish the God beneath the very mortal dress. In the figure of her doctor, each mother salutes Aesculapius himself with a smile of devotion that would turn a human's head forever. But the doctors accept the smiles and adoration with the complaisance of the immortals, ask a few short questions and pass on to the next worshiper.

It is usually night when the husbands, the fathers, make their appearance. Some come to see the baby, most to see the mother and a few are actuated only by a sense of duty. They don't belong here and they know it and all are relieved when it is 9 o'clock and they must go. But not the most casual parent is allowed to pass the doors without examining his offspring once more. "Would you like to see the baby?" the nurse asks with deceptive gentleness. Before he can answer he is led to the nursery and his particular contribution to the human race held up for admiration.

The babies sleep and the mothers, too, are tucked in, their windows raised and lights put out as if they were again young and helpless. The hall is dim and only two nurses remain awake, white-robed guardians of sleep.

Occasionally the contentment of the mothers is broken when a new patient arrives. Unease runs down the corridor, branching into every room. And the nurses are plagued with questions. "Will the baby come tonight?" "What are they giving her?" "How is she now?" But even those who cry a little for their sister in the next room cry as for a suffering far away. They know that what pain is necessary will be endured, will be forgotten, will even, miraculously, be forgiven. They realize that, unlike any other kind of physical suffering, this has a purpose, that its endurance carries a reward.

For some, there is another pain whose knowledge is not so easily quieted, one that recurs during the somnolent hours of convalescence; the realization that these mothers and babies, whether in ward or private room, are rarely fortunate in their comfort. They have a vision of babies being born all over the world, a vision of how pitifully few are welcomed by knowing gentle hands, tended and washed and fed, treated for at least ten days as should be treated the frail repositories of man's hope.

City Of Racketeers

A LIGHT BURNS in the window of the home of Al Capone to guide the master back when he has cleaned up the odds and ends of his sentence, and there are indications that he will resume his career in the Miami sector of Florida. His old chief of staff, the man who used to pass sentence on the enemies of the regime in Chicago, is solidly established in the horse and dog racing rackets, and several distinguished criminals of the prohibition era are prominent in the affairs of a licensed vice which handles about $55,000,000 a ear in Florida and this year paid the State treasury almost $2,000,000.

There is an element of the Miami population, made up of home owners and other town-proud Americans, who would like to keep Capone out and drive off the other Chicago criminals who have dug in, but that is a futile hope. These criminals are leading citizens. With so much money at their command, racketeers can buy local officials, State legislators and other politicians, and the community is spread so thin over such a great stretch of beach and palmetto, extending right up to the edge of the jungle, that there is no civic unity or workable public spirit or political responsibility.

Strange Elements Thrown Together

HERE ARE strange elements thrown together—rich respectables from Northern cities, with beautiful homes, who are practically strangers in the community; gamblers from Broadway and Chicago; Southern carpetbaggers who are Ku Kluxers under the skin, engaged in commerce, building and real estate trading, and Florida crackers from the backwoods—a hard breed whose politicians are active and influential but notoriously crooked. Then, of course, there are tourists and the floating help of the hotel and restaurant trade, who take no interest at all in local affairs.

The town fades off into country where peonage exists and the colored persons' rights to life and liberty do not exist and, although menials in Miami, are subject to a fingerprint regulation with which notorious racketeers, handling literally millions of dollars of public cash, need not comply. They are businessmen, sportsmen and guests.

Racing Lobbyists Haunt Legislature

THIS YEAR by some strange quirk of local politics having nothing to do with public policy or morals, table gambling was severely restricted and the slot machine racket was suspended. One room which did open, serving fine meals at a nominal price, was compelled to close when an old-time restaurant keeper, with no gambling room in his premises, told the city council of Miami Beach that unless this unfair competition was removed he would set up half a dozen roulette wheels in the middle of his dining room and publicly advertise gambling as one of the attractions. But next year always is another year, and when Capone comes home the slots and the tables may come back. And, anyway, Capone's mob are doing very well in the racing business, in a profitable hookup with the rich killer criminals who operate the nation-wide system of horse parlors and publications.

Race-track lobbyists openly haunt the Legislature, and men who make and enforce the laws place themselves under obligations to racketeers by soliciting race-track jobs for themselves and their kin and for their political workers. Lawyers, of course, regard criminals as choice clients and are always resourceful in obtaining injunctions, appeals and reversals, but, as in Washington, law practice consists more of seeing the right people and presenting irresistible arguments out of court than of open litigation.

No Racket Boss To Rule Bribes

EFFORTS were made to run Capone and his mob out of town before he was sentenced to prison, but he fought back, and if he hadn't been interrupted he might have been absolute political boss of the Miamis by now. Still there would seem to be no big individual graft. It appears, on the contrary, to be a case of every grafter for himself, with no boss to regulate privileges and payments, and this would account for the periodic petty reforms and the confident effrontery of Al Capone in planning to return to resume operations in a city which is actually a frontier station for all its "glammer" and metropolitan fixings. The individual politician is a penny-ante chisler.

One interesting change has taken place. A couple of Irish bootleggers and mobsters from New York pioneered the racing racket here, but, as in Chicago, the Irish though tough and brave, were dumb and have been moved out by well-known Italian criminals who now dominate that phase of Miami life.

Guard Peace, Says P.-T.A. Speaker

Cincinnatti, May 4 (U.P.).—The National Congress of Parents and Teachers closed its annual session tonight with a call to parents and schools to unite toward the preservation of peace and democracy.

Dr. Raymond A. Kent, president of the University of Louisville (Ky.), told delegates there were 2,000,000 unemployed youth in the United States and added:

"How easy it would be for a Hitler to get hold of this group! If youth rises up, the responsibility will rest on the shoulders of adults."

Bridge

By F. G. Smith, Jr.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Danzig.

THERE WILL be no frenzied cries for "release from tyranny" here in Danzig, but only because the Nazis believe that such cries will not be necessary. From the highest officials down to the smallest 10-year-olds in the Hitler-Jugend, all Danzigers are convinced that the Poles are prepared to give way peacefully, and that Hitler's arrival in the harbor is only a few days or weeks distant. "Danzig will be German again."

They say this phrase with a grin, because they know that the Poles have long been relegated to a back seat and that Danzig is a German city in everything but actual fact. What they most want to see are the showy uniforms of the German Wehrmacht and a few destroyers in the Vistula. The presence of Nazi armed might in the city would complete, in their eyes, the job of Nazification which they have already so efficiently done.

There would be, of course, other changes if Hitler should walk in; but, from Danzig's viewpoint, relatively minor ones. The board composed of five Poles, five Germans and a stolid Dutchman which controls the port would be quickly liquidated. The Polish munitions dump which lies at the mouth of the Vistula would become German property, empty or full. The League of Nation's high commissioner, the Swiss professor, Carl J. Burckhart, whom the Nazis like because he does not interfere with their plans, would leave with appropriate ceremonies.

The mark would place the gulden as currency. The swastika would officially take over the red and white flag of the Free City. The Poles would relinquish their control of the railroads. Elections to the Volkstag (parliament), the last vistige of practical democracy which the territory possesses, would abruptly cease. Not, however, that it would make any difference in the control of the city. All but two of the present deputies are National Socialists.

THAT WOULD be practically all. Already the Nuremberg laws controlling the Jews are in effect, and the 2,500 Jews who cannot leave Danzig and Zoppot have been permitted only two doctors and one notary poblic of their own race. A good part of the Jewish stores still lie in ruins as the result of the latest "cleansing process." The press has been reduced, since 1933, to two National Socialist papers. No installation of Nazi gauleiter (district leader) will be necessary. Not even the ritual of naming and Adolf Hitler square will be called for. The Senate has already taken care of this precious formality.

The Danziger cannot understand why the world does not "understand." The arguments of a member of the Senate, which is the actual ruler of the Free City's 760 square miles, were summed up in the following manner: "96 per cent of the population is German. The overwhelming majority of these Germans are National Socialists. There are only 14,000 Poles in the city. We joined Prussia in 1814 and we lived with her until 1920. We never had reason to complain. Poland has caused us much economic hardship by shipping too many costly goods through Gdynia. We want more trade. We want to return, and we will."

When it is suggested that the return of Danzig to the Reich is only the necessary forerunner to the return of the Polish Corridor, there is no great surprise. It is the next step, admitted to be such by just as many Germans as foreign observers. But the date of the exploit is not fixed, principally because Poland here has something more to say. Translated into colloquially solid English, their words mean: "The Germans should guess again." The recent nasty riots here in the Hoch-Schule between German and Polish students, and the strong anti-German feeling in the Corridor, put a belligerent stamp on their statement.

JUST HOW tough the Poles will be in the Corridor, one can foresee from their recent policy vis-a-vis Danzig. They are putting up a far better verbal battle for it than was expected. Unfortunately their bark in worse than their bite, and competent observers in both camps assert that Poland will not—in fact—cannot, go to the mat for the Free City. Meanwhile, why not bark? Everyone is doing it now, and occasionally it works.

Behind the bark of Danzig's citizens, too, there is more than first meets the ear. The bark is not purely an ideological one. It rises, in part, from the petty but nevertheless constant annoyances which the frontiers with their complex regulations bring to daily life. The Germans traveling from Danzig to Marienburg in East Prussia, first pass through the Free City's agents to declare that they have no gulden in their pockets. They pass through the Polish customs at Tczew (Dirschau to the Germans) and go through passport formalities. At the German border they are stopped a third time, and in the Marienburg railroad station, they are checked once more. On the return trip the same necessary rigmarole takes place. The 15,000 Danzigers who earn their bread in the Reich have their troubles as well. They can send no more than 50 marks a week inside the city for the support of their families.

THEN THERE is Gdynia, the Polish port only 9 miles up the coast, which has been far too prosperous for Nazi pleasure. Since its first mushroom growth in 1924, all American ships stopped there in preference to Danzig. The merchant marines of other nations, to lesser degree, have followed suit.

In 1931 Danzig took in 754,000 tons and gave out 7,575,205 tons to Gdynia's 558,549 and 4,741,656 tons, respectively, but in 1933, the year Hitler took power, Gdynia overhauled her larger and elderly neighbor, handling 54.2 per cent of the total combined traffic. Though the National Socialists at once put on the heavy-handed pressure, and demanded that Poland give Danzig a better break, the old Hanseatic city has not regained the leadership. Last year Gdynia had 9,200,000 tons of traffic to Danzig's 7,100,000.

What, precisely, will Germany get if she should take Danzig, in addition to approximately 400,000 Nazi fanatics, a harbor thought by many sailors to be the best in the world, and a city which in unspolied aged beauty has few equals? She will receive large tracts of grassland, a slight excess supply of milk and butter, a first-class international summer resort in Zoppot, exceptionally good forests of beech and oak, the great Schichau ship construction works and control over the International Shipbuilding & Engineering Co., in which considerable British capital is invested. Perhaps more important, when and if war should come, will be Germany's strategic proximity to Gdynia. Though the Poles have a navy, and a modern one, it is no match for Germany's. Gdynia could be blockaded without too much trouble.

DANZIG and Poland today form one economic territory, with common customs regulations. The abolition of these laws, Danzigers declare, will bring the city back the prosperity it once enjoyed. But that prosperity rests on peace, and the peace about which statesmen so unconvincingly chatter is now far away. The old struggle between England and Germany, once again primarily for capitalistic power with important ideological considerations taking second place, is repeating itself at all too rapid a rate.

Neutrality Abandoned

By Ernest K. Lindley

Mr. Landon's Views

IN HIS SPEECH Wednesday night, Alf M. Landon redefined his attitude toward the President's foreign policy.

He indorsed the President's appeal for a peace conference and urged him to try again. As he read Hitler's speech, the door is still left "slightly open for further discussion of the common destiny of the common people of this world."

But Mr. Landon, at the same time, put his finger on the point of weakness, and of danger, in the President's foreign policy. This is, that insofar as he is able to do so, the President has "abandoned neutrality for the United States." Mr. Roosevelt does not approach the European scene with impartiality. He has chosen sides—in fact, he has almost succeeded in making himself the chief spokesman for one side. Thereby he has weakened himself and the United States in the role of intermediary.

The dangerous aspect of the President's policy, as Mr. Landon sees it, is that if the great European war does break out, the measures "short of war" with which the President proposes to help one side may lead to our full participation in the war.

May Mean Sending Of American Troops

"IF THE SIDE we are helping is winning, we may be able to stay out," Mr. Landon thinks. "But the situation is different, both actually and psychologically, when our side is losing. We—a proud people—would then be in the position of starting something we won't finish. Therefore, we have an exact duplication of the situation when we entered the World War."

Mr. Landon wants us to face frankly the fact that "economic assistance means, in the end, 'doughboy assistance'"—the sending of American boys into the cockpit of Europe to fight.

Mr. Landon's speech is extremely important, because for 2½ years he has been upholding the President's hands in the foreign field. After his defeat in the 1936 election he came to Washington and declared, in substance, that politics should stop at the water's edge. During the Panay crisis he called upon the Nation to back the President, and he was helpful to the Administration in heading off the Ludlow resolution. Last winter he went to Lima, as second man in the American delegation, to prove to the world that the Monroe Doctrine is a national, and not a party, policy.

His Policy Ideas On Lofty Plane

BY ACTION, as well as word, Alf Landon has put his consideration of our foreign relations on a lofty plane. If there has been any thought of partisan politics in what he has said, it has been very high-class politics. There was no suggestion of partisan politics in his speech Wednesday night, in which, for the first time since the 1936 election, he indicated where he disagreed with the President's foreign policy. He was temperate in tone and constructive in his attitude.

Throughout the campaign of 1936 I traveled with Alf Landon as a newspaperman. I know that he is a man with a lot of "horse sense." You might not have suspected it from some of the speeches he made, especially during the latter part of his campaign, when he had been broken to harness by the Republican National Committee, the party's big contractors, and an extremely conservative "brains trust." But left to himself he can come as near as anybody I know to expressing the sentiments of the intelligent middle-class American citizen in the area between the Alleghenies and the Rockies.

As he said Wednesday night, he does not like to see people who claim to be American citizens organizing in "pro-Hitler bunds" or in "Stop Hitler parades." He does not like to see people who claim to be American citizens "organizing as Czecho-Slovakians to regain the independence of that country." He wants a thoroughly American foreign policy—based upon our interests, not upon emotion. But he acknowledges that emotional, economic and other pulls are already making themselves felt. He is fearful that we couldn't stay out of a prolonged general war.

Believes America Usually Is 'Sucker'

HE BELIEVES that our naval power assures our security for his time, and probably for his youngest child's time. But he wonders "how long popular government can survive in a world armed to the teeth and constantly attacking or threatening to attack."

He believes we have usually played the "sucker" in our relations with Europe, and he remembers that we were involved in a World War by another President who tried to act as a mediator. But he urges the President to keep on appealing for peace.

There is not a trace of dogmatism or smugness in Alf Landon's speech. Nor is there any effort to belittle the gravity of the crisis that grips Europe and Asia.

Alf Landon, moreover, has the courage to say that even though Hitler is Hitler, the Germans have a case. One of Mr. Roosevelt's great errors, I believe, has been his failure to acknowledge that the Germans have a case. If he had acknowledged it and stated it earlier, he would be in a stronger position now to act as an intermediary in an effort to preserve peace.

Alf Landon's speech ought to be read carefully in the Roosevelt Administration as well as in the chancellories of Europe. Better than anyone else, I suspect, he has worded the sentiments of a great body—perhaps a majority—of the American people.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

As Litvinov Goes

"THE SHREWD victor will, if possible, keep imposing his demands on the vanquished by degrees. He can then, in dealing with a nation which has lost its character—and this means every nation which submits voluntarily—count on its never finding in any one act of oppression adequate ground for taking up arms once more.

"For the more exactions which have been willingly endured, the less justifiable does it seem to them to resist at the last because of a new and apparently isolated . . . imposition, especially when so much more and such greater misfortune, taken together, has already been accepted submissively and with silence."—Adolf Hitler, from "Mein Kampf."

The above program has been methodically pursued, and the end is not yet.

The Times, of London, which played so important an "appeasement" role during the Czecho-Slovak crisis, is asking whether Danzig is worth fighting for. After that it will probably ask whether a German road through the Corridor is worth fighting for. After that, there will be nothing worth fighting for, so far as Poland is concerned, because Poland will be surrounded, and it will be impossible to save her in any case.

Chaos Foreseen If Poland Goes

IF POLAND goes, the persecutions which will follow absorption into the German orbit will surpass in fury anything that has happened in Czecho-Slovakia.

Social unrest in all countries will be greatly accelerated and will lead, in all countries, to governmental suppressions.

Arms will accumulate everywhere; militarism will flourish; but the fear of facing and conjoining the issue abroad will eventually lead to the arms being used to suppress the populations at home.

This is what Hitler, the revolutionary arm of the German plan for world domination, counts on.

The attitude of the two revolutionaries, Hitler and Stalin, is not basically unlike.

Both are counting, in their plans, the revolutionary implications of the present condition of affairs: The breakdown of international capitalism; the bankruptcy of the democratic method; the despair of the unemployed; the futile irritation of the industrialists; the muddle-headedness of democratic politicians; the disillusion of the middle classes; the confusion of the intellectuals; the desire for peace, which has degenerated into pacifism and do-nothingness into a scramble to escape the storm, to seek cover, however temporarily, in the philosophy of Mr. Micawber.

Nazis' Doctrine Antihumanistic

THE CONTRIBUTION OF communism to the nihilism of democratic despair has been to shear humanism off democracy, to reduce the concept of democracy to crass materialism, to interpret life in terms of bread alone.

The Nazis, as antihumanistic as the communists, have elevated the communist have-not doctrine into a war cry for the have-not states.

They also sing, "We have been naught, we shall be all."

The old pan-German dream of the superstate which will rule the whole world comes out again, equipped with the force of a completely regimented opinion, as the world force for order, for total solution—in the total dissolution of national independences and of freedom everywhere.

In London, the Soviet Ambassador who returned only four days ago from Moscow, admits that he does not know what the replacing of Litvinov by Molotov may mean.

Perhaps before these lines appear we shall know more clearly. For we shall have heard how Col. Beck, the Polish prime minister, answers Hitler's demands.

Litvinov's Quitting Is Held Significant

WHAT THE CHANGE certainly does NOT mean is the official Soviet explanation—that Litvinov is ill and tired and asked to be relieved of his duties. Russian officials take orders. They do not ask to be relieved of anything.

Litvinov is through. He represented the Russian policy of rapprochement with the western democracies.

His retirement on the eve of Col. Beck's declaration means one of two things: Either Russia has decided to become isolationist—which means she has decided to come to terms with Hitler regarding everything except her own frontiers—or a last-minute pressure is being brought to bear upon Britain and France to conclude an outright military alliance.

It is probable that both motives are combined in the Russian move. It amounts to saying, "Cut bait or we quit fishing." If Britain refuses the hard and fast alliance, Poland is lost, Rumania will go, the Nazis will be on the Black Sea soon and France and England will be next on the program.

Soviet Russia is prepared to wait for the eventual great ideological war. Her tactic will be to give Hitler a free hand in the west.

Stars on Parade Other Volunteers

EVENTUALLY, then, there will either be war, with Britain and France in an appallingly disadvantageous position, or there will be a peace of compromise. The peace of compromise would mean a compromise on the German terms. Those terms would mean a trade deal, the suppression of all anti-Nazi activities, the opportunity, therefore, for the triumph of the Nazi ideology, and the trade deal would be directed against the United States everywhere in the world, and especially in South America.

This kind of thinking is taking a long view, in which one must also count the imponderables, such as the effect of prolonged depression upon restless social forces; the inevitable necessity of National Socialism to move very far to the left; the possible revolt of the people everywhere against dawdling tactics of their leaders.

But to take a long view is fundamentally undemocratic. For democracy in this degenerate age has become the philosophy of hand-to-mouth.

The Once Over

At Any World's Fair

Mother:
Come, Willie, to the Court of Peace—
We'll see the big lagoon,
Some works of art from ancient Greece,
The rocket to the moon!
Willie:
Aw, Mom, you go and see all that
And take dear Popper, too;
I wanna see the monkeys at
Frank Buck's colossal zoo.
Mother:
We must see Constitution Hall,
And Hall of Power, son;
They are so educational—
A help to anyone.
Willie:
I wanna see the midget show
Put on by Morris Gest,
The Byrd camp in the ice and snow—
The penguins and the rest.
Popper:
My boy, I feel you oughta see
The buildings of the Swiss;
The Chilean exhibit we Cannot afford to miss.
Willie:
Aw, Popper, all those things can go
Until some other day;
I wanna see the diving show
And fireworks display.
Popper:
You both do as you wish to do—
I hope you'll like it fine;
I'll meet you at a Gate Forty-two
About, say, half past nine.
Mommer:
Now lissen, I've heard that before;
You'd better stick with us;
There are instructive things galore
To see and to discuss.
Popper:
Take Willie to the Science Hall
I think you really should . . .
I'll give those dancing girls a call
—I hear they're pretty good.
Mommer:
Oh, look! The Du Pont Building! Look!
A feature of the Fair . . .
It shows, according to the book,
How buns are made from air.
Popper:
Oh, science is a great delight
But now, just now, for me;
There is a Cuban dance tonight
I think I ought to see.
Willie:
Aw, Mom, my feet are getting hot;
I wanna shoot the chutes;
Where is that place where they have got
Those public parachutes?
Mommer:
The Fair is educational—
The whole thing was designed
To serve as just a trumpet call
To elevate the mind.
Willie and Popper:
We wanna get a hamburg. Wow!
Oh, smell those onions ripe!
We gotta get a hamburg now—
The special World's Fair type.
Mommer:
A hamburger! I'll go for that!
I'll take a hot dog, too.
I knew we'd all find something at
The Fair we all could do!

Back Home Stuff

Charlie Atwood was among those present at New Haven's day at the New York World's Fair and it brought back the days when, as a schoolboy, we got our first job and made our first dollar working for him . . . Charlie was in the wholesale candy business and we currycombed his horses, washed his wagons, drove his teams and occasionally hooked a few chocolate almonds from the boxes . . . Mr. Atwood made flavoring extracts on the side and we can still remember the job we hated most; washing out hundreds of bottles in the set-tubs preliminary to filling them with Atwood's Vanilla Extract.

Our biggest thrill in those days was hitching Dick, the big black horse, to a sleigh and driving around town delivering candies and extracts after a good snowstorm.

Many people who always said television would be a good thing if it was ever perfected have seen the recent television broadcasts. Their verdict is that television will be a good thing if it ever is perfected.

The recent goldfish swallowing mania in university life has had its variations. They say that at one college a coxswain, after too many highballs, was found yelling for help. When classmates rushed out and demanded what had happened he cried, "I've been swallowed alive by a goldfish."

Pedestination

In the dim, primordial slime,
Many aeons, say, ago,
Our predetermined time
Was appointed here below,
And a dark and distant fate
Fixed the minute and the date
Of our demise.
Yet it is wise,
It seems to me,
To gargle rather frequently,
Wear our rubbers, be of cheer,
And see the dentist twice a year!
WILFRED J. FUNK.

Economic Pressure Plus

Ima Dodo has increased her boycott of Japan by getting all her college boy friends to sign a pledge not to swallow Japanese goldfish.

Italy's Aims In Balkans

By Virginio Gayda

Rome, May 4.—The sudden and profound upheaval in the status of Alabania has drawn attention to the Italian policy in the Balkans. After the events of Austria and Czecho-Slovakia which displaced southwards the political forces and influence of Germany, it was said in Paris and London with a feigned commiseration that Italy had been definitely expelled from the Balkans. Today this opinion has changed. People speak of an Italian pressure and menace with regard to the Balkan Peninsula. How to define the Italian policy in these regions, wrongly described at an earlier date as the powder barrel of Europe, and whose political system is reflected in the position in the eastern Mediterranean?

First, it is necessary to state in principle that the military occupation of Albania was not an invasion but merely the beginning of a wider and more peaceful collaboration between Albania and the Italian nation. The Italian occupation was desired by the Albanian people. This is proved by the fact that it was possible for the Italians to disembark in a few hours on four different points of the Albanian coast without encountering any effective resistance and that the total military occupation of Albanian—a territory of 28,000 square kilometers—was terminated in five days without a gunshot.

Let us not speak of a disproprotion between the forces involved. The Albanians are a small people, proud and warlike. They could, if they had so wished, have offered resistance by arms . . .

Italy Proposes To 'Civilize' Albania

Albania having been finally occupied, Italy proposes to civilize the country by means of great public works, drainage of marshes, the creation of industries, hospitals and schols. At the same time Italy opens her doors to the Albanian people. Albanian citizens will enjoy in Italy the same civic and political rights as the Italians. A customs union will open the Italian market to the free exportation of all Albanian products . . . In a few years Albania will be a well organized territory, equipped for extensive production and important trade . . .

Based on these fundamental and concrete facts, Italy's firm intention is to make Albania the starting point of a wider and more pacific collaboration among all the Balkan countries.

Yugoslavia already has understood and has ahered to this new tendency of Italy's Balkan policy. . . . Italy proposes to pursue a similar policy in respect to the other Balkan states—by bloc or confederation under her patronage. Still less does she dream of supremacy in the Balkans. All that she desires is collaboration on an equal footing defined by bilateral agreements in which each of these countries could, without ambiguity, set forth its position and its real interests.

It is possible, however, to admit that Italy's relations are not yet completely clarified. The reason for this . . . is only to be found in the political tendencies fostered in these nations before the recent Albanian events.

Greece has up to now regarded herself as being in the service of British policy. Her relations with Italy always have been influenced by the relations between Italy and Great Britain. . . . Immediately after the events of Albania the Italian government fully and completely informed Greece of the objects of her Balkan policy. Great Britain noetheless intervened and imposed upon Greece a guaranty pact by which she committed herself to considering that she was menaced by Italy. Italy has noted these facts and will act accordingly.

Bulgaria 'Isolated' By Hesitation

As for Bulgaria, there is nothing to say, except that her heroic, laborious and long-suffering people have been isolated by a hesitating policy which has made them unable to choose in due time the line they will take and to shoulder their responsibilities. Therefore they have not been in a position to press their national claims, notwithstanding the undertaking of the allied powers with regard to Bulgaria's access to the sea. . . .

As for Turkey, Italy watches with friendly interest the development of her national policy and with some perplexity the trend of her international course. Italy was the only great power to have no part in the spoils of to Ottoman Empire. She is, however, regarded by Turkey with distrust, perhaps at the instigation of Great Britain and France, who wish to divert the attention of the country from the fact that they possess her territories while conjuring up a nonexistent menace of Italy in the future. Turkey herself does not appear to have grasped the real trend of the Italian policy.

The Italian policy toward the Balkna powers will therefore be determined by the attitude of those powers themselves. It is not one of battle, but, on the contrary, definitely constructive. It has not been devised at the eleventh hour for territorial canquest or as a counter-offensive against the British-French policy. . . .

On the ruins of the League of Nations and of the two collateral ententes, France and Great Britain are now endeavoring to reconstitute in the Balkans and in northeastern Europe new systems of tacit alliance between states presumably menaced by Italy and Germany based upon so-called guarantees. It is natural that Italy and Germany should attempt to break through this circle of iron. But they do not propose to apply a plan of conquest but rather a scheme for pacific and productive collaboration with all those Balkan countries which are still free to direct their political and economic policies . . .

By this policy Italy, like Germany, tends to establish in Europe a balance of forces and influences destroyed since the war but necessary in the vital interests of real peace.

Democratic Women Dine In Arlington

Stella Akin, Aide To Attorney General, Among Speakers

Addressing 200 members and friends of the Arlington County Democratic Woman's Club at its annual banquet and dance last night at the Washington Golf and Country Club, Miss Stella Akin, special assistant to the Attorney General, declared the Democratic Party offers a more progressive program to women than any other political organization. Never before in the history of this country has there been a greater recognition of women's influence in politics than was shown by the Democratic Party in 1933, when President Roosevelt was first inaugurated.

In the last year the National Youth Administration, through its student aid program, has kept 327,484 needy children in schools and colleges through part-time works projects, she said. In addition, the N. Y. A., through its work projects, has 125,000 young people on its pay rolls. It likewise assists youths in locating employment, and assists communities in setting up co-ordinated youth programs.

Representative Patrick Speaks

The next speaker, Representative Luther Patrick, of Alabama, said: "The Democratic Party has a program—it is not yet finished—and all we need to do is to stand together as we did in 1932 and 1936 and we will get ahead.

"In 1932 we needed a leader and service and we found both in President Roosevelt and we must not now allow anyone to come in and take over our program before it is finished.

"One of our only faults has been that we have gone ahead and listened to some that have found fault with our program."

He congratulated the women of Arlington County for a strong organization and one which has accomplished much in the past and expressed his confidence their accomplishments will continue.

Freund Sings

The exercises opened with the invocation by the Rev. Harry Craver, followed by the address of welcome of the president, Mrs. Beulah Shipley Goss.

The musical program was featured by the singing of gypsy melodies in costume by Robert Frederick Freund, of Washington, who was accompanied by Miss Myrtle Alcorn. Other numbers were vocal solos by Miss Carolyn Schulte, accompanied by Mrs. Elsie Crammer, and dances by Lee and Cody O'Neill.

Among invited guests were Representative and Mrs. Howard W. Smith, State Senator and Mrs. John W. Rust, Delegate and Mrs. William D. Medley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Fenwick, W. A. E. McShea, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, William P. Ames, George M. Yeatman and Freeland F. Chew, members of the county board; Sheriff Howard B. Fields and L. C. Kinnier, county engineer.

Skyline Caverns, Newly Opened, Attract Throng

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., May 4.—The latest group of caverns in the Shenandoah to be developed as a sightseeing attraction, the Skyline Caverns at Front Royal, drew more than 550 visitors during the first two days the caverns were opened to the public, over last week-end, according to a report by Acting Manager Edward Brucekingsmill to the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

The Skyline Caverns differ in formation from the other limestone fairylands of the region, being canyon shaped and having helictite formations not found in any other Virginia caverns.

There are several lakes, designated by such names as "Wishing Lake" "Dream Lake," "Mirror Lake" and "Fairyland Lake," the last an extensive body of crystal-clear water. One of the underground streams drops over a ledge of rock for 38 feet and is named Cataract Falls.

New Y. M. C. A. Chairman

Chambersburg, Pa., May 4.—Frank C. Baldwin, dean of Penn Hall School, has been appointed chairman of the Y. M. C. A. advisory board for Chambersburg, succeeding William H. Lawrence, jr., whose business interests have taken him to Winchester, Va.

Police Trace 'Pyre' Victim Movements

Rising Sun, Md., May 4 (AP).—State police theorized today the last 30 minutes of Robert Christie Taylor's life held the secret of his strange "torch-death" deep in the backwoods of Cecil County.

Corpl. John Novicki and Officer Augustus Koste set out to trace the 22-year-old truck driver's movements from 3 a. m. Tuesday until his charred body was found two hours later in the smoking wreckage of his automobile.

Their problem was to settle whether Taylor committed suicide or whether he was murdered.

Former Coroner R. C. Dodson, of Rising Sun, assisting Coroner J. B. Slicer on the case, said he believed the truck driver had been clubbed by an unknown assailant who set fire to the car to cover evidence of the crime.

Riley Reveals Rise in Cancer, Syphilis in Md.

Prince Georges Council Told There Were 9,443 Cases in 1936

Despite a sharp drop in many contagious diseases in Maryland in the last half-century, increased public co-operation with the health department is vital for further health gains throughout the State, Dr. R. H. Riley declared at a meeting of the Prince Georges County Community Council last night.

While a sharp curtailment of typhoid, tuberculosis, diphtheria and scarlet fever has been brought about, public support of the health department is needed to halt heart disease, diabetes and cancer, which have increased of late, Riley declared at the Riverdale Elementary School.

Typhoid fever has dropped from an annual ratio of 45 cases to every 100,000 persons in 1900 to a percentage of one and one-half at present, Riley declared. The number of diphtheria cases fell from 14 to 1 in 100,000 last year, he said.

Marked increases in heart disease have been noticed in the last 20 years, due to "fast living" and lack of rest, he asserted.

Number of cancer and syphilis cases per capita have gone up in recent years, Riley said, with 9,443 cases in Maryland in 1936—or more prevalent than measles.

Other speakers included Miss Agnes Duvall, director of county social work; Mrs. Margaret P. Etowski, county health nurse; Miss Lydia Eicher, executive secretary of the County Welfare Board; Mrs. J. O. Anderson, of the County Welfare Board, and Caesar Aiello, of the County Social Service League.

Va. Scientists Open Session in Danville

Danville, Va., May 4 (AP).—The seventeenth annual meeting of the Virginia Academy of Science opened tonight with Earle B. Norris, of Blacksburg, academy president, presiding.

More than 300 scientists are expected to attend tomorrow's sessions. At tomorrow night's meeting the annual academy prize for research will be awarded.

Hazel Scaife, Analyst and Lawyer, Dies

World Veteran Aided Investigation Of War Profiteers

Hazel Lewis Scaife, lawyer, publicist, investigator and analyst died at his home, 5419 Forty-first street, Chevy Chase, D. C., yesterday, three weeks before his sixty-seventh birthday. A veteran of the World War, he had been instrumental in starting the investigation of war profiteers after the war.

Born in Spartanburg, S. C., Mr. Scaife came to Washington in 1918. He was a graduate of the Citadel, Charleston, S. C., and had practiced law at Union, S. C., and spent eight years in Mexico as attorney for the W. K. Bellis properties.

In the early days of the war he was appointed to the Naval Consulting Board, and later was commissioned captain in the aviation section, Signal Reserve Corps.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eliza McCaslan Scaife; two daughters, Mary Lewis Scaife, secretary to the editor of The Post, and Mrs. Donald Detwiler, Arlington; a son, William McCaslan Scaife, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Portland, Oreg.; a brother, Rowland E. Scaife, and sister, Mildred Emily Scaife, of Atlanta, and four grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the S. H. Hines funeral home, Fourteenth and Harvard streets northwest, with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Body of Soldier, Missing a Week, Found in River

The body of Private Carroll Brown, 35, who had been missing from his post at Fort Myer, Va., since April 26, was found floating in the Potomac River between the Memorial and Highway bridges by harbor precinct police yesterday.

Lieut. Jules V. Richardson, of Fort Myer, identified the body last night and Brown's mother, Mrs. Irene Brown, of Lost Creek, W. Va., was informed of her son's death, police said.

Col. George S. Patton, commander of Fort Myer, appointed a board of officers to investigate the death.

Memorial Group To Regain Missing Lafayette Portrait

Stratford, Va., May 4 (AP).—Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, of Greenwich, Conn., president of the R. E. Lee Memorial Foundation, announced today a portrait of Lafayette by Charles Wilson Peale, which disappeared from Stratford more than 100 years ago, would be presented to the association Sunday.

The presentation will be made Sunday by the French Ambassador to the United States on behalf of Thomas C. Berry, of California. It will be accepted on behalf of the association by Gen. James G. Harbord. The portrait was once owned by Lighthorse Harry Lee.

Daughters of the Cincinnati will present Stratford with a tree to be planted by Mrs. Gilman D. Blake, president of the society, and the Anne Carter Lee Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at Lexington.

2-State Water Group Names Fort Meade Man as New Head

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., May 4.—A. M. Tawney, of Fort Mead, was nominated today for the presidency of the Maryland-Delaware Water and Sewerage Association which opened its annual conference with representatives of five States and the District of Columbia registered.

The association visitors and members in their two-day session will discuss municipal water and sewerage problems, what to do about them, and how to improve and protect municipal water systems.

Others named for offices during the next year were G. E. Harrington, Washington, first vice president; J. M. Jester, Hyattsville, second vice president; A. W. Blohm, Baltimore, secretary-treasurer; C. Gardner, Salisbury, four-year membership on the executive committee; R. J. Stewart, Edgewood, Md., two-year membership on the executive committee, filling Jester's incompleted term.

Fifteen Maryland towns were represented at today's sessions, in addition to visitors from Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and the District of Columbia.

Development of the Potomac Valley Conservancy District was discussed at this morning's session. Speakers included I. M. Glace, Harrisburg, Pa.; George L. Hall, Baltimore, and Harry R. Hall, chief engineer of the Washington Suburban Sanitary District.

Others who spoke were Col. R. S. Thomas, of Washington, District United States Army engineer, and W. D. Collins, Washington, engineer with the United States Geological Survey.

Maryland towns represented included Glen Burnie, Westernport, Hyattsville, Baltimore, Edgewood Arsenal, Fort Meade, Brunswick, Frostburg, Lonaconing, Salisbury, Hagerstown, Luke, Bel Air, Owings Mills and Annapolis.

Goldsborough Keeps Hands Off First District Congress Race

Ward Backer Denies Claiming Indorsement Of New Federal Judge; Democrats to Meet May 11 to Name Nominee

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., May 4.—A supporter of State Senator David J. Ward for the First District Congressional seat said today Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough had taken no part in the contest to name his successor in the House of Representatives.

Goldsborough, who recently retired from the House to accept the judical appointment, for years was a powerful figure in Eastern Shore politics. It was at his Denton home that President Roosevelt spoke last fall during the senatorial campaign.

"So far as I know Judge Goldsborough has not injected himself into the Shore Congressional contest and we do not claim his county's votes," said A. Percy White, Wicomico County Democratic committeeman.

White denied a statement attributed to him, that Goldsborough had indorsed Ward and that Cecil and Caroline counties' Democratic committees had officially decided to support the Wicomico County State Senator. Caroline is Goldsborough's home county.

The Democratic State central committee announced today it would meet at Baltimore May 11 to name the party's nominee for the June 6 election.

A leading contender with Ward is State Senator Dudley G. Roe, of Queen Anne's County, whose supporters also have claimed wide backing throughout the Shore.

The Talbot County central committee has indorsed Herbert I. Balch, Easton attorney, and the Queen Annes County, whose support has been pledged to State Senator Thomas F. Johnson.

No Republican aspirant has officially declared himself in the race.

Music Festival Set For Tonight In Purcellville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., May 4.—Four hundred school children will take part in the annual Loudoun County music festival tomorrow night in the Purcellville auditorium. The choruses will be composed of high school, elementary and primary groups with Miss Ruth Emerick as accompanist. The Loudoun County School Band will make its initial appearance and there will be folk dances by pupils of the Leesburg School under the direction of Miss Agnes Bargh.

Dr. Luther A. Richman, State Supervisor of Music, will give two barytone solos.

J. Lupton Simpson is chairman of the music committee and assisting him are Mrs. Charles S. Monroe, Miss Alice Grainger, Miss Elizabeth Gunn and A. L. Hutton.

Motorcade to Start At Charlottesville

Lynchburg, Va., May 4 (AP).—A motorcade will journey from Charlottesville to New Orleans next week in the interest of route 29, the Seminole Trail.

The party will leave Charlottesville Sunday morning at 8 o'clock and reach Charlotte, N. C., a distance of 286 miles, by night. Leaving Charlotte Monday, the motorcade will reach Atlanta, 27 miles distant, that night. On the third day it will travel 389 miles to Mobile, Ala. The 153-mile jump from there to New Orleans will be completed by noon Wednesday.

Md. City May Drop Housing Program

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 4.—The possibility of abandoning the proposed slum-clearance and low-rent housing program of Frederick was considered by the mayor and board of aldermen at their meeting last night. Mayor Lloyd C. Culler, who said he has become "fed up" with the numerous delays of the United States Housing Authority in approving the $450,000 Frederick project, said he would call a special meeting within a few days to act on the matter.

Albemarle Group Hears Of W. Va. Conservation

Charlottesville, Va., May 4 (AP).—The West Virginia Conservation Commission was outlined and discussed at a meeting here last night of the Albemarle Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, which is advocating a general revision of the conservation setup in Virginia.

Maj. H. W. Shawhan, West Virginia director of conservation, spoke of the commission's work in his State, while Calvin Price, editor of Marlinton, W. Va., talked of the effects of the commission's efforts.

Md. Veterans' Sons Elect C. C. Long New President

Hagerstown, Md., May 4 (AP).—Election and installation of officers for the coming year and memorial services this afternoon ended a two-day convention of the Maryland Sons of Union Veterans and the Women's Auxiliary.

Charles C. Long, of Washington, D. C., senior vice commander, was unopposed for the department commander's post, and Mrs. Minnie McClain, of Hagerstown, was the sole candidate nominated for the auxiliary presidency.

The organization's annual banquet, highlight of the convention, was held yesterday. Henry Holzapfel, jr. of Hagerstown, was the principal speaker, and Elmer P. Corrie, of Smyrna, Del., was the toastmaster.

U.D.C. Tribute Paid To Dr. J. C. Craven

Fort Monroe, Va., May 4 (AP).—The United Daughters of the Confederacy paid a tribute today to Dr. John J. Craven, United States Army surgeon, who administered to Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy, during his imprisonment here after the Civil War.

Mrs. Walter D. Lamar of Macon, Ga., president-general of the U. D. C., presented on behalf of the organization a bronze tablet honoring the New Jersey surgeon.

General F. H. Smith, commandant of Fort Monroe, was selected to accept the tablet on behalf of the United States Government, and Robert Craven, grandson of Dr. Craven, and Gerald Webb, jr., great grandson of Jefferson Davis, were asked to unveil it.

O'Kelly to Visit U. S. In Place of De Valera

Dublin, May 4 (AP).—Sean T. O'Kelly, Deputy Prime Minister of Ireland, will visit the United States this month in place of Prime Minister De Valera, it was announced tonight.

O'Kelly will sail for New York Saturday on the United States liner Washington. De Valera cancelled his trip because of Britain's adoption of conscription.

Mother Sees Child Killed

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Mrs. Vera Dorsey sent her daughter, Peggy, 5, to the corner grocery today, and stood on the porch to watch. She saw Peggy dart into the street in front of an automobile.

Price Report On Maryland Leaf Issued

Individual Lots Bring $3 to $40 at Tobacco Auctions

Auction markets for southern Maryland tobacco opened this week with prices for the first two days of sales, at Hughesville, May 1, and Upper Marlboro, May 2, ranging from $3 per hundred on individual lots of low quality dull, tips, and seconds to $40 for a limited quantity of choice and fine quality bright crop tobacco, the United States Department of Agriculture reports.

Average prices, according to quality, as collected and reported by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, ranged from $3.25 per hundred for low quality granulating seconds to $36 per hundred for fine quality bright crop.

Offerings consisted of about equal proportions of tobacco of heavy body and medium to thin body. In the heavy bodied tobaccos, good quality predominated in dull crop and fair and low qualities in dull and tips. In the medium to thin bodied tobaccos, good and fair qualities made up the bulk of the bright crop and stemming seconds, while fair and low qualities composed the majority of the granulating seconds.

Tobacco of Heavy Body	Average	Range
Dull crop:
Fine quality	$35.00	$34 to $36
Good quality	30.00	27 to 32
Dull:
Fair quality	22.50	18 to 26

Fair quality (green)	6.25	3 to 8
Low quality (dark)	4.25	3 to 6
Low quality (green)	3.75	3 to 5
Tips:
Fair quality	15.00	12 to 18
Fair quality (dark)	3.75	3 to 5
Tobacco of Thin to Medium Body
Bright crop:
Fine quality	36.00	34 to 37
Good quality	32.00	30 to 34
Fair quality	26.00	24 to 30
Low quality	17.50	15 to 23
Stemming seconds:
Good quality	18.00	14 to 23
Fair quality	11.25	6 to 15
Granulating seconds:
Fair quality	8.25	4 to 12

Auto Breaks Ankle Of D. C. Boy, 8

Thomas Manthos, 8, of 432 Second street northwest, suffered a broken ankle and the loss of several teeth yesterday when he was knocked down by an auto in front of his home. He was given first aid at Emergency Hospital and later transferred to Gallinger Hospital.

A car driven by E. G. Lumpkins, 1327 Eleventh street northwest, in which five bricklayers were riding, was overturned at Sixteenth and T streets northwest, after a collision with a taxicab operated by John Eberhardt, colored, 46, of 1137 Seventh street northwest.

Villanova Medal Given Dr. Cooper Of Catholic U.

Villanova College's Mendel Medal for scientific achievement was awarded last night to the Rev. John M. Cooper, Ph.D., professor of anthropology at Catholic University.

Rev. Dr. Cooper

Dr. Cooper was the third member of the Catholic University faculty to be honored with the medal. Former recipients were Dr. Francis O. Rice, professor of chemistry, and Abbe Georges Lemaitre, a Belgian scientist.

The eleventh recipient of the award, he was honored for his researches and discoveries in the origins of the North American Indians.

Ordained to the priesthood in Rome in 1905, Dr. Cooper has been a member of the Catholic University faculty since 1928. He is a past president of the Anthropological Society of Washington.

Prince Georges Asks Hearing On Bus Rates

Citizens Hear Change Planned Would Increase Costs

The Maryland Public Service Commission was requested last night by the Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Associations to hold hearings on the proposed changes in bus rates.

The motion was adopted following a statement by W. F. Mulligan that an official of the Capital Transit Co. had told him the present pass system would be withdrawn and a system of five zones, with a 5-cent fare in each zone, or a 12-ride ticket for $1.25, would be inaugurated. Mulligan said that such a system would increase cost of transportation about 12½ per cent.

The federation also opposed rezoning a 2½-acre tract at the intersection of Tuxedo road and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks for industrial purposes.

A committee report favoring a county hospital was adopted. The estimated cost of the hospital would be $260,000. Prince Georges County has a population of 80,000 and no hospital, the report said.

Contest Reveals Uncle Sam's Workers Go for Easily Prepared, 1-Dish Meals

Many Recipes Are Submitted By the Men

Samuel Berg, of Procurement Division, Wins First Prize of $3

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

UNCLE SAM'S departments are vibrant with Government employes who not only like appetizing and interesting food, but also know how to prepare it in record time. No sooner was the theme of the recipe contest—one-dish meal for Government employes—announced than the recipes started pouring in. As I dipped into my mailbag and looked over the recipes, I found several surprises. Perhaps the major amazement was the unusual recipes submitted by men.

Procurement Special

Samuel Berg, Procurement Division, United States Treasury Department, winner of first prize of $3, is on regular duty at his desk, but after 4:30 he knows the shortcuts to winning dishes. Mr. Berg's letter, which accompanied this recipe, is as follows:

MR. BERG

"As your contest is for Government employes, I'm taking this opportunity of sending on to you a few of my favorite recipes—they all make a one-dish dinner, invaluable for Government employes. I think this contest is especially valuable, as there are so many of us—we dash home to prepare something hurriedly. Sometimes, the main preparation is done the night before. Stuffed fish rolls with spinach goldenrod is a particular favorite of mine."

Stuffed Fish Rolls With Spinach Goldenrod

Toss 1 cup of bread crumbs and some minced onion in a little melted butter, season with salt and pepper. Cut fillets into long oblong pieces about 2 by 5 inches, season with salt and pepper, spread with the bread mixture, roll and fasten with toothpicks. Place fillets on an oven-proof platter, brush with butter, bake in a slow oven for 30 minutes. Arranged hot cooked well-seasoned spinach around fish rolls. Garnish with chopped eggs, or with egg forced through a sieve.

Mr. Berg's repertoire is by no means limited to one recipe, for he sent along a number of others which he says "just hit the spot." We will publish these recipes from time to time, so if you want to know of the others, watch the food pages of The Post.

Company Fare

The Scotchman who said about life, "It takes a good bit of doing," must have had the business woman in mind. Mrs. Eleanor A. Hay, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, winner of the second prize of $2 is an employed wife who doesn't find it such a chore to rush home and prepare her husband's dinner, or, as her recipe suggests, for guests, too. Mrs. Hay's letter shows that she has a clock-like precision in her life, for she is one to plan ahead. She writes:

MRS. HAY

"There are so many Government employes who dash home from the office to cook dinner, but I think I have a company meal which is very easily prepared, and very delicious. Going home after business and cooking is not a bugbear to me, for I know about the exciting foods the grocer has on his shelves in cans and boxes, such as gingerbread mix, puddings, soups, and even pie-crust. They are all a grand help to me, especially when I want to do an impressive meal in a short time.

"You ask for a one-dish recipe. I will give you my one-dish recipe, brown fricassee of chicken, and the menu I build around it.

Menu

Chilled cranberry juice
Brown fricasee of chicken
Mushrooms and onions
Green salad
Hot canned biscuits
Butterscotch pudding
Coffee

"The following is my working plan: The night before the dinner I partially cook, in water, the chicken, which I cut into serving pieces. Then when I reach home to start dinner I put the chicken into a heavy saucepan, add 1 small onion and ½ cup water and cook for 30 minutes, until browned. Add 1½ teaspoons salt and enough boiling water to nearly cover. Simmer for 30 minutes. Remove to casserole and keep hot. Mix 2 tablespoons flour with 2 tablespoons cold water and stir to smooth paste. Add to chicken stock. Cook and stir until thickened. Pour over chicken in casserole and garnish with mushrooms and small cooked onions.

"The cranberry juice, canned biscuits and pudding I buy at the grocery and they are no trick to prepare while the chicken is cooking."

A Friend to All

Only a few weeks ago a great English chef bestowed upon the hamburg a sort of culinary Victoria Cross. Hamburg travels in all classes, but especially is it a friend to the business woman. Now hamburg emerges with an inspired sauce and the piece de resistance for the business woman's dinner menu. Miss Helen Murphy, General Accounting Office, the winner of a $1 prize, gives her recipe and menu

MISS MURPHY

Season ground beef with salt, pepper, paprika and 1 tablespoon minced onion. Spread in greased baking dish. Sprinkle 10 sliced olives over it, then the contents of a 10½-ounce can tomato sauce. Bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, for 20 mniutes. In a small skillet place 3 tablespoons bacon fat, and when hot add 1 cup finely chopped boiled potatoes, salt and pepper. Press down with spatula into a cake. Brown and turn over to brown the other side. Put rolls in oven, prepare the coffee or tea. Drain a can of asparagus tips. Place around 4 tips a ring of pimento or green pepper, place on shredded lettuce. Serve with desired dressing. Fill tart shells with strawberries and whipped cream or ice cream.

A Tuna Gem

Miss Bertha L. Zoeller, Bureau of Information United States Department of Agriculture, is the winner of a $1 prize with her unusual use of tuna fish for the intriguing dish she calls deep set delight. Miss Zoeller, too, sends the foods with which she completes her menu—tomato juice, bran muffins and preserves.

MISS ZOELLER

Deep Sea Delight

Boil 3 cups noodles for 3 minutes in 4 cups of water. Let stand for 5 minutes. Mix 1 small can mushrooms, 1 medium can tuna fish, 2 cups cooked asparagus, 1 sall green pepper, chopped fine, 1 cup grated cheese, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and 1 cup medium white sauce. Pour into a greased casserole and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake at low temperature, 300 degrees, for 30 to 40 minutes.

Near East Flavor

Over from the Near East comes a fresh inspiration for a main dish. Miss Sylvia Klein, Procurement Division, Treasury Department, is an emancipated girl who is free to work all day in an office and at 4:30 is at liberty to turn to her culinary duties. Miss Klein was the winner of a $1 prize with the following recipe. She also sent in several other interesting recipes, and these will be printed at a later date. The following is Miss Klein's recipe in her own words:

MISS KLEIN

"The first recipe is an Armenian one—it is called Patlijan-Boereg—delicious and easily prepared, which is especially helpful when one comes home from a day at the office and wants something that is easily prepared."

Patlijan-Boereg

Slice 1 large eggplant in one-quarter inch slices sprinkle with salt and let stand 1 hour. Drain and saute the eggplant, a few pieces at a time, in 1 cup beef fat until nearly tender. Pour off most of the fat from the pan and put in a layer of the fried eggplant. Mix one-half pound hard cheese, grated, 4 springs parsley, chopped, and 2 eggs and spread part of the mixture on the eggplant. Put on another layer of eggplant and cover with the egg and cheese mixture until both are used up.

Two Ounces Butter Are Needed Daily

Butterfat is highly digestible and rapidly absorbed by the body. It is unique among food fats because of its high natural content of vitamin A, the important vitamin which helps protect the body against certain diseases and is necessary to the growth of children. The cow eats large quantities of green feeds which contain a substance called carotene; this is changed to vitamin A in the cow's body and is made available for human consumption in the fat of the cow's milk. Thus the cow performs a great service to humanity.

4:30—Leaving Office 6:30—Serving Dinner

Personality and attractiveness alone are not enough for the Government miss pictured above, for she belongs to the kitchen craftsmen, and like the Swiss watchmaker, makes precision plans so that she can interpret them rapid-fire and serve a guest dinner, complete to an intriguing dessert, after a day at the office.

14¢ QUART

Bigger value in milk! That means extra richness . . . more for your money.

And with Sylvan Seal you can see for yourself you're getting it. The fourth glass in every quart tells the story—just as creamy, just as delicious as the first. Compare the 4th glass of Sylvan Seal with ordinary milk, see the difference—taste the difference. Then ask your grocer for this better milk value.

You can depend upon it—Sylvan Seal always will be at its delicious best. Its extra richness is especially guarded by a special system of constant refrigeration that keeps it at a safe, even temperature from farm to you. Never allowed to vary because never left unguarded on doorstep or elsewhere.

THIS TEST TELLS—

Be Obliging To Mother On Her Day

Breakfast in Bed Would Be a Good Way to Please Her; Menus Suggested

By The Post Food Editor.

LONG BEFORE Mother's Day was established, Mothering Day was set aside in England—a Sunday in the springtime when young men and women were admonished to remember their parents with a gift. Sons and daughters conspire to give mother a thoroughly happy and delightful day in many homes. Mother is usually the busiest person in the household on most days of the year, so it gives special importance to the day if she becomes a lady of leisure for the occasion.

Begin to plan now for Mother's Day—a week from Sunday.

Start the day with serving mother her breakfast in bed. The prettiest linens, gay and dainty china and shiny silver should be used. A spray of flowers should be added to the tray for the honor guest. The following breakfast menu would be sure to please.

Mother's Day Breakfast

Melon rings with fresh raspberries
Eggs baked in cream Bacon curls
Muffins Strawberry jam
Coffee

Into almost every family there comes a time when some member is a bit under the weather, very ill or convalescing. At such a time the ailing one will be cheered by delectable dainties served on a comfortable bed tray. In serving invalids the attractiveness of the food has even greater effect on the appetite than it has with persons in normal health. It is advisable to have a tray with legs to hold it up from the bed, and it should be large enough so that the contents do not seem crowded. The dishes should be arranged for the convenience of the invalids.

A vase holding a single flower, or better still a fresh flower laid on the tray is an excellent appetizer for most invalids. Serve hot foods hot and cold foods cold. Do not serve too much, especially if the appetite is delicate, and arrange all food to look appetizing. Fill glasses and cups only up to 1 inch from top to avoid spilling. If the appetite needs tempting, have a "surprise." Never allow any remnants from a meal, or any soiled dishes to stay in the sick room for an unnecesasry moment.

Cream soups are excellent for the invalid, especially in the more delicate flavors such as asparagus or green pea. Of the shellfish, oysters are often allowed in a diet. Eggs may be served in any way that is not rich. Cereals are much used, both unsweetened and as a dessert.

Eggnog

Eggnog is a very nourishing drink of milk or cream and beaten egg, flavored to taste. The flavoring best liked by the patient should be carefully studied. A good general formula is as follows: Add ¾ teaspoon of sugar to 1 egg, beaten, and beat for 1 minute. Add ¾ cup milk, which should be very cold, pour into glass. Grate nutmeg over the top. There are many variations for eggnog, such as using cinnamon instead of nutmeg, 1½ teaspoons cocoa added, and fruit juices.

Baked Eggs

Grease an individual baking dish and spread with bread crumbs. Break an egg into the dish, season with salt. Pour over all ½ cup of cream. Bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees, until they are firm. Buttered toast made be served with the baked eggs.

Apricot Souffle

Apricot souffle is a dish that is often tempting to the sick person, and is an exceedingly convenient and palatable food. White 1 egg white with a dash of salt. Fold in about 5 tablespoons apricot pulp and 2 tablespoons sugar. Place in an individual baking dish. Set dish in pan of hot water. Bake in a slow oven, 275 degrees, until it is firm. Serve hot with cream or custard sauce cream.

Wine Custard

Wine custard is a dish that is frequently served to convalescents. Place 1 cup white wine and ¼ cup water in top of a double boiler over hot water. Add 2 unbeaten eggs and ¼ cup sugar. Beat the ingredients vigorously. Cook the custard until it thickens, beating it constantly. This amount will make several servings and may be eaten hot or cold.

Breakfast in Bed

Artistic touches of quaint china, lovely linen and a sprig of flowers such as shown on the bed tray above set a lovely keynote for a gala breakfast menu to serve mother and so win a gold star for service on Mother's Day

Consumers Counsel

Advice on Food

Recipe for Decorative Spring Salad Given Irish Cook Wants to Exchange Recipes Suggestions Made for Cookie Jar

FLOWER AND VERBAL bouquet are joined by a food bouquet suggestion sent to the Consumers' Counsel by Mrs. Lyda A. Smith, Winchester, Va. Along with the spring breezes and flowers come the spring vegetables in great array, so that Mrs. Smith's suggestion is a most seasonal one. She says the colonial bouquet salad for which she gives the recipe is a most attractive salad for luncheon, and requires only mayonnaise, rolls, cheese, coffee and dessert to complete the meal.

Colonial Bouquet

Cook the desired vegetables tender in salted water and drain, or if canned vegetables are used, just drain. Marinate in French dressing for 1 to 4 hours and drain well. Place a paper doily on each plate. Arrange a flower-like vegetable in the center, such as Brussels sprouts, with other flower-like vegetables such as broccoli and cauliflower at the outer edge of the lace doily. Fill the remaining space, alternating with baby beets, small, whole green beans and spoonfuls of small green peas, to make the plate look as much as possible like an old-fashioned bouquet.

A Bit of Ireland

FROM the Castle House, Raheny, Dublin, Ireland, Maura Laverty sends a letter which we think The Post food readers might like to follow up. Miss Laverty writes:

"As a keen admirer of American cooking, I shall be grateful if you can find space for the following: In exchange for typical American dishes, I shall be glad to offer Spanish, French and traditional Irish recipes to anyone interested. With thanks and all good wishes to you and your readers."

Cookie Jar

MISS PEGGY SISSON, 1635 R street northwest, is evidently one who cannot imagine a home without a cookie jar, for she asks for cookie recipes and information about raisins. Into every life there comes a cookie time, and for some this time continues through life; from the hungry little tots hurrying in from school to grown-ups who must have a bedtime snack, all make for the cookie jar. May 7 to 13 is national raisin week, and boasts the distinction of being the first of all national food weeks. Seedless raisins are splendid for use in cookies, as they contribute a delightful flavor and keep them moist and fresh longer. To prevent raisins from sinking in a cake, heat them before rolling in flour.

Sugar Cookies

Sift 1 cup sugar. Beat until soft ½ cup butter. Add the sugar to the butter gradually. Blend these ingredients until they are creamy. Beat in 1 egg and add 1 teaspoon vanilla or 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind. Sift before measuring 1 2-3 cups bread flour. Combine 1-3 cup thick, sour cream or rich milk with 1-3 teaspoon soda. Add the flour to the butter mixture in 3 parts alternately with thirds of the cream. Beat the butter until it is smooth for each addition. Chill the dough for 12 hours or more. Roll it out until it is very thin. Use as little flour as possible or roll the dough between sheets of waxed paper. Cut into shapes. Sprinkle the cookies with sugar and bake them on a greased tin in a moderate oven, 375 degrees for 10 minutes.

Chocolate Brownies

Sift 1 cup sugar. Beat until soft 3 tablespoons butter. Add the sugar gradually to the butter. As it is difficult to cream this small amount of butter, add 1 egg. Blend these ingredients until they are creamy. Beat in another egg. Melt 2 ounces (squares) chocolate, then cool it. Stir in 3½ teaspoons bread flour, 1 teaspoon vanilla and 1 cup broken nut meats. Line a baking pan with heavy waxed paper. Spread batter in it. Bake in 325 degree oven for about 30 minutes. Cut into squares.

If our reader ideas interest you, and you wish to share your ideas for the home, mail your suggestions to the Consumers' Counsel, in care of Martha Ellyn, The Post Food Editor.

Improve Your Conversation

"I SHOULD OF gotten an INVITE, too," thinks Mrs. Gay, seeing her neighbors gather for the Wednesday Club.

Smart, attractive, so eager for good times, young Mrs. Gay never dreams her poor English is the reason why she's ignored. Yet her charming neighbors would think of her as one of them, would gladly ask her to join their club, if she weeded from her speech such errors as SHOULD OF and INVITE—used instead the correct SHOULD HAVE, INVITATION.

So often careless English creates little social barriers, shuts you away from the delightful people you're eager to know.

It's plain to them you don't belong when you say, "Mrs. Brown is NOTHING LIKE so tall as her sister." "My HELP left me." "I LIKED TO HAVE fallen." They're used to people who'd say, "NOT NEARLY so tall as her sister," "my SERVANT (or MAID) left me," "I ALMOST FELL."

Yet all too often you're the last to recognize your mistakes. It sounds all right to you when you say, "I was MIGHTY ENTHUSED over that book, but I DISREMEMBER the author." A quick check up would show you it's right to say, "I was VERY ENTHUSIASTIC over that book, but I've FORGOTTEN the author."

Find out what's wrong and what's right in speech. Repeat correct expressions to yourself, bring them into general conversation. Soon they come as quickly to your tongue as errors once did.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, Common Errors in English, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

World's Fair Soliloquy

"Well, they've started! Delia Giddings will be here Sunday . . . I wonder how long she'll stay. Oh, surely she'll want to get on to New York Monday or Tuesday anyway . . . Of course I'm really glad to see Delia . . . but I do wish people wouldn't come on week-ends. It just upsets all my private life.

"Then there's Pauline Chumley. Let's see . . . she said she would get in around the tenth. That would be Wednesday—my busiest day. Of course I'll have to take her to lunch . . . and maybe to dinner—heavens, I hope she doesn't want to see Mount Vernon! It'll just upset my whole office schedule. It does look as if people could arrange not to get here in the middle of the week when I've got my job on my hands.

It isn't that I wouldn't love to be hospitable . . . if I just had the time—oh there comes the mail! Honestly, I almost dread to get letters any more . . .

"Now who can this card be from? . . . Leech? . . . Leech? . . . I don't know anybody named Leech. Now what does it say? . . .

"'Leaving for New York Tuesday night. Stop in Washington Thursday and Friday. Can hardly wait to see you. Love.

"'IRENE.'

"Oh, I know! Irene Leech! The one I went to high school with. Of all things! Why when I was home I would go for years at a time without seeing her. Oh well . . . Now who's this letter from? . . . Oh, Olive Messer! I wonder if she's coming? Now wait . . .

"'. . . let you know . . . my good friend, Mabel Gadd . . . in Washington, May 17 . . . way to World's Fair . . . call you up . . . fascinating person . . . you two should know each other . . . Be nice to her . . .'

"Now that's the limit! When do these people suppose I have to work? Just because they're on holidays, why should they think everybody else is? . . . Oh, now here's another letter! Heavens, it's from Cousin Clara! Now what does she want?

"'. . . driving to New York . . . soon as school out . . . stop in Washington . . . education for the children . . . all of us to be together again . . . Much love . . .'

"Oh, how can I ever go through this summer? It makes me tired even to think of it. If there was only a nice cave somewhere—Oh there's the telephone! Now I wonder . . .

"'Hello . . . yes . . . who? . . . I didn't get the name . . . Oh, yes, Mrs. Tripper . . . Oh, yes, I remember you . . . Oh, you are? . . . The Fair! How nice! . . . How long are you going to be here? . . . Busy today? Oh, that's too bad! . . . What? Free tomorrow? . . . Oh, I see. Well . . . will you have lunch with me? . . . All right then . . . Oh, about 1 o'clock . . . Yes, come by the office . . . Yes, I'll be glad to see you, too . . . Good-by.'

"I can't understand what gets into people that just as soon as they land in a strange city they want to call up everybody they've ever heard of—people they never even saw at home. In fact, I can't understand why all these people want to go to the World's Fair for, anyway. I haven't a bit of interest in it myself. Of course, though I suppose I really ought to give it a look before the summer's over—just to say I've seen it.

"I really could run up some week-end . . . and maybe stay over Monday and Tuesday . . . and see a few shows . . . and look up some people I know. There's Maude Pence—I haven't seen Maude for years and we used to be so intimate . . . and Grace Dash—I never have seen Grace's husband. And then John and Louise—they've got that lovely house out on Long Island . . . and the Arthur Patters, he's writing all those plays . . . and then there's Sally Stepp—I wonder if Sally's changed much . . . Oh, yes, and there's that advertising woman I met who just begged me to call her up the next time I was in New York.

"Yes, that's just what I'll do! Just as soon as I get these World Fair visitors off my hands, I'll run up to New York and take a look at the Fair."

Calcium Product Is Latest Food

Health stores are offering a calcium food product in concentrated form, already prepared, with pure, fresh cow's milk. This product is a cereal derivative containing a superior quality of protein and organized calcium phosphate, and may be obtained in the instant and regular powder forms. This calcium food product is delicious for creamed soups (canned or fresh), cream sauces for vegetables, cakes, cookies, ice cream, and in place of cream for coffee or coffee substitutes. The instant or concentrated form of this food may be flavored to suit each individual taste, any extract flavoring, cinnamon, nutmeg, chocolate, coffee, tea or used plain, or may, in addition to drinking, be sprinkled liberally on salads, cooked vegetables and in soups, it also makes a delicious and satisfying drink. It gives body to the drink as well as added nourishment, and may be taken by adults, children and infants. The regular form requires the preparation with cow's milk.

Care of Ears

Hollywood, Calif.—Jane Wyman, movie actress, urges a new deal for ears. They are in public now and should be kept soft with the same creams used on the face, made up with liquid powder matching one's face powder, and touched off at back with perfume oils.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Archery Improves Posture, Throatline, Adds Inch to Bust

JUDGING BY the transformation wrought in one thin girl, archery would appear to be the miracle worker that straightens rounded shoulders, fills out a concave chest and improves the bust contuor and general posture. In other words, it's the answer to the average thin girl's prayer for a good figure and graceful carriage!

When our thin girl took up archery some months ago, she had drooping shoulders and a shallow chest and a too thin neck, and she stooped. You ought to see her now! Not only has she acquired a lovely posture, but she has filled out her throatline and has added 1 inch to the bust measurement!

But—and we can take it from the experts—that is not all archery does! It also rounds the arms, strengthens the trunk muscles and makes beautiful backs. All of this makes it an ideal exercise for the average businesswoman, for it counteracts the stooping and settling incurred by working long hours at a desk.

Gives Bouyant Carriage

As pointed out by A. Vander Kogel, authority on this fascinating sport: "The mere fact that so many women's colleges have adopted archery as a major sport should be proof enough of its value in developing a graceful carriage. The shooting stance is very similar to the first position in dancing—the archer stands with the body in perfect balance, arms held up at shoulder level, and an upward lift of the entire figure that is gradually reflected in the bouyant carriage so characteristic of the majority of archers.

Holding the bow and drawing the string afford exercise for the upper arms, even though most of the actual work is done by the muscles in the back. And turning the head to the side with the chin at about right angles to the throat constitutes excellent exercise for the throat muscles.

When you first take up archery, you will get plenty of bending exercise for the waistline muscles, because the shooting is done at distances of 40, 50 and 60 yards from the target, and you must expect to bend over innumerable times to pick up your arrows that have missed. Besides, you can count on a brisk mile walk.

Get Bow for 6 Dollars

Progress is very rapid, however, once you get started. Our thin girl who took up archery a few months ago for the sake of her figure will shoot in some of this year's important tournaments!

It will pay you to look into the possibilities of this sport. The target is the most expensive part of the equipment—you can buy a bow for as low as $6—and you may be able to join a club, in which case you would not have to purchase a target.

Stripes Ablaze on Young Frocks

Striped cotton, striped jersey, striped pure silk have all been recalled to add buoyancy to a summer turned over to youth. These stripes start as small as a pin line and blaze forth into candy stripes, awning, convict or even barber-pole stripes. They are giddy, perhaps, but as blithe as the school girls, above, who wear them. Both of these merry maids have been selected this week as ideal school-girl types. They both adore gay, mad colors, short skirts, flippant styles and junior miss sizes. Naturally, they have both selected striped spun rayons for classroom and dress-up wear. Marvis Gee (left), of Wilson Teachers College, chooses a bold chevron-striped skirt topped with a white spun-rayon bodice. Alice Johnson (right), of Woodrow Wilson High School, puts herself in peppermint stripes, also achieved in cool, clean spun rayon

'Spark' Formula Given by Actress

Hollywood, Calif.—Sparkle is the attribute that makes or breaks a brown-eyed brownette in the opinion of Olivia de Havilland who considers her coloring undistinguished.

Good health is the basis of it all. She never has less than 9 hours sleep, but frequently gets in 14. She takes a horseback ride and stroll daily. She eats as much as she likes but has fruit or juices with every meal. Frequently her lunch is beef bouillon, watercress, fruit salad and milk.

Olivia's hair gleams all the way through because she keeps it scrupulously clean, parts it off into sections after each shampoo, and sprays it with a light brilliantine before combing in into waves.

Markets Abloom With Colors To Tempt Week-End Shoppers

'Co-operative Foods' Allow Housewife to Stay Out of Kitchen; Some Quick Recipes Listed Utilizing Potatoes and Cheese

By The Post Food Editor.

HOUSEWIVES! If you are budget conscious please do go a-marketing with your basket for the markets these days bloom like flower gardens with the orange of carrots, the shiny purple eggplant, bright red beets and tomatoes, fresh green peppers, peas, and asparagus. You will find so many of them inexpensive as to leave the food budget rattling with unspent coins.

Along about this time of the year everybody's looking for "co-operative foods." You know, the ones that co-operate in letting you get out of the kitchen—and stay out. Consider then—potatoes, for they offer the chance for those "made yesterday" and "last minute" dishes as well. New potatoes from Alabama—the small roly-poly pink ones are a splendid variety known as Bliss. Another variety equally as popular is the Red Triumph, and then there is the Hastings from Maine, as well as the Idaho type which are just the ones to bake for the children. Boil some potatoes and keep them in the refrigerator in their "jackets" to make a potato salad, or some last-minute dishes, such as the creamed ones, potatoes in cheese and other sauces, or combine with meat in hash with other vegetables. Prepare a cheese-potato ring or a potato salad with a cheese mask as a brand-new way to serve your potato salad. This is a big week for cheese in Washington, and there are thousands of pounds of the Wisconsin variety about, reasonably priced and readily adapted to numerous dishes.

Cheese Mask

Combine ¼ pound cheese cut in small pieces, with 4 tablespoons cream in the top of the double boiler. When smooth remove from the heat. Fold in ½ cup cream, whipped, ½ cup mayonnaise and 2 tablespoons diced pimiento. Chill and spread on salad mold. Chill again, garnish and serve.

Long Island ducklings, fat and full breasted, and freshly killed are all but waddling to market by the thousands this week. Stuff one of these sweet-fleshed young things with an onion-raisin dressing. But if it is fish you have in mind, supplies are abundant and prices are exceedingly low. Shad is a splendid buy as is haddock. This white-fleshed salt-water fish resembles cod, and is cooked like it. Baked fillets of haddock in cream sauce is an appetizing and economical dish.

Foods for Children

May Day was observed as child health day, and the time for taking inventory of the well-being of the Nation's children. But the responsibility of proper feeding for children does not end with the day or the week, but continues for all time. Strained foods, chopped foods, vegetable juices, syrups, fresh milk, evaporated milk, fruits, eggs and all the foods so necessary to the health of children are all being displayed by the food dealers.

There has been developed in addition to the strained and chopped foods a junior line of foods. These junior foods are fully prepared soft foods specially planned for youngsters who are ready for a coarser diet to give their digestive systems more exercise. Regular recipes are used in preparing these foods so that children become accustomed to a blend as well as a variety of foods. There is a delicious creamed tomato and rice, a fine-flavored chicken-farina vegetable porridge, and meaty lamb and liver sealed in tins all ready to serve. There are garden-fresh vegetables diced and served in a smooth cream sauce and savory chopped vegetables too. To round out the menu, several choice desserts are available—a fine-flavored pineapple and rice pudding, prune pudding and a delicious apple, fig and date dessert.

Woman Thinks Divorce Is Best Solution When Mate Is Unfaithful; Asks Readers' Opinions

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I always read, with great interest, your column, for it seems to me that you give each problem individual attention and advice, to the best of your ability, and in the main I agree absolutely with your conclusions. However, I suspect that you are not married, because of your advice in cases of infidelity in marriage—to make allowances and not to break up the home. I think this is sound advice in many cases, since divorce is an ugly thing, but better than lifelong unhappiness.

But anyone who is, or has been, married, knows that any happiness to be found in that relationship must come from mutual faith, loyalty and respect. It is impossible to love very deeply anyone whom you can neither trust nor respect, and once a legitimate doubt enters in, a marriage can never be the same, even though it continues unbroken.

I tell you this because of my advice, given long ago, to a sort of grandniece who was happily married when suddenly the husband became involved in a disgraceful and scandalous affair, which led to the "other woman's" being divorced by her husband. The girl was completely brokenhearted and her health was almost ruined, because she was on the verge of a nervous collapse and because she had no family within hundreds of miles.

I honestly believed, at the time, that it would be best for her not to break up her home (even though I suspected she endured a great deal of neglect and cruelty while the affair was going on). She had character and so she stuck, but now I see her an ageing, unhappy woman, with heartache written on her face and I bitterly regret the advice I gave her. For I repeat, there is no happiness in marriage after one or the other has violated the rules of decency and honor, and it is more of a nervous strain to live with someone under those conditions than the inexperienced could ever know.

She might have had a few years of loneliness and unhappiness, following a separation; but there could have been nothing ahead of her that was worse than the disillusion and heartbreak she had gone through. She could have adjusted her life; perhaps even married again, in time (since all men are not unfaithful to their wives), and experienced that happiest of human relationships, a real marriage.

So I cannot help but wonder whether it is always best to advise people to stay together; not to be "neurotic;" to correct their "sick" state of mind; and to be generous and have a more wholesome outlook. For it is human nature to react as most people do react to the discovery of infidelity; and the person who has been married understands that when some things happen in marriage, the relationship can never be the same again. I wonder what others of your readers think?

The couple I mention above are of fine background, and the man the last person on earth you would believe could become involved in a cheap affair (although few people knew of it, which should have been a help to the wife in trying to forget). The wife is not the neurotic type, nor one who is prone to whine. In fact, she has one of the sweetest natures, and the experience left scars which have ruined her life, so I say again, there are some things beyond knowing.

Restoring the Keystone

DEAR M. M. D.: There is a spirit of sweet reasonableness evident throughout your letter which impels one to attempt to reply in kind. However, in all fairness, I must dispute your belief that I hold steadfastly against divorce, at all costs. It is not my invariable advice in cases of infidelity in marriage, to "make allowances and not to break up the home." On the contrary, I share your conviction that happiness in marriage is founded on "mutual faith, loyalty and respect," and that when this keystone has fallen, the relationship crumbles with it, leaving nothing to do but clear away the debris and begin building anew.

Yet, I think one has need to make absolutely sure the keystone HAS fallen; that it isn't merely slightly dislocated (as the result of a passing storm) and thus subject to careful, doubly-enforced restoration to place—before calling in the wreckers. And I think the husband or wife who would bring this deliberative, constructively open-minded attitude to the problem which romantic disillusionment represents, would be the last person to settle down doggedly in the ruins, if ruins he found them to be.

But I think the latter course was the one adopted by your alleged grandniece (of sorts; although I do believe that woman was really yourself), after discovering her husband in a "disgraceful and scandalous affair." And this would argue that she was largely responsible for her own undoing, from first to last. She clung to her husband and to her marriage, after love on his part, and trust on her's, supposedly had fled—not because of bad advice, but out of sheer weak dependence upon external social and emotional props. Given this evidence of personal inadequacy to treat with reality four-square, one wonders what unintentional, but no less potent, provocation she may have given her husband to seek, in another woman, what he had failed to find in, with, or through her.

When marriages go on the reefs—for other reasons than chronic alcoholism, callous and indiscriminate infidelity, and/or flagrant disregard of financial responsibilities—the failure is seldom to be attributed to one partner alone. Where the husband, as in this case (apparently), provides a home, maintains a secure social position, is not an alcoholic, and in all overt ways deports himself as a dependable citizen of the community, and yet enters into a daring and dangerous illicit amour with "another woman,"—it is reasonable to assume, until exhaustively disproved, that his wife was a heavy contributor, to, or unwitting instigator of, his defection.

And had the wife been willing to take this atttitude, when she felt the foundations of her marriage rocking beneath her feet; had she been disposed to treat with the tragedy as evidence of mutual failure to achieve, as yet, a real marriage of mind and spirit; and had she been as contrite about her implied defection as her husband undoubtedly was disposed to be about his performance—the keystone of their marriage might have been hoisted back into place, there to remain until the end of their days.

What I think happened was this: the wife—in a kind of rigid idealism and outraged romanticism, her vanity cut to the quick, her understanding too limited and her emotional resources too frozen to permit a compassionate comprehension of the man's behavior under pressure and provocation; yet with her determinedly self-protective faculties blindly and arrogantly on the alert—stubbornly refused in pure selfishness, to yield her position as head of her husband's home, and thus cut off her own nose to spite her face. Her only justification for staying would have been the valid supposition that much remained in the relationship that was worth salvaging, and that could be salvaged and made the basis for a finer and more satisfying union than had erstwhile existed. Her husband, no doubt sensing the real reason for her overt allegiance, probably despised her for it, and the two have continued to live together as enemies in spirit ever since.

The so-called "heartache" you see in her face is probably a record of hostility, rather than accepted sorrow. Sorrow, nobly borne, softens and glorifies the countenance. And the scars which have ruined her life are probably mostly self inflicted, having their origin in inner weakness and personal selfishness, since no one can ruin one's life but one's self.

Slacks Changed To Shorts by Zipper

The dual purpose idea that has invaded every phase of modern living has entered the women's wear field.

A new sports suit, introduced recently in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago, can be changed from a pair of long slacks into brief shorts for tennis or bicycling as easily as did Dr. Jekyl change his character into Mr. Hyde. A zipper, placed entirely around the leg of the trouser, is the means of executing the transformation from slacks into shorts. If the wearer desires to reappear in slacks, the leg of the combination suit can be returned to its original place with the same ease with which it was removed.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Barring acts of God and of evil men, their Brittanic Majesties still propose to come here next month. Now there is great to-do about Queen Elizabeth's wardrobe. From London I hear that at least 50 dresses, coats, furs and hats will be brought here by Her Majesty—and are now being guarded like the Crown Jewels in the Tower from the peeping eyes of evil style pirates. Norman Hartness, her pet dressmaker, is in full charge of the Queen's rig-outs. If fashion-slickers should see the wardrobe now, American stores would have the Queen's new vestments on the counters at $4.98 before she even arrived in Ameddica. Horrows! No doubt the Coldstream Guards are doing sentry duty around Hartnell's premises in Lunnon!

Another of my paid sleuths whispers that Elizabeth will favor three of Hartnell's pet perfumes on her American trip. They are called "La Sculpture," "La Peinture" and "La Gravure." French names, hey? No English good enough? All three come in a slick case for Her Majesty. But after all, what citizen of the United States will get near enough to the Queen to smell her? We'll just have to take this yarn on faith, I reckon.

THE THEATRICAL season now dying has been notable for the quick flop of at least a dozen anti-dictator plays. Not a hit in the lot. Maybe the authors are too indignant, or something. One called "The Brown Danube" (swell title) has been on tour lately. Now I hear the lovely Fay Wray has withdrawn from its cast. Fay had her heart set on a Broadway show this year—evidently the new opus wasn't the dream-baby. Maybe, alas and alack, such devious matters call for bullets rather than dialogue. If so, it's the world's tragic luck.

THE SPRING Toy Fair has been its usual hit this season. Over 10,000 new playthings—for father—have been on display. New mechanical stunts for the little boys, and for the little girls, absolutely realistic doll babies that are ladies of fashion, with many changes of smart costumes of the day. Games? Varieties. But these new, glamour-girl dolls, I want one, mamma!

All Official Society—Almost—Is at Congressional Club Breakfast

Mrs. Garner Very Much Missed At One of the Biggest and Best Of the Organization's Celebrations

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

HOPE R. MILLER

DEAR MRS. GARNER: As one Texan to another—I think you should have been at the Congressional Club's annual breakfast yesterday. Yes, I know you declined because of the press of duties at this time. You have a job, and you are busy (as who isn't), and it is a struggle to work one more appointment into your crowded calendar.

But you were very much missed yesterday. "Where's Mrs. Garner?" "She's the only important one not here." "Why doesn't she ever come to these things?" These questions rippled up and down the grand ballroom yesterday as one course followed another at one of the biggest and best breakfasts ever given by the Congressional Club.

Truth is, if you had been there, the party would have been just about perfect. I've been around Washington a long time and have seen lots of top-flight official wives at shoals of huge parties, but I never saw a better turn-out than yesterday.

MRS. ROOSEVELT, who had a press conference and a number of other appointments yesterday, was there as guest of honor, wearing one of her favorite daytime ensembles, a navy tailored coat over a powder-blue frock, a hat that blended with both shades, and that becoming white fox scarf. As usual, she made a short speech, gracious and to the point, expressing her gratitude to the club for honoring her, and touching on the beauties of the New York World's Fair.

I'd say about 400 women attended the breakfast, seated at round tables arranged up and down the huge room. The head table, of course, was on a platform and extended down one side of the room. Over the lighted candles at the head table you could spot familiar faces here, there and everywhere. Mrs. Edward Burke, president of the club, was trimly turned out in a black and white outfit, with three gardenias on her shoulder.

MRS. CLARENCE LEA and other members of the hospitality committee greeted the guests, and Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, chairman of the entertainment committee, presented Rose Bampton, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who sang several numbers, each of which brought thunders of applause.

You would have enjoyed her, Mrs. Garner. Her full, rich voice seemed to fill the mammoth ballroom and had everybody there more than pleased that such a distinguished singer had been chosen to entertain them. Speaking of music—there was plenty of it yesterday, even before Miss Bampton's part on the program. The Marine Band Orchestra, under the direction of Second Leader Santelmann, played several lively numbers following "The Star-Spangled Banner." When the latter began, lights in the ballroom were softened and the flag back of the band began fluttering as if in a stiff wind. Flying flags (and I mean flying) also decorated the speaker's table. And very effective they were.

MRS. WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD was there is a smart black and white ensemble; every Supreme Court hostess, from Mrs. Hughes to Mrs. Douglas, was on hand and at the head table; the Secretary of Labor, who is a busy lady if there ever was one, and whose partying schedule has been pared to minimum propositions, seemed to be having the time of her life.

Five Cabinet hostesses were among the early arrivals, each one in top form and enjoying herself. Senators' wives were plentifully sprinkled through the crowd, and, as would be expected, wives of Representatives were all over the place.

From the entire top layer of official feminine society, only three women were missing—you, Mrs. Farley and Mrs. Ickes. Mrs. Farley for a long time has made her Washington appearances at infrequent intervals. She's not keen about Capital society, and Capital society hasn't had much of a chance to make up its mind about her. Why Mrs. Ickes wasn't there I don't know, but she is still new to Washington's official life. She is not well acquainted as yet with the Congressional contingent her absence wasn't noted and bemoaned as much as yours.

YOU SEE, the Congressional Club still considers you one of its very own. I can easily understand why you would skip no end of functions to which you are invited, but a party like the one yesterday, when virtually everybody there knows you and loves you—well, you should have been there. If, as a lot of people insist, your husband has a chance at the White House, your attendance at that breakfast wouldn't have hurt one bit. Mrs. Robert Taft was there, a very popular center of attention. If Mrs. Thomas Dewey had been invited, I'll wager she would have attended, too. It was an interesting get-together in many respects.

Now I know, Mrs. Garner, you're not particularly interested in clothes, so I won't go into details about yesterday's dress parade. But I think you would have agreed with me that Mrs. Cordell Hull looked unusually lovely in that black frock with its pink chiffon front blending with her pink-trimmed black hat and its pink veil.

MRS. MORGENTHAU'S black hat with red accents came in for its share of compliments, and Mrs. Wallace piled up all sorts of dressy honors with her navy blue ensemble. Mrs. Swanson, who seemed to know everybody in the crowd, wore a smart print frock with a silver fox neckpiece and a small hat.

Wonder where Mrs. Woodring got that tricky red suede purse that was hung on a matching belt? It was an attractive contrast to her bluish-green tailored suit and broad-brimmed straw hat.

Mrs. Felix Frankfurter and Mrs. William O. Douglas, newest additions to the Supreme Court circles, were at the head table, being pointed out to numbers of Congressional wives who got their first glimpse of the two yesterday. Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes was a center of admiring eyes, as were Mrs. Pierce Butler, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Hugo Black and Mrs. Stanley Reed. In other words, the Supreme Court was very popular with yesterday's crowd.

Also seated at the head table were officers of the club, including Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. R. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. Richard J. Welch, Mrs. John R. Murdock, Mrs. Robert F. Rich and Mrs. Clyde H. Smith. Past presidents of the club were scattered through the crowd, each one gathering around her a group of friends.

So you see, Mrs. Garner, it was a good party and one you shouldn't have missed. Do try to make it next year.

Sincerely, H. R. M.

Capt. A. W. Kreiser And Wife Enteretin At Farewell Party

Capt. Alexander W. Kreiser, United States Marine Corps, anl Mrs. Kreiser entertained yesterday afternoon at the Army-Navy Country Club at a farewell party just before they leave Washington for their new station at Coronado, Calif.

Approximately 50 friends came in between the hours of 5 and 7 to greet the host and hostess. Mrs. Kreiser was gowned in pussy willow silk of a soft pink, fashioned floor length with a flaring skirt, a new shirtwaist blouse with full sleeves and accessories of green.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Kreiser's two brothers-in-law and sisters, Maj. and Mrs. J. D. Waller and Maj. and Mrs. P. R. Cowley, of Quantico. Also among the guests were Col. and Mrs. Ralph Mitchell, who have just come to Washington for duty from their former station on the West Coast.

Mrs. Claude Pepper Luncheon Hostess

Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Senator from Florida, entertained at a luncheon yesterday in the Senate Restaurant in honor of Mrs. Claude Lee, wife of a movie executive, who is en route to New York from her home town, Gainesville, Fla.

The other guests were Mrs. Emanuel Celler, wife of Representative Celler; Mrs. Robert J. Dill, of Jacksonville; Mrs. Robert J. Dill, jr., Mrs. Linton Collins, Mrs. Frank Wideman, Mrs. Claude E. Hamilton, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson and Mrs. Ralph Smith.

Frau Tannenberg Gives Luncheon For 12 at Home

Frau Tannenberg, wife of the first secretary of the German Embassy, entertained yesterday at a luncheon for 12 guests at their home on Foxhall road. In the dining room a color scheme of blue and white was emphasized with sweet peas and white marguerite. In the drawing room was a profusion of red tulips and white stock. Frau Tannenberg was gowned in a black and white print frock with trimmings of white.

Guests included Frau von Strempel, wife of the first secretary of the German Embassy; Mrs. Loy W. Henderson, Mme. Guimaraes, wife of the first secretary of the Brizialian Embassy; Mrs. Robert V. Hasbrouck, Mrs. Oswald F. Schuette, Mrs. Paul Wooten, Mme. Boulitreau Fragoso, wife of the second secretary of the Brazilian Embassy; Baroness con Pagenhardt, Mrs. Harold Brayman, Mrs. Herbert V. Selects May 13 For Wedding

Miss Mary Frances Garner, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Clement L. Garner, has selected Saturday, May 13, as the date of her marriage to Charles David Wantz, and has completed plans for the event. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Wantz, of Hagerstown, Md.

Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church will be the scene of the 8 o'clock wedding. Miss Katheryn Thompson, of Daytona Beach, Fla., will be maid of honor, and ushers will be Miss Shirley Puffer and Miss Dorothy Allen, of Washington; Miss Mary Ellen Pyle, of Frederick, Md., and Miss Mary Ruth Cross, of Queenstown, Md.

MISS MARY F. GARNER

Hiram Wantz, jr., brother of the bridegroom, will be best man, and ushers will include John Hart and Earl Widmyer, of Hagerstown; Eugene Bounds, of Salisbury, Md., and John Bourke, of Washington.

Mrs. Keith Merrill Entertains for Guest

Mrs. Keith Merrill entertained yesterday afternoon informally from 4 until 6 for about 35 of her friends, in honor of her house guest, Mrs. William Seward Allen, of New York.

Mrs. Allen, who arrived in Washington last Tuesday from New York to visit Mrs. Merrill, returned to her home last evening.

Plotnicki-Bulow Wedding June 3

In a novel and interesting fashion last evening, Miss Kathleen Bulow, daughter of Senator W. J. Bulow, of South Dakota, and Mrs. Bulow, announced the selection of her wedding date, at a buffet supper and miscellaneous shower given at the Bulows' home by Mrs. Daniel J. Anderson, of Arlington, Va. The engagement of Miss Bulow and Benedict A. Plotnicki was announced last February.

On the table in the dining room at the buffet supper a large bridal cake was topped by a miniature bride and groom and the date of the wedding "June 3rd." The cake was decorated in yellow and green and the pastel color scheme was carried out in the floral decorations throughout the house. Miss Bulow was gowned in an unusual print with a background of titian tan. There were almost a hundred guests.

The wedding will take place at St. Matthews' Church, at 10 o'clock in the morning, with the Rev. Robert J. Froehlich officiating. Last evening's hostess, Mrs. Anderson, will be the matron of honor and Miss Cleo Keller will be the maid of honor. Five-year-old Kay Bulow, niece of the bride, will be flower girl. Best man will be the bride's brother, William J. Bulow, jr. The list of ushers has not yet been completed.

Among the many parties planned for the couple are a luncheon tomorrow given by Mrs. John S. Bartow and a dinner tomorrow night given by Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Anderson, to honor especially the bridegroom.

Party Is Given In Honor of Lady Leslie

Honoring Lady Bradford Leslie and by way of welcoming her to 2101 Connecticut avenue, to which apartment house she recently mover, Mrs. Margaret Nohowel entertained yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 on the roof-garden of her apartment there.

Guests included mostly those who make their home at that exclusive Connecticut avenue apartment. Noted during the afternoon was Mrs. Emerson Howe, wearing a smart pink frock, a navy baliburntl hat and a silver fox cape. Mrs. Nohowel wore a powder blue frock and Lady Leslie was in a green print chiffon with a leghorn hat of a soft green shade.

Mrs. George Thorpe, in a smart spring print, was discussing the European situation with Mrs. Randolph Miner, who was looking very chic in a black outfit with touches of white. Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck also stopped in for a bit early in the afternoon.

Mme. Marc Peter Gives Buffet Party

Madame Marc Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland, entertained last evening at a buffet supper, followed by music and singing in honor of the "Staussarerin" and Washington Society of Swiss Women.

There were about 45 guests. Madame Peter was assisted in receiving by Madame Feer, wife of the Counselor of the Swiss Legation.

Miss Hendricks Honors Sturgises at Dinner

Miss Genevieve Hendricks entertained at dinner last evening at Normandy Farms in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Sturgis, who have recently moved to Washington from New Haven, where Mr. Sturgis was professor of law at Yale University for many years.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Greene, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Brodessor, Mr. and Mrs. James Littlepage, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Carl Parry and George Du Bois.

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Not Bend Knee to Royalty

But if She Wern't First Lady She Would Do as Others Do

Mrs. Roosevelt at her press conference yesterday answered the question as to whether she would curtesy to royalty, if she were not the First Lady. She would do as others do, and "try not to be conspicuous," she said.

Whether to bend the knee is no problem to her now, since the State Department's pronouncement do not dip to each other.

The First Lady declined to give names of entertainers who will appear at the White House following the State dinner for Great Britain's King and Queen, and she said that if Mayris Chaney, her dancing protege, had been asked to perform, she had not heard about it.

All singers and dancers who appear on White House programs are chosen by one man, Henry Junge, who is with the Steinway Co. in New York. They are never paid but always receive autographed photographs of the President and Mrs. Rosevelt.

A London newspaperwoman, attending the conference, asked the First Lady which rooms Their Majesties would occupy in the White House. She replied that she could not divulge that information, having been asked by Scotland Yard not to do so.

Mentioning briefly recent visits of Danish and Norwegian royal couples at Hyde Park, Mrs. Roosevelt said she believed they enjoyed the picnics as much as any other entertainment provided for them. Asked if they considered such parties "novel," she said, "No; on the contrary, they struck me as young people who had gone on a great many picnics."

Parties for all visiting princes and potentates will be "strictly official," she said. Not more than 104 persons can be seated in the State dining room. What the First Lady will wear for each event, she has not yet decided, but she said the nine dresses recently added to her wardrobe were not purchased specifically for the forthcoming visit of their British majesties or anybody else.

French Counselor To Ciew Final Art Exhibition

Jacques Truelle, Counselor of the French Embassy, will be guest of honor at the final exhibition of the season on Monday evening of the Whyte Gallery.

The showing will be of paintings, watercolors, gouaches and lithographs of Raoul Dufy, the contemporary French painter who is represented in the Luxembourg Museum, the Metropolitan and the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Chicago Art Institute and many other museums. He is at present engaged in painting two important murals for the City of Paris, one for the new Palais du Trocadero and the other for the Museum of Natural History.

Mrs. R. W. Imbrie To Give Tea May 9

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie will give a tea May 9 for members of the junior and dance committees of the County Fair, which the Guild of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts will sponsor May 27.

She will be assisted at the event, which will take place at the Mayflower Hotel, by Mrs. P. Lee Phillips, Mrs. Robert Cummin, Mrs. Frank Slingluff, jr., and Mrs. Robert Cahill.

Also at the tea will be a group of students from Georgetown Visitation Convent.

Secretary, Mrs. Millar Hosts at an At Home

The First Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Hoyer Millar entertained yesterday afternoon at an "at home" from 5 to 7 o'clock. In the drawing room of their Massachusetts avenue home, which was profusely decorated with tulips, iris, dogwood and spring flowers, the host and hostess received their guests. Mrs. Millar was gowned in grey crepe de chine with a spring print pattern.

Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover and Mrs. Clarence Wilson.

Gypsy Band Creates Great Stir on Eve of Opening of Fair's Rumanian Building

EVEN THE HANDSOME Rumanian pavilion at the World's Fair, which will be opened today, is causing no more excitement among the legation staff than the importation of the famous Gypsy Band, under direction of Grigore Dinciu. The most popular in a country famous for Gypsy music, it made a huge hit at the Paris Exposition. The leader paid a small fortune to get out of a London contract to play at the Rumanian Restaurant on the World's Fair Grounds. They also starred at Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's reception earlier in the week for the Norwegian Crown Prince and Crown Princess.

M. Dinicu's appearance will remind long-time residents of the battle of Gypsy orchestras which went on here one spring when the late Count Laszlo Szechenyi was Hungarian Minister and George Cretziano represented Rumania. There was a great rivalry between the two as to who could import the best Gypsy band for parties, and practically every night people were dancing at one or the other legations to the tunes of a series of different sets of Gypsies.

NOT ONLY the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu, but the entire legation staff is in New orYk for the opening today. Well-known countrymen of theirs on hand include George Enesco, who will conduct the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in an all-Rumania program today; Pia Igy, soprano, and Dmitri Gusti, minister of social welfare, who visited Washington earlier in the season.

ZORINA looked positively angelic at the luncheon given for her yesterday by members of the Washington Civic Theater. She has a marvelous complexion, and a perfect figure, but gals who have trouble trying to make the ends of their hair curl will be glad to know that she gets away with just letting hers hang straight down to her shoulders, with only the suggestion of a wave. The dancer wore a powder blue print dress splashed with little figures in darker blue and white, and a matching tweed topcoat with broad shoulders.

She prefers to be called nothing more formal than just "Zorina," according to Lee Butler, who aptly presided at the luncheon. She doesn't care much for social life and is not going to any parties while here. She was, however, to have attended Mrs. Marion Warburg's supper on Monday, but at the last moment her husband, George Balanchine, arrived from New York.

MAY IS FULL of parties, promising even to eclipse the winter months. Among those entertaining are Mrs. John F. Wilkins, at a tea this afternoon at Norwood, and Mr. and Mrs. S. Kent Legare, who will give a dinner tonight and another one on Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., will be among Nancy Leiter's guests at the North Wales Club tonight after the Warrenton Gold Cup races . . . Mrs. Randall Hagner will be hostess at dinner tonight.

WHILE THE WOMAN who said she would give a $1,000 to attend the King and Queen's dinner here no doubt exaggerates a bit, we suspect that anyone who says, in a blase tone, that they don't care about meeting the couple, is not telling quite the truth. Why make fun of a perfectly healthy curiosity on the part of Americans to get a look at the pair? After all, we don't have any kings or queens over here and they're getting scarcer all the time abroad, so what could be more natural than wanting to see two in the flesh?

MRS. THOMAS PROCTOR, of Boston, is spending the spring months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Flint, of Washington . . . Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis will have with them for the week-end Mr. and Mrs. Frank Polk, of New York. Mr. Polk was Counselor of the State Department way back in 1915 and later served as Undersecretary of State. He was also honorary commissioner to the Peace Conference after the World War.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Soviet Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Oumansky have issued invitations to a reception tonight at the embassy in honor of Brig. General Vladimir Kokkinaki and Maj. Gen. Mikhail Gordienki, who made the good-will flight from Russia for the opening of the World's Fair.

Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, has returned from New York, where she participated in activities connected with the visit of Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway. The Minister is accompanying them on their tour to the West Coast.

The Minister of Paraguay, Gen. Jose Felix Estigarribia, gave a small dinner last night at the Shoreham Blue Room.

Dr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Behrend, of Biltmore street, will have with them for the week-end their daughter, Miss Louise Behrend, and Miss Dorothy Smith, of Fort Worth, Tex. Miss Behrend and Miss Smith have issued invitations to a joint recital of sonatas tomorrow evening, when the former will appear as a violinist and the later as pianist.

State Senator Weldon B. Heyburn and Mrs. Heyburn, of Concordville, Pa., are with Mr. and Mrs. James T. Havilland, of Philadelphia, at the Carlton.

Mrs. James G. Field left last evening for Dallas, Texas, where she will visit relatives. Her daughter, Mrs. Laura Field Cheatham, who sailed a month ago for Europe, is visiting in Versailles. From there she will go on to other cities in France and will visit in a number of countries before she returns in the autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Ring have as their guest the latter's sister, Miss Rhoda Lowenberg, who has come from Cleveland to make her home in Washington.

Mrs. Rebecca D. Kaufman is spending several weeks in Atlantic City.

Mrs. Stacy B. Lloyd, of Philadelphia, gave a dinner last night at the Shoreham Blue Room. Her guests included the incoming and outgoing officers of the National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Lingan A. Warren, of Burlingame, Calif., has joined Mr. Warren at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Tribby to Give Tea on Monday

Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby will entertain at a tea Monday at the Army-Navy Country Club from 5 to 8 p. m. The party will be the final one at which Mrs. Aribby will be hostess before she and her husband take a vacation trip to the West Coast.

They hope to go to California some time this month to visit their actor son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Halliday, who will arrive in Los Angeles tomorrow from Honolulu, where they have spent the past year. Arriving with the Hallidays will be their son, John, jr.

Caswells Give Dinner Honoring Cardenases

The Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas were honor guests at a dinner given last night by Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell at their residence on Twenty-fourth street.

The other guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Sloane, of Warrenton, and Frederick Alexandre, of New York, who is visiting them; the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. H. H. Sims, and Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock.

Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Churchwomen to Know Their Communities to Keep Democracy

First Lady Advises Actual Contact Between Peoples For Understanding

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Responsibility for mak democracy a reality in this country rests on the shoulders of those who believe faith and love may be translated into a way of life, Mrs. Roosevelt told members of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches yesterday. Addressing several hundred church women at their annual May luncheon, at Hotel Twenty-Four Hundred Sixteenth Street, she stressed the obligation of theindividual citizen to know the problems of his own community.

"The basic thing we need is actual contact between peoples in the community in order to understand each other's problems," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "Even if we don't know the answers to problems which face us, we know that answers have to be found and the recognition of problems is the first step toward finding the answer."

"The chief thing in a democracy is to know the community, its different types of people and what life means to them. If one lives the religion of Christ, he has a greater responsibility than he may realize in the present situation of the world to stand for the ideals of our democracy."

Reports Need Investigation

One of the ways of exercising this responsibility, she indicated, was to investigate reports about the administration of affairs in a community to see whether they are true before reporting them as fact. She referred to a conversation which she had heard on the train of a group of church women coming to Washington for the meeting of the Cathedral Association. They were discussing relief, she said, charging it was all wrong, badly and wastefully administered with people cheating and getting relief when they shouldn't.

She granted there were instances of wasteful administration to be found and of people who cheated, both among the poor and among the rich, but asserted that many general statements were inaccurate and hearsay rather than substantiated information.

She told of investigation of complaints which had come directly to her of situations in communities, often far distant. In but a small percentage were the complaints true, she said.

Citizens Fail To Take Responsibility

"The thing that tries my soul is that I have to find out that percentage, when I do not live within perhaps a thousand miles of that community," said the First Lady. "Why should people write me because they won't take their responsibility as citizens to see that the administration is as good as it should be in their communities?"

Referring to the charge that communists were responsible for the way things were going, she said she had found on investigation of specific charges, just two who were "again the Government." This attitude, she said, was due to injustices they had suffered and asserted that permitting injustice was "the only way we will ever come to something different from what we have." Fairness and justice, she declared to be the best safeguard to democracy.

Church Workers Meet Challenge

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, introduced Mrs. Roosevelt. She said the day had passed when church work was to be regarded in terms of the ladies' aid. It now takes in the "problems on our doorstep," she said.

Preceding Mrs. Roosevelt's talk, Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan told of the work carried on by the Juvenile Court Department through Miss Etta Mai Russell, the professional worker maintained by the council. She told of a colored woman, who came with $1 to contribute to the camp fund because her son had been a different boy since spending a week at the camp last summer. Another story was of the woman who had been given a window box and seedlings to plant in accordance with the council's plan of helping the alley dwellers to "learn to know God better through working with Him to create beauty." When Miss Russell stopped to see the box, the woman remarked, "Look what the Lord done did while you was gone."

Mrs. Morgan also told of the doll adoption plan and the Christmas alley programs of the council.

Mrs. Burdette Lewis, an officer of the National Committee of Church Women by whom the May luncheons are sponsored throughout the country, told of the work of the organization. Mrs. Wilson Compton was accompanied by her mother-in-law, Mrs. Elias Compton, "America's Mother of 1939" who was introduced as an honored guest and an active church worker.

Crime Slate Clean Except $7,500 Loot

Old Murder Solved, Alleged Confidence Men And Gunmen Seized

Washington police last night admitted themselves at a deadend in their search for $7,500 loot of a master burglar, while they gave themselves a pat on the back for virtually wiping the crime slate clean in the last ten days.

Search for the stolen property began after the arrest in a Thirteenth street rooming house of a 27-year-old New Haven, Conn., escaped convict and his 21-year-old wife. More than $2,000 worth of clothing, furs and jewelry was found in their room, much of which has been identified by victims of 65 housebreakings in the District, 16 in nearby Maryland and 10 in Arlington, Va.

The couple has a 4-year-old daughter.

Old Murder Closed

Meanwhile, police found reason to congratulate themselves on closing a 7-year-old murder, on capturing six men alleged to have fleeced cherry blossom visitors of more than $2,000, and on the arrest of three colored gunmen accused in the wounding of a Chinese merchant and a cab driver Saturday night.

Detective Sergt. George Thornton and Detective Irving Lubore started the clean-up ball rolling just ten days ago with the capture of Barclay D. Watkins, 37, of the 1500 block Rhode Island avenue northwest. He was charged with grand larceny by trick (penny matching) and his arrest brought about the capture of five associates. Watkins also was sentenced to six months in jail on a vagrancy charge.

Police Slayer Caught

Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett followed with the arrest of a 19-year-old boy, who confessed about 40 housebreaking cases in the Southeast section. He was held to the grand jury.

Willie Bullock, colored, 40, who was indicted here in 1932 for the murder of Policeman George W. Shinault, was taken into custody at Newark, N. J., and returned here to stand trial. He admitted the shooting, according to Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson, and was lodged in the District Jail to await arraignment.

Tuesday night, a raiding squad led by Capt. Jeremiah Sullivan seized three colored men in Saturday's wanton shooting of Lew Tew, 62-year-old Chinese laundryman and Malcolm Crockett, 32, a cab driver. Information on which the raid was based was obtained by Pvt. George Cooper.

Two of the suspects, only youths, admitted carrying out six holdups at the direction of the 43-year-old third man.

President Sees Dr. Davenport

President Roosevelt and Dr. Morgan Davenport, chairman of the Council of Personnel Administration, yesterday held an informal discussion of the Federal employe promotion system and other employe relations matters.

Dr. Davenport became head of the important personnel group established under Presidential orders last June 24.

The President, it was said, was deeply interested in the plans for reshaping the personnel policies and practices of the civil service. The council Dr. Davenport heads consists of the personnel directors in the agencies and departments. It now is working on training and promotion systems and a general unifying of personnel practices.

The Reciprocity Club of Washington will hold a diner-dance tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Congressional Club, 2001 New Hampshire avenue northwest, to celebrate the birthday of Ernest O. Paland, club director.

Named to Post In Virgin Islands

Appointment of Robert Morss Lovett, of Chicago, author and former college professor, as Government secretary of the Virgin Islands was announced yesterday by President Roosevelt.

This will be the first experience in public office for the 68-year-old Chicagoan, who succeeds to the post made vacant by the death of Robert Herrick last winter. Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, characterized the appointment as "an excellent choice."

Lovett is a graduate of Harvard University, where he taught English up to the time he joined the faculty of University of Chicago in 1893. He is the author of several books on history of literature, two novels and a play. He was editor of the Dial magazine in 1919 and formerly served on the editorial board of The New Republic.

 WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, MAY 5, 1939 25

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, May 4.—Out here all is forgiven in the case of Joe Kuhel. The fellow, in fact, is something of an idol among South Side fans who last season were bemoaning the deal which brought the slim Slav to the White Sox in exchange for Big Zeke Bonura.

POVICH

There was a deep suspicion among White Sox fans that Manager Jimmy Dykes was sadly bilked on that one. Why, Kuhel was a joke hitter and somebody was wrong, too, about his fielding. It wasn't much good, not much better than the clumsy Bonura's. Bonura, at least could hit. The .267 batting average compiled by Kuhel last season was not very inspiring.

As the season ended, Kuhel wasn't even the regular White Sox first baseman. A young fellow named Merv Conners, up from the Texas League, had taken over the job. Connors broke in with a splurge. In his first game, against the Philadelphia Athletics, he swatted three home runs into the stands and narrowly missed a fourth when his drive to centerfield hit the wall two feet from the top.

Well, Connors isn't with the White Sox, any more, and Kuhel is just about the hottest individual on the club, if not in the entire American League. Down South this spring, Manager Jimmy Dykes discovered that Connors wasn't a big league hitter and, furthermore, that his fielding average wasn't much better than his batting mark. And Kuhel was starting to show a hot hand.

Joe Was Big Noise at Spring Training Camp

Joe was the big noise of the Sox's training trip with his long distance blows, and his fancy fielding. And when the opening bell rang in the pennant race, he carried on. He hit a homer in the first game and has been slugging the ball ever since. At this writing, he's batting a cool .440, and leading all of the White Sox at the plate. In 13 games he's made 25 hits and in no game has he been shut out.

What's more, Kuhel has been driving in runs for the White Sox, a habit which was not his last year or the year before. He's been driving in runs despite the fact that he's batting in second place, which is not supposed to be conducive to run production, but Kuhel's long-range clouting has offset this disadvantage.

For the first time in 14 months, Jimmy Dykes is smiling at the trade that brought Kuhel to the White Sox in exchange for Bonura. Dykes was long suffering throughout last season when Kuhel was proving a tremendous dud, but Kuhel is now justifying that trade for Mr. Dykes.

"Kuhel's beginning to act like the ball player I thought he was when I made that Bonura deal," he was saying today. "He's still the best fielder in the league and I don't have those heart-breaks I had when Big Zeke was mussing up the works for us out there at first base. Kuhel's a master around that bag."

"By the way," added Dykes with a wink, "how about that $25,000 Griff got from the Giants for Bonura? Is it covering much ground around first base for the Washington club?"

"Old Fox" Did Right by Himself

The little round man was inferring, of course, that Griffith had taken a licking on the Bonura-Kuhel deal, but on that point Dykes must be misinformed. Because Griffith not only has the $25,000 he received for Bonura, but he has also a rookie first baseman who is doing very well indeed for the Nats. With Jimmy Wasdell playing the bag, the Nats are vastly better off than they were with the clumsy Bonura out there.

The gallant comeback of Wasdell, has for Griffith, a highly gratifying and face-saving sequel to the Kuhel-Bonura deal. Griffith would have looked very bad, indeed, save for the fact that Wasdell has come through so nobly for him.

Less than a week ago, Wasdell was regarded by the Nats' management as something of a washout. He wouldn't do, was the feeling and both Griffith and Harris were scouring the minor leagues for a first baseman who could hit a little bit. If one had been available, Wasdell would now be in the minors. But the Nats' bosses could obtain nobody, and in desperation they gave Wasdell another chance.

Little Jimmy Is Coming Around

And, in desperation, Wasdell began to make good. One of the first things he did was to break up a ball game at Boston with a tenth inning hit. In his next start, against Oral Hildebrand, he rapped out four consecutive hits in Yankee Stadium. The other day in St. Louis he slammed out a triple that produced the winning runs in the ninth. And yesterday he slapped a single into leftfield that again drove in the winning run.

The hits he has been collecting have renewed Wasdell's confidence and he is now standing up to the plate nicely, deliberately hitting to left field and hitting regularly. At this writing his average is a very respectable .444 for his 27 times at bat. And it was harsh scoring that charged him with four errors in that game at St. Louis the other day. In most cities, he would have been charged with only one at the most. Little Jimmy has been doing very well for himself.

Johnstown Gaining Favor as Derby Nears

Horse Is Due To Face Post At 4-5 Odds

Louisville Is 'Sold' On Star; Derby Field Uncertain; Town Filling Up

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Louisville, Ky., May 4.—The beautiful but reacherous Ohio River is sliding along peacefully enough tonight but this city, awakening to the Kentucky Derby, finds itself caught in another flood—the Johnstown flood of 1939. This flood didn't start when a dam broke but darned if it didn't start. Little more than an "old mill stream" last year, this new catastrophe began to reach flood stage in New York last month. Then it thundered across the Appalachian Mountains to back right up to Louisville's door. Tonight, this turf mecca finds itself up to its waist in Johnstown money.

One catches the Johnstown spray before the train loses motion at the station. The pullman porter brushes you down and asks, "Ain't it Johnstown, boss." It's Johnstown with the taxi driver. It's Johnstown with the hotel porter. It's Johnstown with the hotel clerk. It's Johnstown with the elevator boy.

In fact, everything isn't Jake down here any more, everything is Johnstown.

It looks mighty like Johnstown, at 4 to 5, when the horses march on the track some 48 hours hence. It looks mighty like Johnstown with nine opponents in the battle for gold and turf glory.

While the racing writers and track officials could not read the minds of the horse owners and horse trainers, the best available slant pointed to a line-up something like this:

Horse	Jockey	Odds
*Johnstown	Stout	4-5
Challedon	Seabo	4-1
Technician	Adams	6-1
El Chico	Wall	12-1
Heather Broom	James	15-1
Viscounty	Steffen	20-1
T. M. Dorsett	Haas	20-1
On Location	Robertson	40-1
Xalapa Clown	Coucci	40-1
*Challenger	No boy	4-5
Steel Heels	Kurtsinger	50-1
Yale o' Nine	No boy	100-1

*Woodward entry.

The owners of Yale O'Nine and Steel Heels were undecided whether they would drop an entry into the box tomorrow morning. Yale O'Nine showed much promise last year but this season has exhibited little to recommend him. Steel Heels finished six lengths off the winner, Viscounty, in the Derby trial last week. On Location will go according to

Bosox Rally And Win' 7-6; Homers Help

Ted Williams, Young Outfielder, Clouts Pair for Circuit

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 4.—The Boston Red Sox came from behind to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 7 to 6, today with the aid of two homers by Ted Williams, rookie outfielder, which drove in five runs.

Williams' four-baggers came in successive times at bat, the first in the fourth with Manager Joe Cronin no base. In the fifth inning Jimmy Foxx and Cronin both were ahead of Williams when he sent the ball out of the stadium. The Tigers were leading 4 to 2 at the start of the fifth, when the Sox tallied five runs altogether.

Rudy York, Detroit catcher, got his first round trip of the season in the third with Hank Greenberg on the paths.

Joe Gordon's Single Breaks Bob's Streak; His Wildness Costly

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 4.—Bobby Feller's old fault, wildness, caught up with him again today and gave the New York Yankees a 10-to-6 ten-inning victory over the Cleveland Indians, although the so-called slugging champions were outhit 11-14 for the second straight day.

The Yankees drew an even dozen passes to first and ten of them came from Feller, who had won three games and lost none prior to today's catastrophe. Four walks, one single and an error supplied New York its four winning runs in the extra chapter.

Brown [illegible] Uprising [illegible] 8th Round

Nationals Score Two Runs During Spurt; Chase Routed in Sixth Inning

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, May 4.—A gang of tough Southside characters well known to Chicago authorities as the White So tripped the Nats today, relieving the Washington Club of (1) its winning streak, (2) third place and, (3) a 4-3 ball game. Wielding a blunt instrument looking suspiciously like a baseball bat, a party identified as Ken Silvestri, a Chicago boy who only recently joined up with the White Sox gang, knocked the Nats groggy in the second inning. He slugged a home run into the leftfield bleachers with a pal on base.

The Nats never recovered from that blow and Ken Chase was charged with Washington's first defeat in its last six games. As late as the eighth and ninth innings, the Nats were still struggling, getting the tying run on base twice, but the White Sox made away with the ball game.

Both sides made nine hits during the struggle. The White Sox, however, received a potent help from a pair of native Chicago boys—Rookie Catcher Silvestri who was reared only a stone's throw from Comiskey Park, and Pitcher John Rigney, a graduate of Chicago's sandlots.

While the White Sox were knocking Chase loose from their four runs in the second and third innings, Rigney for seven innings was holding the Nats to five hits and a single run. They knocked him from the box in the eighth, but Fireman Clint Brown smothered the two-run conflagration in that inning.

The Nats' only run of the first seven innings was a gift affair—the gift of Rigney himself. After George Case had made the first of his three hits, a single to left that opened the game, and progressed to third by easy stages, Rigney committed a balk that scored him. Case induced the balk by faking a dash for the plate, causing Rigney to interrupt his windup, whereupon Umpire Rue waved Case home. Chase was not wild today, but two of the three walks he issued in his six innings of toil were disastrous. It was a walk to McNair that put a White Sox on base in the second inning, a bit before young Silvestri crashed a home run into the left field seats, to set the Sox up in a 2-to-1 lead.

Marvin Starts Trouble

And it was a walk to Marvin Owen that started the trouble for Chase in the third inning. Because, with one out, the Sox drilled out three consecutive singles—by Walker, Appling and McNair—to produce two more runs and a 4-to-1 lead. McNair's single, which drove in the second run of the inning, was a tainted affair—a teasing roller down the third-base line that Lewis could not reach.

Thereafter Chase and Pete Appleton, who relieved him in the seventh, held the White Sox to no runs at all, and only five hits, but the Nats were making little headway against Rigney until the eighth. He threw six scoreless innings at 'em.

In the eighth the Nats crashed through with two runs after Case led off with a hot single off Owens glove. Lewis forced Case at second, but Sammy West drew a walk and Taft Wright singled to center to score Lewis and move West to third. Myer hit into a force play at second, West scoring, and Travis moved the tying run to third with a single to center. But Jimmy Wasdell left it there with a grounder to Appling.

With one out in the ninth Jake Early installed some hope among the Nats, going to the bat as a pinch hitter for Appleton he celebrated his big league debut by rapping a single to left but with great consideration for the White Sox, Case and Lewis hoisted a pair of game-ending flies to the outfield.

Indians Win, 15-13

Home Runs by Tobin And Rozzo Also Aid In Club's Victory

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 4.—Two home runs by Jim Tobin and John Rizzo plus the effective one-hit relief pitching of Russ Bauers gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-to-4 win over the Phillies today for their third straight triumph.

Tobin blasted his circuit clout with two on in the second inning. Rizzo led off in the third with his roundtripper, sending big Max Butcher to the showers.

British Look On As Chinese Play For Their Title

Bournemouth, England, May 4.—The men's singles of the British hard court tennis championships developed into an all-China final today.

First to reach to the final round was Kho Sin Kie, the defending champion, who defeated D. McPhail of Scotland, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3. Then in a great match, W. C. Choy, former Cambridge Blue, beat C. E. Hare, England's second ranking player, 0—6, 10—8, 6—1, 9—7.

Three left handers—Peggy Scriven, Margot Lumb and Kay Stammers—with Mrs. R. Ellis, the former Anita Lizana of Chile, reached the semi-finals of the women's singles.

Mungo Saves Game as Cubs Blast Cletus Poffenberger in 1st

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 4.—Bombing Big Bill Lee off the mound in the third inning, the Brooklyn Dodgers handed the Chicago Cubs their third ssraight set back, 6 to 2, today.

Cletus Elwood Poffenberger, former American League playboy, started for Brooklyn and gave up two singles and two walks, forcing in a run, before Van Mungo could be rushed to the box in the first frame.

Thereafter Mungo held the Cubs scoreless until Stan Hack homered in the ninth. Although old Ira Hutchinson finished the final inning, Mungo got credit for his first victory of the season.

The Dodgers scored one in the first without a a hit, two in each of the next two innings. Mungo accounted for the first pair by singling behind Tony Lazzeri and Manager Leo Durocher, while Gene Moore tripled to bring home the second pair. This ended Lee's trick and two succeeding pitchers could not save him from his third loss.

Lazzeri hit his second homer of the season for Brooklyn's final run in the fifth.

Mondorff Allows Only 6 Hits; Terp Nine Defeats Indians, 5-2

Former Sub Infielder Loses Shutout on Two Unearned Runs; Maisel Gets Cheap Homer

By Jack Munhall.

Stocky, broad-beamed Pershing Mondorff, who barely earned his Maryland baseball letter as a substitute infielder last season, continued his swift development into a first-class pitcher yesterday as he unwound nine sterling innings against William and Mary and carried the Terps to a well-played 5-2 victory at College Park.

Only three-letter athlete in school, the 5-foot 11-inch junior who placekicked his way to football fame as a halfback and proved a dependable guard on the basketball court, allowed only six hits—two of them tainted—as Burt Shipley's nine recorded its third straight Southern Conference triumph and its tenth in 14 games this spring.

Effectively mixing a sweeping curve and an alive fast ball, Mondorff retired the Indians in order in the first, second, fifth, and eighth innings and actually deserved a shutout. This honor was denied him, however, by two unearned runs as he won his fourth game in five starts and tied with Earl Springer as Maryland's leading pitcher.

Indians Score

The Indians, who are a poor sixth in the Southern Conference but who were strong enough to dump Navy, 4-1, Wednesday, picked up their first tally in the fourth with the aid of a two-base error by High Keller, Terp leftfielder, and their second and last in the ninth when Bill England, sub rightfielder, dropped an easy fly.

However, all the breaks were not against Maryland. As a matter of fact the Terps earned only two of their five runs. In the fourth Fritz Maisel, sophomore rightfielder, was credited with a two-run homer when his drive to leftfield was mis-

Charley Gelbert Down With Grippe; Will Be Out a Week

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, May 4.—Charley Gelbert, a potent figure in the Nats' line-up since the opening of the season, today was stricken with an attack of grippe, and will be missing from the Washington line-up "for at least a week."

That was the prediction of Chicago doctors, under whose care the veteran infielder was placed when he collapsed suddenly in the Nats' hotel dining room this morning. Tonight, Gelbert's condition was termed "not serious," and his departure had virtually subsided.

Foxbrough 22 to 1

Crime Slate Clean Except $7,500 Loot

Old Murder Solved, Alleged Confidence Men And Gunmen Seized

Washington police last night admitted themselves at a deadend in their search for $7,500 loot of a master burglar, while they gave themselves a pat on the back for virtually wiping the crime slate clean in the last ten days.

Search for the stolen property began after the arrest in a Thirteenth street rooming house of a 27-year-old New Haven, Conn., escaped convict and his 21-year-old wife. More than $2,000 worth of clothing, furs and jewelry was found in their room, much of which has been identified by victims of 65 housebreakings in the District, 16 in nearby Maryland and 10 in Arlington, Va.

The couple has a 4-year-old daughter.

Old Murder Closed

Meanwhile, police found reason to congratulate themselves on closing a 7-year-old murder, on capturing six men alleged to have fleeced cherry blossom visitors of more than $2,000, and on the arrest of three colored gunmen accused in the wounding of a Chinese merchant and a cab driver Saturday night.

Detective Sergt. George Thornton and Detective Irving Lubore started the clean-up ball rolling just ten days ago with the capture of Barclay D. Watkins, 37, of the 1500 block Rhode Island avenue northwest. He was charged with grand larceny by trick (penny matching) and his arrest brought about the capture of five associates. Watkins also was sentenced to six months in jail on a vagrancy charge.

Police Slayer Caught

Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett followed with the arrest of a 19-year-old boy, who confessed about 40 housebreaking cases in the Southeast section. He was held to the grand jury.

Willie Bullock, colored, 40, who was indicted here in 1932 for the murder of Policeman George W. Shinault, was taken into custody at Newark, N. J., and returned here to stand trial. He admitted the shooting, according to Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson, and was lodged in the District Jail to await arraignment.

Tuesday night, a raiding squad led by Capt. Jeremiah Sullivan seized three colored men in Saturday's wanton shooting of Lew Tew, 62-year-old Chinese laundryman and Malcolm Crockett, 32, a cab driver. Information on which the raid was based was obtained by Pvt. George Cooper.

Two of the suspects, only youths, admitted carrying out six holdups at the direction of the 43-year-old third man.

President Sees Dr. Davenport

President Roosevelt and Dr. Morgan Davenport, chairman of the Council of Personnel Administration, yesterday held an informal discussion of the Federal employe promotion system and other employe relations matters.

Dr. Davenport became head of the important personnel group established under Presidential orders last June 24.

The President, it was said, was deeply interested in the plans for reshaping the personnel policies and practices of the civil service. The council Dr. Davenport heads consists of the personnel directors in the agencies and departments. It now is working on training and promotion systems and a general unifying of personnel practices.

The Georgia State Society will hold its final dance of the season tomorrow night at 9:30 at the Shoreham Hotel. Judge Annabelle Matthews is chairman of the reception committee.

Dinner-Dance Arranged

Named to Post In Virgin Islands

Appointment of Robert Morss Lovett, of Chicago, author and former college professor, as Government secretary of the Virgin Islands was announced yesterday by President Roosevelt.

This will be the first experience in public office for the 68-year-old Chicagoan, who succeeds to the post made vacant by the death of Robert Herrick last winter. Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, characterized the appointment as "an excellent choice."

Lovett is a graduate of Harvard University, where he taught English up to the time he joined the faculty of University of Chicago in 1893. He is the author of several books on history of literature, two novels and a play. He was editor of the Dial magazine in 1919 and formerly served on the editorial board of The New Republic.

District Student Honored at College

Elizabeth Earll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Earll, of 5045 Reno road northwest, recently was appointed circulation manager of next years' Swarthmore College yearbook, the 1940 Halcyon. A sophomore at Swarthmore, Miss Earll is an honor student in psychology, an active member of the French Club, the Little Theater Club and the Outing Club.

Johnstown Gaining Favor as Derby Nears

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, May 4.—Out here all is forgiven in the case of Joe Kuhel. The fellow, in fact, is something of an idol among South Side fans who last season were bemoaning the deal which brought the alim Slav to the White Sox in exchange for Big Zeke Bonura.

POVICH

There was a deep suspicion among White Sox fans that Manager Jimmy Dykes was sadly bilked on that one. Why, Kuhel was a joke hitter and somebody was wrong, too, about his fielding. It wasn't much good, not much better than the clumsy Bonura's. Bonura, at least could hit. The .287 batting average compiled by Kuhel last season was not very inspiring.

As the season ended, Kuhel wasn't even the regular White Sox first baseman. A young fellow named Merv Conners, up from the Texas League, had taken over the job. Connors broke in with a splurge. In his first game, against the Philadelphia Athletics, he swatted three home runs into the stands and narrowly missed a fourth when his drive to centerfield hit the wall two feet from the top.

Well, Connors isn't with the White Sox, any more, and Kuhel is just about the hottest individual on the club, if not in the entire American League. Down South this spring, Manager Jimmy Dykes discovered that Connors wasn't a big league hitter and, furthermore, that his fielding average wasn't much better than his batting mark. And Kuhel was starting to show a hot hand.

Joe Was Big Noise at Spring Training Camp

Joe was the big noise of the Sox's training trip with his long distance blows, and his fancy fielding. And when the opening bell rang in the pennant race, he carried on. He hit a homer in the first game and has been slugging the ball ever since. At this writing, he's batting a cool .440, and leading all of the White Sox at the plate. In 13 games he's made 25 hits and in no game has he been shut out.

What's more, Kuhel has been driving in runs for the White Sox, a habit which was not his last year or the year before. He's been driving in runs despite the fact that he's batting in second place, which is not supposed to be conducive to run production, but Kuhel's long-range clouting has offset this disadvantage.

For the first time in 14 months, Jimmy Dykes is smiling at the trade that brought Kuhel to the White Sox in exchange for Bonura. Dykes was long suffering throughout last season when Kuhel was proving a tremendous dud, but Kuhel is now justifying that trade for Mr. Dykes.

"Kuhel's beginning to act like the ball player I thought he was when I made that Bonura deal," he was saying today. "He's still the best fielder in the league and I don't have those heart-breaks I had when Big Zeke was mussing up the works for us out there at first base. Kuhel's a master around that bag."

"By the way," added Dykes with a wink, "how about that $25,000 Griff got from the Giants for Bonura? Is it covering much ground around first base for the Washington club?"

"Old Fox" Did Right by Himself

The little round man was inferring, of course, that Griffith had taken a licking on the Bonura-Kuhel deal, but on that point Dykes must be misinformed. Because Griffith not only has the $25,000 he received for Bonura, but he has also a rookie first baseman who is doing very well indeed for the Nats. With Jimmy Wasdell playing the bag, the Nats are vastly better off than they were with the clumsy Bonura out there.

The gallant comeback of Wasdell, has for Griffith, a highly gratifying and face-saving sequel to the Kuhel-Bonura deal. Griffith would have looked very bad, indeed, save for the fact that Wasdell has come through so nobly for him.

Less than a week ago, Wasdell was regarded by the Nats' management as something of a washout. He wouldn't do, was the feeling and both Griffith and Harris were scouring the minor leagues for a first baseman who could hit a little bit. If one had been available, Wasdell would now be in the minors. But the Nats' bosses could obtain nobody, and in desperation they gave Wasdell another chance.

Little Jimmy Is Coming Around

And, in desperation, Wasdell began to make good. One of the first things he did was to break up a ball game at Boston with a tenth inning hit. In his next start, against Oral Hildebrand, he rapped out four consecutive hits in Yankee Stadium. The other day in St. Louis he slammed out a triple that produced the winning runs in the ninth. And yesterday he slapped a single into leftfield that again drove in the winning run.

The hits he has been collecting have renewed Wasdell's confidence and he is now standing up to the plate nicely, deliberately hitting to left field and hitting regularly. At this writing his average is a very respectable .444 for his 27 times at bat. And it was harsh scoring that charged him with four errors in that game at St. Louis the other day. In most cities, he would have been charged with only one at the most. Little Jimmy has been doing very well for himself.

Louisville Is 'Sold' On Star; Derby Field Uncertain; Town Filling Up

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Louisville, Ky., May 4.—The beautiful but reacherous Ohio River is sliding along peacefully enough tonight but this city, awakening to the Kentucky Derby, finds itself caught in another flood—the Johnstown flood of 1939. This flood didn't start when a dam broke but darned if it didn't start. Little more than an "old mill stream" last year, this new catastrophe began to reach flood stage in New York last month. Then it thundered across the Appalachian Mountains to back right up to Louisville's door. Tonight, this turf mecca finds itself up to its waist in Johnstown money.

One catches the Johnstown spray before the train loses motion at the station. The pullman porter brushes you down and asks, "Ain't it Johnstown, boss." It's Johnstown with the taxi driver. It's Johnstown with the hotel porter. It's Johnstown with the hotel clerk. It's Johnstown with the elevator boy.

In fact, everything isn't Jake down here any more, everything is Johnstown.

It looks mighty like Johnstown, at 4 to 5, when the horses march on the track some 48 hours hence. It looks mighty like Johnstown with nine opponents in the battle for gold and turf glory.

While the racing writers and track officials could not read the minds of the horse owners and horse trainers, the best available slant pointed to a line-up something like this:

Horse	Jockey	Odds
*Johnstown	Stout	4-5
Challedon	Seabo	4-1
Technician	Adams	6-1
El Chico	Wall	12-1

The owners of Yale O'Nine and Steel Heels were undecided whether they would drop an entry into the box tomorrow morning. Nationals Score Two Runs During Spurt; Chase Routed in Sixth Inning

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, May 4.—A gang of tough Southside characters well known to Chicago authorities as the White So tripped the Nats today, relieving the Washington Club of (1) its winning streak, (2) third place and, (3) a 4-3 ball game. Wielding a blunt instrument looking suspiciously like a baseball bat, a party identified as Ken Silvestri, a Chicago boy who only recently joined up with the White Sox gang, knocked the Nats groggy in the second inning. He slugged a home run into the leftfield bleachers with a pal on base.

The Nats never recovered from that blow and Ken Chase was charged with Washington's first defeat in its last six games. As late as the eighth and ninth innings, the Nats were still struggling, getting the tying run on base twice, but the White Sox made away with the ball game.

Both sides made nine hits during the struggle. The White Sox, however, received a potent help from a pair of native Chicago boys—Rookie Catcher Silvestri who was reared only a stone's throw from Comiskey Park, and Pitcher John Rigney, a graduate of Chicago's sandlots.

While the White Sox were knocking Chase loose from their four runs in the second and third inings, Rigney for seven innings was holding the Nats to five hits and a single run. They knocked him from the box in the eighth, but Fireman Clint Brown smothered the two-run conflagration in that inning.

The Nats' only run of the first seven innings was a gift affair—the gift of Rigney himself. After George Case had made the first of his three hits, a single to left that opened the game, and progressed to third by easy stages, Rigney committed a balk that scored him. Case induced the balk by faking a dash for the plate, causing Rigney to interrupt his windup, whereupon Umpire Rue waved Case home. Chase was not wild today, but two of the three walks he issued in his six innings of toil were disastrous. It was a walk to McNair that put a White Sox on base in the second inning, a bit before young Silvestri crashed a home run into the left field seats, to set the Sox up in a 2-to-1 lead.

Marvin Starts Trouble

And it was a walk to Marvin Owen that started the trouble for Chase in the third inning. Because, with one out, the Sox drilled out three consecutive singles—by Walker, Appling and McNair—to produce two more runs and a 4-to-1 lead. McNair's single, which drove in the second run of the inning, was a tainted affair—a teasing roller down the third-base line that Lewis could not reach.

Thereafter Chase and Pete Appleton, who relieved him in the seventh, held the White Sox to no runs at all, and only five hits, but the Nats were making little headway against Rigney until the eighth. He threw six scoreless innings at 'em.

In the eighth the Nats crashed through with two runs after Case led off with a hot single off Owens glove. Lewis forced Case at second, but Sammy West drew a walk and Taft Wright singled to center to score Lewis and move West to third. Myer hit into a force play at second, West scoring, and Travis moved the tying run to third with a single to center. But Jimmy Wasdell left it there with a grounder to Appling.

With one out in the ninth Jake Early installed some hope among the Nats, going to the bat as a pinch hitter for Appleton he celebrated his big league debut by rapping a single to left but with great consideration for the White Sox, Case and Lewis hoisted a pair of game-ending flies to the outfield.

Bosox Rally And Win' 7-6; Homers Help

Ted Williams, Young Outfielder, Clouts Pair for Circuit

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 4.—The Boston Red Sox came from behind to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 7 to 6, today with the aid of two homers by Ted Williams, rookie outfielder, which drove in five runs.

Williams' four-baggers came in successive times at bat, the first in the fourth with Manager Joe Cronin no base. In the fifth inning Jimmy Foxx and Cronin both were ahead of Williams when he sent the ball out of the stadium. The Tigers were leading 4 to 2 at the start of the fifth, when the Sox tallied five runs altogether.

Yanks Defeat Tribe, Feller In 10th, 10-6

Joe Gordon's Single Breaks Bob's Streak; His Wildness Costly

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 4.—Bobby Feller's old fault, wildness, caught up with him again today and gave the New York Yankees a 10-to-6 ten-inning victory over the Cleveland Indians, although the so-called slugging champions were outhit 11-14 for the second straight day.

The Yankees drew an even dozen passes to first and ten of them came from Feller, who had won three games and lost none prior to today's catastrophe. Four walks, one single and an error supplied New York its four winning runs in the extra chapter.

Mungo Saves Game as Cubs Blast Cletus Poffenberger in 1st

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 4.—Bombing Big Bill Lee off the mound in the third inning, the Brooklyn Dodgers handed the Chicago Cubs their third ssraight set back, 6 to 2, today.

Cletus Elwood Poffenberger, former American League playboy, started for Brooklyn and gave up two singles and two walks, forcing in a run, before Van Mungo could be rushed to the box in the first frame.

Thereafter Mungo held the Cubs scoreless until Stan Hack homered in the ninth. Although old Ira Hutchinson finished the final inning, Mungo got credit for his first victory of the season.

The Dodgers scored one in the first without a a hit, two in each of the next two innings. Mungo accounted for the first pair by singling behind Tony Lazzeri and Manager Leo Durocher, while Gene Moore tripled to bring home the second pair. This ended Lee's trick and two succeeding pitchers could not save him from his third loss.

Lazzeri hit his second homer of the season for Brooklyn's final run in the fifth.

Home Runs by Tobin And Rozzo Also Aid In Club's Victory

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 4.—Two home runs by Jim Tobin and John Rizzo plus the effective one-hit relief pitching of Russ Bauers gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-to-4 win over the Phillies today for their third straight triumph.

Tobin blasted his circuit clout with two on in the second inning. Rizzo led off in the third with his roundtripper, sending big Max Butcher to the showers.

British Look On As Chinese Play For Their Title

Bournemouth, England, May 4.—The men's singles of the British hard court tennis championships developed into an all-China final today.

First to reach to the final round was Kho Sin Kie, the defending champion, who defeated D. McPhail of Scotland, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3. Then in a great match, W. C. Choy, former Cambridge Blue, beat C. E. Hare, England's second ranking player, 0—6, 10—8, 6—1, 9—7.

Three left handers—Peggy Scriven, Margot Lumb and Kay Stammers—with Mrs. R. Ellis, the former Anita Lizana, of Chile, reached the semi-finals of the women's singles.

Mondorff Allows Only 6 Hits; Terp Nine Defeats Indians, 5-2

By Jack Munhall.

Stocky, broad-beamed Pershing Mondorff, who barely earned his Maryland baseball letter as a substitute infielder last season, continued his swift development into a first-class pitcher yesterday as he unwound nine sterling innings against William and Mary and carried the Terps to a well-played 5-2 victory at College Park.

Only three-letter athlete in school, the 5-foot 11-inch junior who place-kicked his way to football fame as a halfback and proved a dependable guard on the basketball court, allowed only six hits—two of them tainted—as Burt Shipley's nine recorded its third straight Southern Conference triumph and its tenth in 14 games this spring.

Effectively mixing a sweeping curve and an alive fast ball, Mondorff retired the Indians in order in the first, second, fifth, and eighth innings and actually deserved a shutout. This honor was denied him, however, by two unearned runs as he won his fourth game in five starts and tied with Earl Springer as Maryland's leading pitcher.

Indians Score

The Indians, who are a poor sixth in the Southern Conference but who were strong enough to dump Navy, 4-1, Wednesday, picked up their first tally in the fourth with the aid of a two-base error by High Keller, Terp leftfielder, and their second and last in the ninth when Bill England, sub rightfielder, dropped an easy fly.

However, all the breaks were not against Maryland. As a matter of fact the Terps earned only two of their five runs. In the fourth Fritz Maisel, sophomore rightfielder, was credited with a two-run homer when his drive to leftfield was mis-

Charley Gelbert Down With Grippe; Will Be Out a Week

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, May 4.—Charley Gelbert, a potent figure in the Nats' line-up since the opening of the season, today was stricken with an attack of grippe, and will be missing from the Washington line-up "for at least a week."

That was the prediction of Chicago doctors, under whose care the veteran infielder was placed when he collapsed suddenly in the Nats' hotel dining room this morning. Tonight, Gelbert's condition was termed "not serious," and his departure had virtually subsided.

Georgetown Outslugs New York U., But Is Beaten, 12 to 7

Hoyas Take Early Lead Over Violets

Extra Base Blows Mark Game; Two Hit Home Runs; Ghecas Out With Injury

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 4.—Held in check by Georgetown's heavy early inning hitting, N. Y. U. rose in the sixth frame to fashion four runs and inflict a 12-to-7 defeat upon the Hoyas in their first game of their annual Northern trip at Ohio Field today.

Georgetown outhit N. Y. U., 11 to 9, in a contest marked by extra-base slugging, but N. Y. U. put together two hits and three walks in a singularly successful combination. The Violets chased Willie Wixted off the mound and treated his successor, Johnny Smith, with scant regard. They extracted the three walks from Smith, the Brooklyn lad, who was charged with the loss. Smith, incidentally, managed to get his fast one working and struck out three men in the inning, but the bases on balls, coupled with an opportune two-bagger over the fence by George Campione, N. Y. U. centerfielder, spelled disaster for the Georgetown cause.

Of the rather outstanding total of ten extra-base hits, four were contributed by Hoya batsmen. Wixted got a two-bagger in the fourth and Jim Durkin, centerfielder, doubled in the seventh. Joe Mahoney got a long triple in the fourth which scored two men, and Lou Ghecas, Georgetown's heavy-hitting second baseman, hit a home run in the second with no one on. The game's other home run was contributed by Alexander (the Great) Campanis, who drove a long one over Durkins' head in the fifth to score two men ahead of him. Ghecas, incidentally, obtained three hits in three trips to the plate before Joe Judge, Georgetown coach, was forced to withdraw him in the fifth inning because of an old foot injury.

Georgetown's two big innings were the first and the third when they garnered three runs in each on four-hit and three-hit efforts. N. Y. U. came back, after trailing 7 to 4, to tie the score in the fifth and went on to win in the sixth.

Wixted struck out seven, Smith two and Kashata two. Smith was charged with the loss, the second in eight starts for Georgetown.

Little Terps Defeat Hoya Freshmen, 9-5

Two Guys Named Mac Spark Maryland Frosh Winning Drive

A couple of guys called "Mac" put the skids under Georgetown's yearlings yesterday as the University of Maryland's Little Terrapins clinched the unofficial freshman baseball championship of the District with a 9-5 uphill victory at the Hilltop Field.

With the Hoyas holding a 5-3 lead in the eighth, McKenzie hit a two-run homer for the Terps, and minutes later, after a walk, and two singles ha dloaded the bases, McHale clinched the Maryland victory by driving in two more runs with a single.

Leo Vannais, former Bethesda Chevy Chase all-around athlete, went the route for Maryland which was winning its second game in two days over District opponents. The Terps outslugged G. W., 12-9, at College Park Wednesday.

The changing of pitchers by Georgetown probably contributed to its loss. Dick Diekelman, who started on the mound for the Hoyas and yielded only 3 hits and 2 in six innings, was lifted in favor of Jim McKay, who proved a great relief to Maryland.

Shoremen Defeat Lynchburg, 4 to 0

Chestertown, Md., May 4 (AP).—Washington College batsmen clubbed out two runs in the second and seventh innings and their hard-working hurlers, Raine and Copple, held the Lynchburg College nine to three hits today as the Shoremen defeated the Virginians, 4 to 0.

Embarrassing Moment at First as Terps Beat W. & M.

Maryland University's pitcher, Pershing Mondorff, is shown sliding safely back into first base in the third inning of their game yesterday with William and Mary. Dancing off first base, Mondorff was almost caught short when the catcher tossed a quick one to First Baseman Joe Menz. The big Maryland pitcher and football star threw all dignity to the winds and went into a slide judged by an Indian gardener, and in the eighth the Terps were presented with another on consecutive errors by William and Mary's shortstop and second baseman.

For three innings the game which, consuming only one hour 25 minutes, was the fastest of the local college season, assumed proportions of a masterful pitching duel between the right-handed Mondorff and the equally orthodox Byrne. William and Mary's bespectacled ace. During that stretch Pershing faced only ten batters and Byrne had yilded only two harmless singles when came his fatal fourth.

The inning was opened with a ringing double to center by Keller, who thereby atoned for his error which had given the Indians a run minutes before. Eddie Johnson went out, first to pitcher, but Clem Chumbris' second straight hit tallied Keller with the tying run.

Then it was that young Maisel, son of the former major league star, cranked up and smote a towering liner to left. Charley Baltimore stood in his tracks, waiting to catch the ball, but at the last minute turned and ran as it sailed far over his head, permitting Chumbris to score from first and Maisel to circle the bases.

Maryland made it 4-1 in the fifth on a walk to Adam Bengoechea, his stolen base and an error by the helpful Baltimore in leftfield. Then, in the eighth, the Terps fashioned their final run after two were out. England drew a walk. Joe Crisafulli sacrificed him to second. Mondorff hit to "Red" Heron at third and England was caught in a run-down at third. Then Charley Beale fumbled Shorty Chumbris' drive to short and Mondorff, who had seached second on England's misfortune, scored.

William and Mary's first run came on a single by Beale, who went all the way to third as Keller let the ball through his legs for a two-base error, and Catcher Al Tirelis' sacrifice fly to left. The Indians' final tally in the ninth was born of Tirelis' triple and Lloyd Cornwell's fly to right, which bounced out of England's glove for an error.

MacPhail Is Elected President of Dodgers

New York, May 4 (AP).—Larry S. MacPhail, executive vice president of the Brooklyn Dodgers since January, 1938, today was elected president of the club.

He will take over the office which has been vacant since the death of Stephen W. McKeever in March last year. Officials of the club pointed out that MacPhail will continue active management of the Dodgers organization under a new contract.

Irish War Veterans Win Over Pirates, 6-1

While the veterans hit the offerings of Piper Manning, pitching for the Pirates, almost at will, the loser's sluggers, Mouldy Milt, Rat Trap, Scarface, could not fathom the pitching of Tarzan Webb, pitching for the veterans.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

(Bob Considine is on a brief vacation. While he is away his column will be written for him by prominent figures in the athletic world. Today's column is written by Christy Walsh, World's Fair sports director.)

Mr. Robert Considine, tired, weary of it all, completely exhausted from the courageous but emaciating task of writing 600 words—more or less—per day for your sport page, is on vacation.

Burdensome is the life of a scribe. Vacations in May, Florida in the winter, luxurious living with the ball clubs in the summer, World Series in October, and Rose Bowl as the year fades out. No wonder so many sport writers topple over in their early '90's. Freedom of the press? Why, Mr. Parker, it's literary slavery!

WALSH

I understand you want 600 words about all the big sport stuff to be pulled off in New York this summer. I'll give you 600 words, Bob, if it prolongs my present breakdown. Let me make this point clear—the World's Fair director of sports is not taking over the Yankee Stadium or the Garden. That rumor probably started in San Francisco to increase Mr. Whalen's daily ticket sale—already thriving, thank you. Frankly, the sport calendar around these parts, from now on until October 31, is little short of colossal—including events staged on the Fair Grounds by the director of sports and those to be put on around the town by such members of this committee as Ed (all-star game) Barrow, Dan (A. A. U.) Ferris, Ed (lawn tennis) Moss, George (golf) Jacobus, Bobby (polo) Strawbridge and many names just as bright and helpful.

Mr. Mike Jacobs, whose entertainment is of the good, old-fashioned Garden variety, is not a member of our sports committee, but if he wants to stage the next Joe Louis quickie inside the perisphere, it might be arranged, with syndicating rights reserved.

Here is a lot of exclusive dope which I secured after five exhausting telephone calls, averaging 3 minutes per call: The Yanks will be host to the annual All-Star baseball game in New York, July 11, and even though the line-ups have not been announced by means of my copyrighted process, I can safely predict that a number of prominent players will participate and both major leagues will be represented.

If the National Women's Swimming Championships go to Jones' Beach, to which they are now pointing, a school of mermaids will soon be splashing along the East coast—in addition to those splashing at Billy Rose's World's Fair pool.

Come late August a bevy of lovely lobbers will serve and lob for the Wightman Cup at Forest Hills, within earshot of the World's Fair carillons. At the same spot, and soothed by the same musical bells, male wielders of the racquet will start swinging in the national championships the first week in September.

Asa Bushnell, in an uncopyrighted statement, envisions a great meet of flying feet when Southern California, Stanford and California hook up in the I. C. 4-A meet at Randalls Island, May 26 and 27. John Woodruff, Pitt's wonder man, will defend his twin laurels—440 and 880.

Bobby Strawbridge, maestro of polo, will engineer the international matches at Westbury's Meadow Brook Club, June 4, 11 and 18, with a great field of American and British 10-goal stars in the saddle.

George Jacobus has moved his golf extravaganza right to the portals of the perisphere and when the first ball sails from the World's fairway at Pomonok on Sunday, July 9, a brigade of celebrities will inaugurate the greatest field of starters in the history of the P. G. A. The winners will come to the World's Fair to receive their championship awards.

This week is the week when baseball comes to the Fair, Manager Bill Terry of the Giants will inaugurate the sandlot school Saturday at 11 a. m. On Sunday, at the same hour, it'll be Gabby Hartnett with several of his Cubs. And when the Yanks return—the idol, Lou Gehrig, whose courage long survived his weary legs, will teach the youngsters. And, like most everything else, baseball is—"free at the fair." The kids are going to love it.

Martinsburg's Trackmen Lose

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 1.—Charles Town High School's track and field team nosed out Martinsburg High here yesterday afternoon, 72 to 69, in a meet preparatory to the sectional track and field affair here Saturday afternoon.

Saturday afternoon, beginning at 1, at least six schools will take part in the sectional meet here, the qualifying meet for the State finals at Morgantown, May 13.

Sure starters are Martinsburg, Wardensville, Charles Town, Bunker Hill, Hedgesville and Romney. Keyser and possibly several other schools are expected to send entries. Harpers Ferry, Shepherdstown and Berkeley Springs will not enter, it is understood, devoting their spring schedule to baseball.

Police Are Busy On Horsenaping Probe at 'Graw

By the Associated Press.

Havre de Grace, Md., May 4.—Harford County police investigated today the horsenaping of Forfend, 3-year-old filly who Guy Owens, a groom, said was taken from her stables after he was knocked unconscious. The filly, owned by John O. Whitlow, was found more than 12 hours later in a nearby unused barn at the Havre de Grace racing plant.

Owens told police he entered Forfend's stable shortly after midnight to give her a drink and was struck from behind. He said he regained consciousness two hours later and found the filly gone.

Terps and Indians Split on Links

Jim Brownell, Terp captain, was the only player of the day under the 80 mark as he defeated W. Murphy, 2 and 1, while in the same foursome Julian Murphy, of the Terps, shared the same fate of his namesake, losing, 2 and 1, to R. Boatright. Maryland won the best ball, 2 and 1.

George DeWitt, high-scoring courts star, defeated Hornsby, of the Indians, while Bill Bryant lost, 4 and 3, to Newton, with the visitors winning the best ball, 2 up.

The Terps will compete in the Western Maryland Invitation Saturday, meet Johns Hopkins, George Washington and Western Maryland next week, and conclude the schedule with the Maryland intercollegiates.

Giants Rally To Beat Cards In Eighth, 6-3

Rookie Salvo Gets First Pitching Victory As Warneke Loses

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 4.—The New York Giants battled from behind today to give Rookie Manny Salvo his first pitching victory of the season and lean Lonnie Warneke, of the St. Louis Cardinals, his first defeat, 6 to 3.

The Cardinals scored all their runs in the first inning when Jimmy Brown tripled and scored on an infield out and Johnny Mize clouted his third home run of the season after Ducky Medwick walked.

Salvo weathered this storm and gave up only four hits in the next eight innings for a total of seven.

Warneke, who had won his only two previous starts on one-hit and four-hit pitching performances, held the Giants to six before he was removed with one out in the eighth, when the Giants' three-run rally broke up the game. However, the Giants had tied the score beforehand.

East Potomac Golfers Scoff At Rock Creek

Meet Laurel, Richmond Team Sunday With Best Players

East Potomac golfers will show just what they think of the strength of the Rock Creek team they meet in the intra-city public links challenge match on Sunday at the downtown course by sending most of their best players to Richmond for a return match with the Laurel municipal golfers.

Only Mel Shorey, host professional, and Manager Tommy Doerer, jr., will stay home to meet Harry Graham's team from the Sixteenth street course among East Potomac's better golfers. Bernie Phillips, Lew Spangler, Jack McCarthy and R. P. Hazelton will round out the team.

Rock Creek will counter with Pro Al rice and city pay-as-you-play champ Andy Oliveri in the top two-some against Shorey and Doerer, while junior muny champ Gail Holmes, Don Sullivan, Tom Cook and George Graham will also play. Jim Gipe, Lefty Phenix, Jim Sweatte and other members of the East Potomac team will go to Richmond for a return match with Laurel, having already snowed the Virginians under by a 20-4 count here.

Rock Creek will be host to a return match later in the season and a victory on Sunday would force Doerer to round up the best possible sextet among the East Potomac players to overshadow his overconfidence for Sunday's match. The side bet is at least $50.

Doerer and Shorey, beaten by Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, and Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase, last Sunday at Anacostia, will seek revenge on their home course Sunday, May 14, in a match at East Potomac.

Only action in the championship flight of the East Potomac spring tournament found George Graham, son of Rock Creek Park Manager Harry Graham, trouncing John Blair by a 6 and 5 margin. First-round macthes must be completed by Sunday night.

Virginia Golfers Win 21st Match, Beating Richmond

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., May 4.—The University of Virginia golf team extended a two-year string of victories today by defeating the University of Richmond, 16½ to 1½. It was the twenty-first consecutive victory for the Cavalier squad.

Lew Oehmig, Virginia ace, shot a 74 for the best round, defeating Copeland, of Richmond).

Summary:

Individuals—Cushman (Va.) defeated Grinnan, 2½ to ½; Middleton (Va.) defeated Anderson, 2½ to ½; Oehmig (Va.) defeated Copeland, 3-0; Leonard (Va.) defeated Leon, 3-0. Foursomes—Cushman-Middleton (Va.) defeated Grinnan-Anderson, 2½ to ½; Oehmig-Leonard (Va.) defeated Copeland-Leon, 3-0.

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing

ACKERMAN

We have it, on pretty good authority, that Robert Malone, of Frederick, Md., snagged a great brown trout in Big Hunting Creek that carried him over four or five pools before it was landed. It measured 22 inches, definitely takes him out of the tyro class.

Helped kabitz from the stream bank while Bill Leetch missed a large brookie seven times in a row, and "Laddie" Clark hung to a big rainbow that really give him a workout. Saw a home tied fly, the like of which has never been seen before, but which we'll never forget, and hope to use—given the right conditions. Saw the "Mickey Finn" fished for the first time. It really had the brookies standing on their heads to take it.

Just in case you didn't read John Alden Knight's story in the April edition of one of the outdoor magazines, the "Mickey Finn" is a bright red and yellow streamer with a silver body that seems to be just about what the doctor would order for any water. We know Ollie Atlas has found it almost impossible to keep it in stock, and understand that is true in almost every other section of the country.

We have Bill Briggs word for it that he took two swell rainbows. We heard in addition that a big one hit his Royal Coachman while he was off balance and, had it not been for a convenient overhanging tree, would have been in a worse predicament than only one bootful of water. He lost the fish; by his estimate, at least 20 inches.

Estel Ayres roamed Fishing Creek and took some nice ones, and they are probably still there for he seldom creels his fish.

In simple words, we are trying to get to you the fact, that in spite of the miserable weather we have had, trout are really raising in fine shape, and on almost any kind of a fly presented; that the season is more than a third gone. That by anyone's law of averages, this week-end should produce some decent fishing. That most of Maryland's streams are as well stocked as they have ever been, and if you don't get out this week-end you aren't any kind of a trout fisherman.

For those whose range is confined, the Potomac is clearing in fine shape, and they are still taking fine strings of white perch in front of Joe Fletchers at New Cut and Canal roads. Soft crabs continue to be the best bait for the large ones weighing around the pound mark, although some have been caught on bloodworms.

The snaggers have taken their place alongside the herring dippers and both have been catching fish, but the going will be far better with a few days of reasonably warm yeather.

No news yet of the first run of striped bass up the river, but it can't be far off. In the meantime, the catfish are taking the hook in fine shape, averaging a little better than two pounds, and showing several in every string, 5 pounds or better.

Capt. Taft Tippett's new boat, the Bay Queen, was given he baptism of fish scales last Sunday in a short trip to the edge of the channel at Point No Point, where a round dozen of big hardheads were picked up. After a "boat-warming" party this Saturday and Sunday, he'll be ready for the season.

The best bet for hardhead fishing this week-end seems to be on the Eastern Shore, so go to any point where the boats run across—Solomons, Ridge, Plum Point or West River.

Spider Hurling Star Meets Terps

The best pitching duel of the college season hereabouts is expected at College Park this afternoon when Porter Vaughn, Richmond's southpaw star whom major league scouts say is the best prospect in the South, meets Maryland's southpaw ace, Earl Springer.

Richmond has lost only onee in 12 games this season and that to Virginia which scored in the ninth to break a 1-1 deadlock.

Springer has recorded four straight victories since being charged with a defeat against Ohio State in Maryland's first game, though he gave up only one unearned run.

Today's game starts at 4 o'clock.

Virginia Favored in 'Big Six' Meet May 13th in Richmond

Generals Are Capable Of Winning

200 Will Compete In City Stadium; V. M. I., Richmond, V. P. I. Enter Teams

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 4.—The State "Big Six" track meet was definitely set today for Richmond's City Stadium on May 13 and officials announced that more than 200 athletes would participate in the assault on track and field records.

The University of Virginia, winner of nine of ten previous State meets and beaten only twice by Old Dominion rivals in the past 20 years, were top-heavy favorites to win the meet.

The Washington and Lee Generals, strong in the running events but lacking dependable field performers, were given an outside chance of upsetting the Cavaliers. The other entries—Virginia Military Institute, William and Mary, Richmond and Virginia Tech—had little hope of wresting team honors from the Cavaliers but each boasts several prospective first-place winners.

Feature performer in the meet will be Virginia's Frank Fuller, a blond hurdle flash who is already being boomed as a likely member of the 1940 American Olympic team.

Young Fuller a North Carolinian, broke into the national track spotlight when he skimmed over the high barriers in 14.5 to win the event in the Penn Relays last week. He also turned in a spectacular exhibition as anchor man on the winning Virginia shuttle relay team at Philadelphia.

Coached by diminutive Archie Hahn, himself a former Olympic ace, Virginia has other first place prospects in McChesney Goodall, winner in both the half and the mile last season; Don Dayton and Jimmy Banta, sprint stars; Ed Lowrence, broad jumper; Ted Sharretts and Bill Perry, high jumpers, and Bobby Preston, pole vaulter.

Events which promise the closest, top-speed action are the dashes, pitting the two Cavalier entries against W. & L.'s Charlie Curl and Richmond's sophomore all-State footballer, Arthur Jones, and the half mile with Goodall running against W. & L.'s Harold "Flash" Harvey, Southern Conference champion.

Strickler is expected to win the shotput, but he will be up against the best field in the history of the meet. At least five of his foes have been beating 44 feet consistently this season, Bill "Red" Echols, a teammate; Lee McLaughlin, Virginia sophomore; Harold McVay and Bill Morrison, Richmond, and Sam Walker, W. & M.

Johnstown's Stock Rises As Race Nears

Haight

Trainer Roy Waldren, who said Mrs. Ethel V. Mars has insisted that her colors be shown.

The most important news in the line-up of probable starters and probable jockeys was the announcement that Jockey Johnny Adams has been engaged to ride Technician, the colt which Herbert M. Woolf hopes will duplicate the triumph of his Lawren last year. Trainer Ben Jones said, "Mr. Woolf is the boss."

Adams, who rode only two winners during the Havre de Grace meeting, replaces Jockey Ira Hanford, who as an apprentice rider, piloted Bold Venture to his Derby victory in 1936. Owner Woolf, it is said, was not satisfied with Hanford's ride on Technician in the Derby trial.

Owners and trainers of horses other than Johnstown, smiled late today when the official weather forecast for this vicinity said "probable showers" for Saturday. The weather man refused to hazzard a guess on just how intense would be these showers. Louisville has had ten days of dry weather and it has been ten years since the Derby was run over a muddy track. In 1929 Clyde Van Dusen slopped his way to victory.

There would be a distinct change to Challendon should the track become muddy. The son of Challenger II is the colt that wintered at our own Benning Track and will carry the colors of W. L. Brann. Challendon has proved his ability to mud it and despite the fact that he was beaten in his only start this year, in the Chesapeake at Havre de Grace, he is fit and ready.

G. W. Freshman Star Gets Traveling Bag

Tommy Simpson, former Washington-Lee High School baseball star, was given a big ovation yesterday by his former teammates when George Washington University freshmen met the high school team in Ballston, Va. Simpson, second baseman for the freshmen, is shown receiving a traveling bag from Ruth Brown, pretty 17-year-old manager of the high school nine, as an expression of good will. Simpson played shortstop four years at Washington-Lee High and last year was voted Virginia's outstanding high school shortstop. He batted .306

G. W. Yearlings Score Six Runs in 7th; Simpson Honored

George Washington University freshmen yesterday scored at will to defeat Washington-Lee High School, 17-3, on the baseball field at Ballston, Va. In a 6-run spree in the seventh, freshmen batters drove Thomas Johnson, Washington-Lee pitcher, from the box.

Tommy Simpson, freshman shortstop, former Washington-Lee player was presented by his one-time team mates with a traveling bag in brief ceremonies before the game. He then led the G. W. batters by getting four hits out of four times at bat. Jack Redinger, freshmen pitcher, gave up seven hits. The freshmen nine will play Anacostia High School today at 3:30 p. m. on the Eastern diamond.

Briarley Beats Training School

Jack Mason, District Training School hurler, fanned 17 members of the Briarley Prep School team yesterday but was touched for 13 hits, and the Prepsters won, 7 to 4, on the losers' diamond in Laurel.

The four Lodge brothers were again the standout performers for Briarley, Lee snaring a pair of doubles and a single and scoring three runs to lead the attack.

Alvin Watkins Hurls As Charlotte Hall Loses to Montgomery

Richard Montgomery High batters solved the offerings of Slaughter, Charlotte Hall hurler, in the fifth inning and defeated the Military School diamonders, 10 to 4, yesterday on the Rockville field.

The visitors had a 3-0 lead off Alvin Watkins in the fourth, but the hosts, led by Bill Hill with a double and two singles, went to work in the next four innings for an easy victory.

Burgee, of the Rocks, and Guyther, of the losers, also banged out three hits, all singles.

Kemp Wicker Pitches Excellent as Mates Win Home Opener

By the Associated Press.

Montreal, May 4.—Manager Burleigh Grimes and his Montreal Royals made their 1939 debut before home fans a thorough success by trouncing the Baltimore Orioles, 8 to 1 today. A crowd of 5,500 attended.

With Left-handed Kemp Wicker pitching a brilliant 4-hit game for his fourth win of the season against no defeats, the Royals pounded Harry Matuzak and Bill Hudson, right-handers, for a dozen blows good for 17 bases, as they included three doubles and a triple. The victory gave Royals sole possession of second place, half a game behind the pace-setting Jersey City Giants.

Don Ross, Montreal third-sacker, paced the attack with three hits, one a double.

Rosey Red Ryan Loses By Body Slams in Third Match of Series

After bouncing Rosy Red Ryan out of the ring twice last night at Turner's Arena, Jack Hader, Kansas "hate man," finished him off with a well-placed kick to the solar plexus and a series of body slams to take the "rubber" match of their feud in 26 minutes.

Hader, who claims to have ill-will toward all his wrestling colleagues, planted a right on Ryan's jaw just before the finish. He appeared in good shape after his heart-rending display of pain last week, when the Golden Terror, masked groan artist, kicked him in the mid-section.

In the semiwind-up, Cliff Olson finished Tom Mahoney in 12 minutes with a back-drop. On the supporting card, Jim Clinstock beat Chief Chewaki in 15 minutes with a flying scissors, Dutch Schultz beat Paddy Mack in 19 minutes with a series of body slams, and George Pencheff beat Ernie Powers in 18 minutes with a body press.

Centerfielder Sam Douglas, hailed as Dixie's colored home run king, will be featured by Price Grier's Charlotte (N. C.) Black Hornets at Griffith Stadium in a doubleheader Sunday at 2 p. m. against Ben Taylor's Washington Royal Giants.

Douglas will be backed by a hard-hitting supporting line-up that includes Rightfielder George Potts, another long-distance walloper, and Second Baseman Graham Johnson, a consistent and timely batsman.

North Carolina day will be observed in honor of the visiting club Sunday and music and other forms of entertainment will precede the games.

Old Dominion Boat Club In 6 Regattas

Alexandria Club Bids for Junior Members, 16 to 21

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., May 4.—In an effort to increase the interest of high school students and local boys' club members in its 1939 rowing program, the Old Dominion Boat Club has revived its special junior membership arrangement for boys between the ages of 16 and 21, it was announced today by club officials. Invitations have been sent to the George Washington High School, and to St. Mary's and Alexandria Boys Clubs.

According to Crew Captain Jack Franklin, efforts will be made to restore rowing to its earlier status as one of the club's major activities, and the most extensive season of the past decade has been mapped out. Local crews will participate in six regattas during the summer months, and if they meet with success in the regularly-scheduled events, a picked crew will be sent to the annual Middle States regatta.

Four quadrangular regattas with members of the Southern Rowing Association are included on the program. The local club will be host to one of the four meets, when crews from the Virginia Boat Club, of Richmond; the Arundel Boat Club, of Baltimore, and the Potomac Boat Club will be invited to compete, while the other three meets will be held at each of the other three clubs.

In addition to the Southern Rowing Association events, Old Dominion will stage its annual home-and-home regatta series with the Potomac Boat Club, when dual meets will be held with the Washington oarsmen.

Nick Colasanto, former Holy Cross University baseball star, has been appointed coach of the Dreadnaught nine, which will replace the St. Mary's Celtics in the Tri-County Baseball League. The Celtics gave up their franchise in favor of playing all games on the road, in competition for the State semi-pro title. The Dreadnaughts will open their league season next Sunday, when they travel to Purcellville to meet the strong Purcellville A. C.

Harpers Ferry Wins Another

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., May 4.—Harpers Ferry High defeated Lincoln (Va.) High, 6-3, on the Ferry diamond yesterday to keep its winning streak for the season intact.

Jacobs, who started on the mound for the Tigers, walked three men in the first frame and Lincoln scored a run on an error. But the first was a big inning for the Ferry also, as they batted completely through the line-up and tallied five of their six runs.

Charles Noland led the Ferry batting attack with a double and a triple. Errors were evenly divided between the two clubs.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

The gayway at the San Francisco fair is that avenue deemed indispensable to events of this kind where joy, etc., is supposed to be unconfined.

RUNYON

Now maybe we have grown a bit blase, but we cannot remember ever getting much of a biff out of spots like this, probably because they are manufactured.

A gayway, by whatever name it may be called, is in essence a synthetic version, vastly diluted, of oldtime sections of American cities like the Bowery, the Barbary Coast, or Market Street. At least that is the spirit from which it springs, which spirit also finds some modified expression in Coney Island and the Atlantic City boardwalk. It is a sideshow and a peepshow.

Any gayway is conventionality's concession to what is supposed to be a public desire and demand for mental relaxation and a little weenty-teentsy bit of sin, or a suggestion thereof, as exemplified nowadays by a flash of flesh. Also any gayway is generally conventionality's concession to commercialism. Conventionality reluctantly recognizes that art alone does not pay.

The San Francisco gayway is no better and no worse than these gayways everywhere. Possibly it would be better from some standpoints if it were worse. That is worse in the sense of being less musclebound. It is just the same old line of monstrosities, snakes, barkers, fortune tellers, weight guessers, cane ringers, and slot games that you find everywhere else.

Miss Sally Rand has a couple of expositions of feminine epidermis, including her "nude ranch," but we did not bother with either one. Somehow those displays no longer intrigue us.

Anyway, Miss Rand was not working with either of her gayway shows. She was working in a night club in San Francisco, unveiling her physical charms behind her bubble to her spell-bound audiences under softer and possibly more adulatory lights than she could have commanded on the gayway.

We had a long talk with Miss Rand one evening. We have always admired this young

Imprudent Takes Pimlico's Masquerader for 7th Victory

Arden Lass Beaten Out; Nosy Third

In Feature Stake All Three Running as An Entry; Backers Paid $2.80 for $2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pimlico Race Track, Md., May 4.—A little filly named Imprudent, who races for Mrs. Ella K. Bryson, of Baltimore, rang up her seventh victory in eight starts here this afternoon as she accounted for the second running of the Masquerader Stakes.

The only black mark against Imprudent's record is in the Bowie Kindergarten Stakes, where she was blocked entering the stretch and failed to finish in the money. Today's victory was her third stakes triumph, as she previously had won the La Fayette Handicap at the Fair Grounds and the Aberdeen Stakes at Havre de Grace.

This afternoon Imprudent set all her own pace, but she was hard ridden to stave off Arden Lass, owned by Jouett Shouse, by three parts of a length. Nosy, from the Bryson barn, was third, a length farther back. Cockerel and Skin Deep completed the small field.

All three of the horses finishing in the money were combined as one entry, of which Joe Serio, jr., is trainer, and with only three betting possibilities, only straight wagering was permitted. The entry paid $2.80 for $2.

Imprudent broke swiftly under Irving Anderson and while Skin Deep gave battle for a brief moment, the favorite soon was in front and stepping along briskly. It remained for Arden Lass to furnish the contention in the stretch, the Shouse color-bearer coming from well out of it to gain second honors.

Camera Didn't Lie—It's a Dead Heat

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

No matter how you look at it, No. 3 is not the winner. The camera angle of the finish of the feature yesterday at Churchill Downs gives the impression that it's all No. 3, Kings Blue, on the rail, with Jockey Kurtsinger up. A study of the official picture of the finish, however, showed Kings Blue and Arabs Arrow, with Jockey Bierman aboard, in a dead heat

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOMKIN, $5.70, $4.00, $3.60; POMPANITA, $3.60, $3.00; BREAKING WAVES, $5.10.

DOMKIN, sent to front soon after break, opened lead while running easily, drew out in stretch to win easily. POMPANITA, off in a tangle, worked way up on extreme outside, but could not threaten winner. BREAKING WAVES was rushed up sharply after a slow beginning and was closest to winner for quarter, but tired thereafter. BRIERLEY made up some ground in stretch.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:46½. Off 2:47. Winner, H. W. Jackson's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROPH, $14.50, $7.20, $5.50; LITTLE DRIFT, $4.40, $3.40; COMBATANT, $13.70.

PROPH broke in front, but was taken in hand soon after break, came between horses while making move, and drew out in stretch to win easily. LITTLE DRIFT was sent to leader at half-mile pole, took brief command between calls, but could not resist winner. COMBATANT, off slowly, trailed field for half, came on inside entering stretch and closed full of run. DARK SUN closed well after being outrun early.

Daily Double, Domkin and Proph, Paid $184.20.

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place same. Went to post 3:15½. Off 3:15½. Winner, W. Wickes' ch. g. (6), by Clarissimus—Vallonia. Trained by J. H. C. Forbes. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:58 3-5. (15 jumps.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VALPULSEAUX, $10.90, $5.70, $4.20; BRIAR BLUE, $7.70, $5.70; CLAQUE, $5.10.

VALPULSEAUX took command after sixth fence, opened nice lead while running easily, fenced well all the way and was in hand at the finish. BRIAR BLUE, outrun for mile, improved position gradually, made bad landing at thirteenth fence, but was easily best of others. CLAQUE made bad landing at fourth fence, but jumped well thereafter. HAPPY JOE fenced poorly all the way. MAY BOY was running well when he lost rider at ninth fence. SAILOR'S KNOT was making move and appeared to be running easily when he lost rider at eighth jump.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:46½. Off 3:47½. Winner, G. L. Stryker's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANYMOR, $52.90, $15.30, $7.60; THE SERF, $3.80, $2.80; BANNER GIRL, $3.90.

MANYMOR, slow to reach best stride, came to extreme outside to make stretch and won going away. THE SERF followed early pace while running easily, moved to lead between calls, and held on well, but was no match for winner. BANNER GIRL, close all the way, moved up menacingly, but tired gradually. MAEWHISK set a good early pace, but stopped.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:16½. Off 4:17. Winner, G. Ring's br. f. (4), by Teddy—Green Girl. Trained by F. D. Watts. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SLATTERN, $7.20, $3.70, $2.70; SAN ANTIOCA, $4.40, $2.90; SUNNY SHORE, $2.90.

SLATTERN, taking command at half-mile pole, opened long lead on turn and was going easy at end. SAN ANTIOCA trailed to the half pole, came to extreme outside for racing room and closed full of run. SUNNY SHORE followed pace for half, reached contention on stretch turn, but tired gradually thereafter. CAREFUL MISS caught tired horses in stretch.

SIXTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Masquerader. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:46. Off 4:47½. Winner, F. K. Bryson's ch. f. (2), by Whiskalong—Rash Promise. Trained by J. Serio, jr. Net value to winner, $2,930; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 0:54 2-5.

†J. Shouse-E. K. Bryson entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IMPRUDENT (entry), $2.80, out, out; ARDEN LASS (entry), out, out; NOSY (entry), out. (No place and show mutuels sold.)

IMPRUDENT, first out of the gate, was kept in front under bustling tactics and was kept to a hard drive through stretch. ARDEN LASS trailed to stretch turn, saved much ground on rail and was running fastest at finish. NOSY was forced to race on outside throughout and finished in middle of track. COCKEREL was used up forcing pace of winner. SKIN DEEP had good early speed and will likely improve.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:16. Off 5:18½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONNIE PLAUT, $39.20, $12.10, $7.30; HELEN'S LAD, $4.30, $3.20; MISS FIX IT, $4.80.

CONNIE PLAUT, slow to reach best stride, came to outside to challenge leaders and just got up under hard drive. HELEN'S LAD improved position while running between horses and fought it out willingly, but could not overtake winner. MISS FIX IT held a brief lead to stretch turn and fired gradually. ANN MOWLEE ran an even race.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:46. Off 5:46½. Winner, W. Elliott's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOUNDING COUNT, $6.70, $3.70, $2.70; MON DOIT, $5.60, $3.60; IN MEMORY, $2.20.

BOUNDING COUNT, taken back after breaking in first flight, came to middle to track in stretch and got up in last stride. MON DOIT moved to leader on stretch turn, took command at eighth pole, fought it out willingly and just failed to last. IN MEMORY was hustled to front going to first turn, held on well when placed to drive, but could not resist top ones. JUSTA FLIGHT, closer than usual to leaders, was blocked entering stretch and closed full of run.

Hypholyta 'Cap Ends in Dead Heat At Jamaica Track

By the Associated Press.

Jamaica Racetrack, N. Y., May 4.—Louis Strube's Rust, a 9-to-10 shot, and A. H. Waterman's Mary Schulz, quoted at 20 to 1, provided one of the most thrilling duels of the season here today when they wound up in a dead heat, the initial one of the meeting, for first money, in the Hypolyta (class "C") Handicap, a mile and 70 yards test for fillies and mares. J. A. Healey's false point finished third, a length behind the pair. The time was 1:43 2-5.

Rust, a 7-year-old mare, carried 120 pounds, while the 4-year-old Mary Schulz toted only 102. With a dead heat, backers of Rust lost money at the rate of 50 cents on a $10 wager. The total transaction, meaning the amount layed and the amount bet, is added and then divided by two to determine the payoff. On a $10 bet, the return would be $9.50.

Dear Al:

Trainer Johnny Loftus reported that Pompoon, until yesterday's defeat in the Gittings Handicap, the favorite for the Dixie next Wednesday, had come out of the race completely sound. Loftus was unable to account for his charge's disappointing showing when he finished fifth behind Heelfly, and expressed the opinion that Pompoon sulked after being slightly bumped at the first turn. Otra, from the barn of the King Ranch, which also owns Ciencia, worked a mile at Belmont Park yesterday in 1:40 and was shipped here today by Trainer Max Hirsch to fill an engagement in the Pimlico Oaks on Saturday. The King Ranch filly was accompanied in her trial by Thanksgiving, Mrs. Parker Corning's good Dixie Handicap candidate. It is possible that Otra and Ciencia will run as an entry in the Oaks, but if the Santa Anita Derby winner is not ready for Saturday's engagement, she will be pointed for the Preakness a week later. Millsdale Stables' Alms is expected to go postward in the Oaks on Saturday, and, if so, will be ridden by Charlie Stevenson. Maurice (Moose) Peters turned down an offer to ride Thanksgiving in the Dixie, and instead will have the mount on Mrs. Edward Friendly's Jacola. Jacola qualified smartly at Jamaica early this week and is considered as a serious threat to the male opposition in the Wednesday feature.

BILL.

First race—Nicky was outclassed when pitted against Rumba Gus but showed clever effort in his winning race at Bowie. Nicely placed in this heat. Mac's Cantor was third to Belle High at Havre, overcoming much interference. He is a speedy colt and should improve with racing. Miss Maker broke tardily last out but won at Bowie. Has chance.

Second race—District has been freshened up after a highly successful campaign in Florida where he won and was second with racers of this type. He is the class of the race and gets the call. James Pal was third to Balapin at Havre and was a winner at Bowie. He is in form and appears next best. Graeme Cracker is not outmatched and should show.

Third race—Good Chance and Rioter are the two top horses in this affair and are evenly matched. Good Chance beat the latter over this course last fall and should repeat his performance. Rioter has shown a tendency to quit in late races. Buck Langhorne won opening day but didn't beat much. Should be next in line.

Fourth race—Post Luck makes his first start of the season but performed well with such as El Chico, Soldierette and Exploded last year. He is in smart hands and should be fit. Lady Solace needed her last race at Havre and should be ready to run back to her good form of last year. Of Course is in form and is dangerous.

Fifth race—Onisac and Sally Pass By, forming the Sears-Metcalf entry, have both won on the local circuit and have a slight edge over this juvenile field. Unico won his last in Florida but didn't beat much. May be the one to beat. Briar Bird, a first time starter, is well bred and in smart hands.

Sixth race—Sure Miss whipped most of the contenders in this heat at Havre and figures to repeat her performance today. Her recent races have shown speed and consistency and she is well placed in this. Suzanne Peck gets a good rating after her close second to Sun Plume and should prove best of the others. Phara Belle for the show award.

Seventh race—Bit by Bit was strongly supported when he raced with better grade platers Tuesday. He broke badly in that event but finished well. May be the right one. New Deal gets high figures and is dropping down for this and will be the one to beat. Sachem should show improvement over last effort.

Eighth race—Kinross, making his first appearance of the season, closed well at Havre to finish third to Dissembler. That effort will have him on edge and he should win. Golden Vein won at Havre and was third to Gorse opening day. Will be the one to beat. Miss Poune won her last but moves up the claiming scale.

Best bet—Nicky.

Horses to Watch At Pimlico

CLINGENDAAL—This Bedwell trained horse has always been partial to this course and has been going great guns in morning trials.

DOMKIN—Two-year-old son of Ladkin made his first appearance under colors a winning one. Will beat better ones in future.

COMBATANT—Closed well in spring, will be better suited over a distance of ground.

LADY ROMA—Had no chance when knocked against fence in last start, will do better with racing luck.

SKIN DEEP—Was beaten only two lengths by Imprudent, will beat good ones before long.

Treasury Has 42.7% Interest In Loan Banks

Compares With an Investment of 71.6% In March, 1937

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A brisk upturn in the investments of thrift and home-financing institutions in the 12 Federal Home Loan banks which serve them as sources of home-mortgage credit is revealed in data compiled by the Comptroller's office of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

This report shows that as of March 31, 1939, the United States Treasury's $125,000,000 investment in the banks was 42.7 per cent of their entire assets as compared with 71.6 per cent on the same date two years ago. Or, stated inversely, the banks and their members now own 57.3 per cent of their assets as compared with 28.4 per cent two years ago.

Rules of the Federal Home Loan banks require their members to invest in them 1 per cent of the aggregate unpaid principal of their home mortgage loans, or $500 as a minimum. Membership in the bank system stood at 3,950 on March 31, having increased by a net of six members during that month. Twelve new members were taken into the system while five savings and loan associations were merged with others and one withdrew.

In addition to the Treasury's investment of approximately $125,000,000 in the stock of the 12 Federal Home Loan banks, they have four other sources of revenue: Investments in them by member savings and loan associations, deposits by members, earnings on their invested capital and proceeds from the sale of debentures.

Gatley Anniversary

This week H. Prescott Gatley marked his fifth anniversary as president of National Savings & Trust Co., being elected to that position in May, 1934, and succeeding William D. Hoover, elected chairman of the board of directors at that time and still holding office. The company has continued to progress steadily under Mr. Gatley's executive direction.

Washington Stock Exchange

Dollar volume in sales on Washington Stock Exchange in March was slightly lower than that in February, 1939, and in March, 1938, the Securities and Exchange Commission announces. Volume of all sales in March, 1939, totaled $58,018, as compared with $62,667 during the preceding month and $88,515 in March a year ago.

Stock sales during March carried a dollar value of $40,669 on a turnover of 925 shares, contrasted with $46,568 and a 1,035-share turnover during the previous month. In March, 1938, stock sales aggregated $76,624 and involved 2,369 shares, while in March, 1937, sales amounted to $131,498 and a 1,380-share turnover.

Value of bond sales on the local exchange in March was $17,349, in advance of the $16,099 total for February and $11,894, figure for March last year. Bond sales, however, were under 1937, when they amounted to $61,560.

Dollar value of sales on all registered securities exchanges in March, 1939, totaled $1,238,181,521, a gain of 58.5 per cent over the value of sales in February and a rise of 21 per cent over March, 1938. Stock sales, including rights and warrants, had a value of $1,058,741,242, an advance of 61.7 per cent from February. Bond sales were valued at $179,440,055, an increase of 41.6 per cent above February.

Total sales of stock, including rights and warrants, in March were 40,384,224 shares, an increase of 55 per cent over the February total. Total principal amount of bonds sold was $245,123,350, a gain of 46.9 per cent over February.

Wholesalers Volume Gains

Dollar sales of 3,042 wholesalers from all parts of the United States increased 4.8 per cent in March over the month last year, it is announced by the Bureau of the Census. Sales of these wholesalers in March, with three more calendar days to list, were up 19.4 per cent over February, and March sales of the reporting units were $210,188,000 in value.

Sales of 2,320 firms for the first quarter of 1939 reveal a gain of 4.9 per cent above the first three months of 1938. First quarter sales of these wholesalers aggregated $506,793,000. Twenty-five of the 30 classifications showed increases for the first quarter of this year over the corresponding period last year. Ratio of collections on accounts receivable for 2,541 wholesalers reporting was slightly over March, 1938, last month being the fifth consecutive one during which the collection rate exceeded that of the corresponding month of the preceding year.

D. C. Securities Booklet

"Facts and Figures on Washington Securities," a 74-page booklet published by Y. E. Booker & Co., investment firm, appeared in the financial district yesterday, this being the thirteenth yearly publication. The book gives pertinent facts regarding over 80 Washington corporations and is the most complete publication the firm has yet put out.

The booklet also contains information of special value relating to bank stocks in the Capital. The data covers par value, divident records, capital, surplus, undivided profits, reserves, deposits, resources and other information on all the banks in the city. Included are the officers and directors of all these institutions and many others.

Myles H. Quail, associated with Y. E. Booker & Co. and a member of the Washington Stock Exchange, is credited with compiling the facts contained in the booklet.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association, from incomplete car loading reports from the railroads, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended April 29 as approximately 3,650,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week in 1938 was 5,017,000 tons and in 1937, was 6,915,000 tons. The report of the National Bituminous Coal Commission shows production of 2,115,000 tons for the week ended April 15, and 2,887,000 for the week ended April 22, 1939.

Unemployment Decreased 2.6% During March

New York, May 4.—National unemployment, which had increased from December through February, turned downward and declined 2.6 per cent in March, as compared with the preceding month, according to the latest estimates made by the statistical division of the conference board.

At the same time, employment increased .8 per cent, rising from a total of 43,656,000 workers in February to 43,991,000 in March—a return to about the level of employment in September, 1938. This rise in the number of those gainfully employed was largely the result of a 3.8 per cent increase in agricultural employment. Employment in manufacturing rose .5 per cent, with 52,000 added to factory pay rolls.

Construction employment declined by 3.9 per cent from February to March, as 85,000 fewer workers were reported, and the reasons were slackened activity in public highway and non-residential construction. In trade, wholesale and retail, employment increased, but this gain was largely offset by declines in the number of workers engaged in distribution and finance. Public service enterprises hired more workers in March, but there were decreases in domestic, personal and professional service employment. The total employment in all nonagricultural industries actually tapered off in March, as compared with February, with 61,000 fewer on the pay rolls.

Three Loan Companies Announce Dividends

Announcements of the payment to stockholders of dividends on both common and preferred stock by three low rate industrial loan companies affiliated with Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., of this city, was announced yesterday by Clifton M. Eisele, president of the parent company.

Stockholders in the City Industrial Savings and Loan Co., Hyattsville, Md., will receive 7 per cent on preferred stock on May 10, and the Southeastern Discount Corporation of Washington will pay 7 per cent on preferred and 5 cents a share on common the same date. Directors of the Bethesda Industrial Savings and Loan Co. have voted a dividend, payable May 17, of 7 per cent on preferred stock and 10 cents a share on common.

Douglas Employs More Plane Workers

Los Angeles, May 4.—Nearly 20 employes were required for each airplane built in the Douglas Aircraft factory here during the last five years compared with only seven men for each plane built in the previous half decade, the company's annual report shows.

Since 1922, 2,326 planes have been built, of which four-fifths were military.

Wheat Prices Higher With Crop Reports

Heavier British Demand Also Aids Advance

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 4.—Pessimistic crop reports from dry districts of the winter wheat belt and an enlarged British demand for wheat resulted in higher prices today.

With short covering accelerating the upturn after receipt of unfavorable comment from crop observers in various sections of the belt, prices shot up as much as 1⅝ cents at one stage. July wheat, which equaled its previous seasonal high of 74, was in the lead. Other contracts came within fractions of the ten-month highs established Monday.

Scattered rains were reported in both the winter and spring wheat belts but no general moisture relief materialized in sections where most needed. Some districts have had no material rains the last two weeks or more and various reports indicated growing concern over crop conditions, with farmers plowing wheat fields in some localities.

Wheat closed ½ to 1¼ cents higher than yesterday; July, 73½@73⅝; September, 73⅝@73¼; corn, ¼ to ⅝ up; July, 50¾@50⅞; September, 51¾@51⅞; oats, ¾ to 1 cent higher; rye, ⅜ to ⅝ up; lard 7 to 10 higher.

Japan to Cease Importing U. S. Wood Pulp by 1942

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department told American wood pulp producers yesterday they faced complete loss of their markets in Japan.

A department statement said the Japanese government had decided to eliminate all wood pulp imports by 1942, and that straw, begasse and soya bean substitutes were being developed.

Last year the United States shipped $5,600,000 of bleached sulphite wood pulp to Japan. In 1937 American exports were twice that.

The department also made public a report from the American consulate in Kobe saying there was a great shortage of iron and steel which was hindering shipbuilding. To bolster the supply, the Japanese have started melting up mailboxes, manhole covers, ash trays, lamp posts and other iron and steel articles.

Bache & Co. Prepares Aviation Report

New York, May 4.—J. S. Bache & Co. have prepared a revised comprehensive study of the domestic aviation industry in the light of recent developments which affect it, among the most important of which is the first allotment of U. S. Government orders under the domestic aviation expansion program.

Over the intermediate term this will mean a total expenditure of $250,000,000, according to the study, and, in addition, foreign governments may be expected to place further orders over and above the foreign backlog which now totals about $100,000,000, delivery of most of which must be made before the end of 1939.

Stock Market Loses Most of Its Early Gains With Unfavorable News From Europe; Bonds Generally Up

New York, May 4.—A new high for the move was scored by the stock market today but much of the early progress was lost before the close on selling that reflected a return of nervousness over the European situation. Attention will be centered on the speech today by Polish Foreign Minister Joseph Beck, for it may contain an answer to the question whether there will be a Polish-Nazi clash over Danzig.

Following on the overnight displacement of Maxim Litvinoff, veteran Soviet minister of foreign affairs, there was enough to bring the European muddle back as a factor in shaping prices on our domestic markets.

Market Holds Gain

The stock market held a small part of its gain, the composite average being up 0.11 point and trading was fairly active, amounting to 663,380 shares. Virtually all of the leading European currencies were slightly lower but there were no further engagements of gold. Cotton closed without much change, futures ranging from a point lower to 2 points higher. Wheat was strong, enlarged British demand and pessimistic crop reports running the market up 1⅝ cents a bushel at one time. The close was plus ½ to 1¼ cents.

Metals, aviations and steels were called upon to absorb some pressure but gains predominated among the rails and manufacturing issues. Accessories tended to move higher, the most active stock of the day being United States Rubber, which was up a small fraction, and Electric Auto Lite was well cared for. Motors, Chrysler and Packard, lost fractions, while Steel and Bethlehem were down ¾ and 1⅛ respectively. North American and Glenn Martin led the aviations to moderately lower levels.

Action Is Favorable

The action of the market is regarded by technicians as favorable, particularly to the last two days, and financial opinion is that comparatively few hurdles remain in the way of a more convincing forward move. One of the most important is taxes, and if there could be some constructive relief along this line, which seems well within the realm of probability, there would be an immediate reflection in prices. Commodity prices have been displaying more firmness.

There are some signs of weakening in the coal strike, although this situation took a bad turn for New Yorkers today when it became necessary to curtail transportation services. First quarter earning statements now being made public have in general been better than was expected.

Stocks in Strong Hands

As far as the stock market itself is concerned, representative firms report that a major part of the forced liquidation has been absorbed and that stocks are in relatively stronger hands than they were a month ago.

Bond Trading Higher

Modest buying of listed bonds gave the market an upward push today, with foreign dollar issues showing larger gains than domestic bonds, owing to what seems like improvement in the European situation. All sections of the market engaged in the upswing, however, as the thin market makes possible fairly sizable movements on little business. Nine issues of Treasury bonds advanced to fresh highs. Turnover in all issues amounted to $5,250,000.

Scandinavian bonds rallied in the foreign division, with Copenhagen obligations leading advance. French and Belgian bonds did well, and a little interest was taken in Italians. The British Empire issues of Australia and Canada showed fractional gains. German bonds were dull in the European default group and others likewise hardly moved. Latin American default obligations sprang into activity and showed good gains.

Rail Issues Improve

Medium priced railroad bonds were in mild request, and small advances resulted. Some of the borderline and default bonds were better than the relatively well-rated obligations. Alleghany Corporation bonds were irregular and utility holding issues merely marked time. Convertible issues attracted some attention. In the local traction group the main movements were downward, but amusement bonds were good. Other special groups did little.

Treasury Loans Up

Advances in long term United States Treasury bonds ranged from 1-32 to 8-32 point, which sufficed to produce nine all-time highs. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations likewise were better, owing to the confident manner in which the Treasury is proceeding to refinance the $325,000,000 maturity of home owners bonds.

Getty Challenges Tidewater Control In Proxy Battle

New York, May 4 (AP).—J. Paul Getty, California financier who has fought for years for control of the huge Tidewater Associated Oil Co., asserted today through counsel that his interests controlled 26 per cent of the common stock of the company and that certain other large holdings are "illegal and invalid and against the public policy and laws of the United States."

Specifically, he challenged the voting at the annual meeting today of the common stock held by the Boissevain brothers, of Amsterdam, and the shares of Tidewater registered in the name of the South Penn Oil Co.

The Getty holdings were described as follows: 1,010,233 shares owned by the Mission Corporation, 270,100 shares owned by Pacific Western Oil Corporation and 372,454 shares owned by George F. Getty, Inc. Tidewater has 6,369,175 shares of common stock outstanding.

Despite the Getty objections to the proxy line-up, all directors were re-elected.

Business Index At Year's Low

New York, May 4 (AP). — Time magazine's index of business conditions declined last week to 91.4 the lowest point since June 8, 1938. The drop from 92.0 the previous week was largely the result of curtailed spending in financial centers which reached the lowest level in more than a year.

The index, which reflects conditions likely to affect the volume of business, is now lower than a year ago, when it stood at 91.9.

Getty Challenges Tidewater Control In Proxy Battle

New York, May 4 (AP).—J. Paul Getty, California financier who has fought for years for control of the huge Tidewater Associated Oil Co., asserted today through counsel that his interests controlled 26 per cent of the common stock of the company and that certain other large holdings are "illegal and invalid and against the public policy and laws of the United States."

Specifically, he challenged the voting at the annual meeting today of the common stock held by the Boissevain brothers, of Amsterdam, and the shares of Tidewater registered in the name of the South Penn Oil Co.

The Getty holdings were described as follows: 1,010,233 shares owned by the Mission Corporation, 270,100 shares owned by Pacific Western Oil Corporation and 372,454 shares owned by George F. Getty, Inc. Tidewater has 6,369,175 shares of common stock outstanding.

Despite the Getty objections to the proxy line-up, all directors were re-elected.

Freight Traffic Gains 7.9% Over Year Ago

Total of 586,015 Cars Is 4.9% Over Last Week

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended April 29 totaled 586,015 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 42,926 cars or 7.9 per cent above the corresponding week in 1938 but a decrease of 191,812 cars or 24.7 per cent below the same week in 1937.

Loading of revenue freight for the week of April 29 was an increase of 27,309 cars or 4.9 per cent above the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 257,135 cars, an increase of 9,257 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 29,556 above the corresponding week in 1938.

Loading of merchandise less than carload freight totaled 153,424 cars, an increase of 1,392 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 3,467 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Coal loadings amounted to 75,601 cars, an increase of 7,852 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 870 cars below the corresponding week in 1938.

Grain Loadings Increase

Grain and grain products loading totaled 35,231 cars, an increase of 4,472 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 107 cars below the corresponding week in 1938. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week of April 29 totaled 22,156 cars, an increase of 3,756 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 226 cars below the corresponding week in 1938.

Livestock loading amounted to 14,106 cars, an increase of 797 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 1,476 cars above the corresponding week in 1938. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week of April 29, totaled 11,081 cars, an increase of 532 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 1,655 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Forest products totaled 29,231 cars, an increase of 775 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 2,663 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Coke loading amounted to 5,379 cars, a decrease of 313 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 1,779 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

All districts, except the Pocahontas, reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1938. All districts reported decreases compared with the corresponding week in 1937.

Building Awards Gain 59.5 Per Cent, Survey Reports

New York, May 4.—Building contracts awarded in the field of private enterprise in March showed an increase of 49.7 per cent over the February volume, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. This increase was slightly greater than the usual seasonal expansion. The average increase during the last 13 years from February to March was 47.1 per cent.

In addition, building contracts in March were 41.6 per cent larger than a year ago, with residential building showing the greatest increase. Residential contracts were 47.6 per cent greater than in March last year, while nonresidential contracts showed a gain of 32.8 per cent. For the first quarter, total building contracts were 59.5 per cent larger than in the same period last year.

The building industry in March was encouraged by the fact that rents held firm at the February level, although fundamental conditions warranted a further recession. Construction costs also remained unchanged, and costs, consequently, represented no greater obstacle to building activity than they have during the past year. The depressing effect of this variation in costs and rents was partly offset by the fact that building activity was confined to a considerable extent to the field of small homes. This made it possible to quote attractive prices on homes despite the relatively high levels of building material prices and wage rates.

Brokers' Loans Dip $45,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $502,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $45,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $515,000,000.

Woolworth Sales Up For First 4 Months

New York, May 4 (AP).—F. W. Woolworth Co. reported today sales in April amounted to $25,919,274, compared with $25,926,439 in the comparable month last year.

For the four months sales aggregated $89,361,878, a gain of 2.49 per cent over $87,192,523 in those months in 1938.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, May 4.—The stock market tried a mild rally with fair success after early weakness today. British funds managed to close with small gains and transatlantics crossed to the plus side. Some demand appeared for domestic rails and the more speculative industrials attracted buyers. Mining shares were uneven.

Paris—The bourse closed today with small price changes on both side. Rentes dropped 85 to 150 centimes and Bank of France dipped 25 francs. Royal Dutch inched forward, while Suez Canal declined slightly.

Liverpool—Nearby cotton contracts continued scarce today. Although some foreign selling took place in distant months, the final range was unchanged to 10 points up. General buying of wheat futures—based on news of purchases of Australian wheat by the United Kingdom and high cash wheat offerings—left closing prices ⅛ to ⅛ penny higher.

Cotton Futures Irregularly Lower In Light Trading

New York, May 4 (AP).—Cotton futures shifted restlessly today as traders scanned the news for fresh factors to pin market action on.

Despite the light turnover, however, the price undertone was steady. Closing quotations were 2 points up to 1 down.

A leading spot interest sold over 5,000 bales of October but this was well taken by brokers believed to be buying against sales in Liverpool. Numerous price fixing orders from trade interests balanced liquidation from Bombay and straddle selling. Liquidation in the spot month continued slow, which ring observers termed a direct reflection of the scarcity of certain grades of cotton in the South.

Engineering Awards 102% Over Year Ago

New York, May 4 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday were $73,267,000, up 52 per cent from last week and 102 per cent from the corresponding week a year ago, Engineering News Record reported today.

Substantially increased public construction was responsible for the rise in total awards, private construction dropping below the previous week and the same week last year. Awards for year to date total $1,115,104,000, a gain 26 per cent over a year ago.

C. B. S. Votes Dividend

Bank Clearings Jump 11.5% Over Last Year

Monthly Payments Help to Increase Total of 21 Cities

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 4.—Dividend and interest payments and other settlements incident to the first-of-the-month period helped to expand the volume of bank clearings for the current week sharply above the amount for the previous week. The total also exceeded that for the corresponding 1938 period, following the year-to-year drop—the second so far this year—recorded a week ago.

Clearings for 21 leading cities for the week ended May 3, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., totaled $6,077,022,000; an increase of 11.5 per cent, compared with the $5,449,587,000 for the same 1938 week.

Clearings for the latest week were $1

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Washington, Thursday, May 4, 7:30 p. m.

Forecast for the District of Columbia—Fair and somewhat warmer Friday; Saturday mostly cloudy; Sunday showers; light variable winds, mostly southwest Friday, becoming moderate southerly Saturday.

For Maryland and Virginia—Fair and somewhat warmer Friday; Saturday mostly cloudy, cooler on the coast; Sunday showers.

Conditions

The disturbance that was central some distance south of Nantucket, Mass., Wednesday night has continued to move slowly northeastward over the ocean, being centered tonight about 200 miles south of Halifax, Nova Scotia. S. S. California, 29.44 inches. A minor disturbance is advancing eastward over southwestern Quebec and eastern Ontario. Ottawa, Ontario, 29.24 inches. Pressure is low and falling from southeastern Alaska southeastward to the western Canadian provinces and thence southward over the Plateau and Rocky Mountain regions and the Plains States. Fort Peck, Mont., 29.58 inches, and Salt Lake City, Utah, 29.60 inches. High pressure prevails over most other sections with centers as follows: S. S. Laconia, about 400 miles east of Newfoundland, 30.30 inches; Charleston, S. C., and Northhead, Wash., 30.16 inches, and Moosonee, Ontario, 30.10 inches. During the last 24 hours rains have occurred along the North Atlantic Coast and showers have occurred in the upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys, the southern Plains States and the Rocky Mountain region. Some scattered showers occurred, also in Washington and western Oregon. Higher temperatures have occurred generally over the eastern half of the United States except for colder in the northern lake region. Colder weather has also overspread the North Pacific States and the northern Plateau region.

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, May 5, 1939. Notice is hereby given that under authority granted in Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, authorizing the closing of streets, roads, highways and alleys in the District of Columbia, and in accordance with the provisions of an item authorizing changes in the permanent system of highways contained in D. C. Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, (Public Act No. 435, 62nd Congress) approved March 4, 1913, as amended by an act approved April 30, 1926, (Public Act No. 158, 69th Congress), the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the Board Room of said Commissioners in the District Building ON THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1939, AT 10 O'CLOCK A. M., to interested property owners to determine as to any property rights which may be affected, or as to the equity, justice or advisability of closing the street and alley area, and concerning the proposed changes in the permanent system of highways, all in the District of Columbia, and described as follows: 1. Closing West Virginia Avenue northeasterly from the intersection of New York Avenue and Montana Avenue, N.E.; and providing for a dedication of land for the widening of Queens Chapel Road between Bladensburg Road and Bryant Street, N.E. 2. Closing part of 24th Street immediately north of N Street, N.W., and closing the public alley 20 feet wide in Square 35 extending north from the alley running east and west in said square; and providing for a transfer to the District of Columbia for the widening of the alley running east and west in said square to 16 feet, and for the extension of 23rd Street northerly from its present northern terminus north of N Street, N.W., to the northerly line extended of the said proposed 16-ft. alley in said square. 3. Closing Calvert Street between 41st and 42nd Streets, N.W.; and providing for a dedication of land for the extension of 40th Place and 41st Street between Benton and Calvert Streets, N.W., for the extension of W Street from its present western terminus west of 40th Street to 42nd Street, N.W., and for additional street and alley area in this section. 4. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways in the Northeast Section, providing for the elimination of 18th Street between the southerly line of Webster Street and the northwesterly line of Michigan Avenue, as shown on said plan; and providing for a readjustment of said plan at Webster Street and Michigan Avenue as proposed in accordance with said plan. 6. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways affecting property in the Northwest Section lying north of Calvert Street and west of the easterly line of Adams Mill Road. Maps showing the street and alley area proposed to be closed and the additional land proposed to be acquired, and maps showing the proposed changes in the permanent system of highways, are on file in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, Room 405, District Building (same being known as Maps 2211, 2212, 2213, 2214, 2215 and 2216), and may be examined by interested parties during business hours prior to the hearing. Said maps will also be displayed at the hearing, and the Commissioners will consider any suggestions or protests concerning the proposed changes and the proposed street and alley closings, as shown on abovementioned maps. Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The Olympic, open to all nations, races and creeds, is sponsored by the American Contract Bridge League. The World Bridge Olympic Committee is composed of internationally known experts, including Ely Culbertson, Josephine Culbertson, P. Hal Sims, Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz, E. A. Azarian, Oswald Jacoby, Walter Malowan, Alfred P. Steinwold, John C. Stablein and Frank K. Perkins.

Sixteen of the 20 hands are prepared by the experts; the other four are "mystery" hands dealt by Grover Whalen, president of the New York World's Fair Corporation.

Not all bridge minds are agreed that the Olympic, though it affords a lot of fun, proves much. Robert K. Clifton, Philadelphia authority, gives his opinion as follows:

"They call it a test of bridge skill, which it may or may not be. How can they tell, for instance, if you arrived at the proper contract by bidding it well or blundering into it? And who can decide whether you made your contract by the prescribed Chinese end play of just because Mrs. McAwful threw away the high club?

"Here's what I mean. You reach an obvious game contract, dummy goes down and everything looks hotsy-totsy. But wait. This isn't a regular bridge game; it's an Olympic! Your finesses will lose, your suits won't break and one opponent will hold all the trumps. Therefore, if you can, and will, and the other players dont' get too impatient, you figue it all out and play it accordingly. Very interesting, of course; but is it bridge?

'And don't forget those four blank cartridges—the nonproblem hands. Be sure you don't look for trouble that doesn't exist. Think how horrible it would be to expect a wacky distribution, play it accordingly and then find, when it is too late, that the hand wasn't a whale, after all; it was a Whalen!

For all his talk, we rather suspect that R. K. Clifton is a confirmed Olympic player.

None of the four "mystery" hands of the Olympic could offer a more mysterious result than the one offered by M. G. for today's discussion.

Bad bidding was unjustly rewarded and the two guilty players, through a favorable lead, stole a grand slam.

Here is what M. G. says:

"My partner attempted to grab the bid, which annoyed me, so that I did some grabbing in return, and made it. Had the hand been bid well, the lead probably would have been hearts and we would have gone down had we reached a slam; so I suppose it proves that bad bidding gets a reward sometimes."

The hand and the bidding are given in today's box.

West, fortunately for declarer, led a spade. It was taken by the king. Two spades were ruffed high, trumps drawn and declarer played the club ace, then entered dummy and discarded his losing cards on North's spades. He trumped one heart in dummy.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

THE deadline for entries in The Post-A. F. G. E. "Beauty With Brains" contest is Friday midnight. It will not be extended.

Entries may be sent in by mail, but the postmark must indicate that these were mailed before Friday midnight. To avoid any confusion, it would be desirable for the candidates to call in person at The Post and declare themselves in the contest.

So the campaign to find the feminine Federal employe with a lovely face and enough brains draws to its close, after creating a great deal of interest in the agencies and departments here. What's in the offing for the winner is worth the thought of many potential winners.

She will go to New York to be the center of attention on Government Employe's Day at the World's Fair. She will be wined and dined. She possibly will want to carry along with her The Post's silver loving cup, which will go to her because she typifies that most desirable combination in any working girl—a pretty face and substantial gray matter.

There are hundreds of girls in the service here with these two required qualities—beauty and brains. The word now is for them to come to The Post and enter the contest, before Friday, midnight.

All-expense trips to the fair also will be afforded by the A. F. G. E. to the semi-finalist and the four runners-up. Girls may come in personally to announce their candidacies, or their friends may send in their names. In any event, the sponsors are anticipating a last-minute rush of entries—and don't forget the deadline—Friday, midnight.

TWO motion pictures, "For the People" and "Winter Sun and Summer Sea," will be shown at the monthly meeting of the National Association of Retired Federal Employes, to be held at 2 p. m. Saturday in room 43, National Museum, Tenth and Constitution avenue northwest.

SENATOR Ellender's special committee investigating alleged civil service favoritism will be at rest certainly through this coming week. The Committee on Education and Labor is tying up the Louisiana Senator's time, and he sees no chance of release next week. As soon as he finds a couple of free days he will start the ball rolling again—more than likely in a continuation of the General Accounting Office cases.

THAT problem of where to park an automobile at the Agriculture Department is engaging attention of the U. F. W. A. It is out to discover "what policies are followed by chiefs of the various bureaus in allocating the parking spaces under their control." That is as far as the union has gone; but there have been some informal charges that the chiefs let out the spaces to their stenographers and secretaries while old and time-honored employes have to park their cars near the Potomac River and hoof it over to the building. Officially, it is said that the spaces, numbering about 685, are allotted to bureaus in proportion to the number of employes and the space which each bureau occupies. Each bureau chief is responsible for assignment of the individual parking spaces.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't believe there's any such thing as a person who ain't vain. We've all got a little vanity stored in us somewhere no matter how slouchy and ignorant we may appear on the surface.

Even my Uncle Slug, that's my drinkin' uncle, has some pride in his appearance—he always brushes himself off when he gets up out of the gutter.

But some folks overdo their vanity. I saw them makin' a picture out in Hollywood the other day, and a famous movie actress, who was supposed to play the part of a scrub woman in the first part of her picture, was sittin' on the set just cryin' her eyes out. I said to the director, "Is she cryin' 'cause she has to play the part of a scrub woman?"

And the director says, "No, it ain't that. She's cryin' because I won't let her play the part of a scrub woman until she takes off at least three pounds of her jewelry."

Harlequins Modernize Bard's "Coriolanus"

A modernized version of Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" will be presented by the Harlequins, Catholic University dramatic society, at 8:30 p. m. today and tomorrow in the Music Building at the university. Players will wear modern dress in the portrayal, the fifth time the drama will have been presented in this country.

To Play Work Songs

Original recordings of the songs of migratory workers will be played by Margaret Valient at 8:30 tonight at the Book Shop, 916 Seventeenth street northwest. John Fisher, head of the Farm Security Administration information service, will preside at the meeting.

Her Majesty the Queen:

King's Death, Resulting Events Marked Most Momentous Year

Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother Mary and other guests watched the ceremony of the King's guard trooping to the colors, but Princess Elizabeth seems more concerned with the dog she is holding

By Lady Cynthia Asquith.

Chapter XXIII

With so many homes always wide open to receive them, very little time was left free for going abroad, and since her return from the Australian tour Queen Elizabeth has been out of Great Britain on only five occasions.

In 1929 she and King George went to Norway to attend the wedding of Prince Olaf and Princess Martha of Sweden, at Oslo, where the gleaming pillars of ice that lined the streets enchanted Queen Elizabeth. On their way to Norway they paid a short unofficial visit to Berlin.

The next year, unaccompanied by his wife, King George attended the wedding at Rome of the Crown Prince Humbert, of Italy, Prince of Piedmont, to Princess Marie Jose, of Belgium. In 1931 they both paid an official visit to the great Colonial Exhibition in Paris. Here they were welcomed by large and enthusiastic crowds, and Marshall Lyautey acted as their guide over the exhibition, to which they paid two long visits.

Traveled By Air

Queen Elizabeth's next visit to the continent was when in 1935, for the first time in her life, she traveled by air, flying with her husband to Brussels for the "British Week," and attending a state ball at which she danced with the King of the Belgians.

Then in 1938 King George and Queen Elizabeth again visited Paris.

Thus, fully occupied with work, entertaining and the bringing up of their children, the years passed by with no indication of what the whirligig of time held in store for this happy family.

There seemed no reason to suppose that fate was to cut short the husband and wife's enjoyment of the semiprivacy of their lives as Duke and Duchess of York, and it looked as though their two little daughters would be allowed to grow in the comparative seclusion of the "palace with a number and without a name," as 145 Piccadilly has been called.

As unexpectant as he was undesirous of any change in his career, the future King continued to discharge whatever duties devolved upon him. During the serious illness of George V he was appointed one of the six Councilors of State, and in 1929, again deputizing for his father, he presided, as has already been told, at Edinburgh as Lord High Commissioner of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Duke Represented King

Owing no doubt partly to the Scottish birth of his wife, he had come to be regarded in a special way as the deputy of the King in Scotland, and in 1935—a very dull year for both of them—he was chosen to represent his father officially at the Scottish celebrations of the Silver Jubilee.

This close connection with Edinburgh has always been kept up, and only about a week before his accession to the throne he was there again, this time to be installed Grand Master Mason of Scotland, while Queen Elizabeth was given the freedom of the city.

During the last four years there have been many royal family events involving ceremonials and pageantry, and on some occasions, notably at the weddings of their uncles, the Duke of Kent and the Duke of Gloucester, and at the Silver Jubilee, the two little Princesses have been allowed to grace processions. Seated side by side in the state carriage with their backs to the horses, smiling and waving to the delighted crowd, they clearly delighted in all the tumult and the shouting.

The year 1936, during the course of which three Kings occupied the throne of England, was one of the most momentous in the whole history of the royal family.

Three Kings in One Year

Four times the Kings-of-Arms, the Heralds and the Pursuivants of the College of Arms proclaimed to the people the "royal wish and pleasure of the King"—first for the accession of King Edward, then for the date of his coronation, and then in turn for the accession and the coronation of his successor.

And all this within a year of the day when the body of George V was borne through the hushed streets of his capital, and the Cross of the Imperial Crown fell off from the coffin as it passed on its way to the lying-in-state at St. Stephen's Hall, where, in the middle of the night, the reigning King and the future King mounted guard over the dead King. And Prince Henry and Prince George stood with their brothers. Each at one corner of the catafalque, with their heads bowed and arms reversed, the four sons paid their last homage to their father and their King.

The death of their much-loved grandfather, King George V, brought the first sorrow into Princess Elizabeth's and Princess Margaret Rose's bright lives.

Less than a year later followed the bewildering news of their uncle's abdication, and, then, in a few weeks these two little girls were again driven through acclaiming crowds, this time to see their father and mother crowned King and Queen of the greatest Empire the world has ever known.
